The last regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held the evening of January 15. There was but a small attendance as compared with other meetings.

The subject of the evening was the flower show question. A red-hot argument, to use the president's expression, followed the committee's report. The pros and cons were about equally divided and nothing definite was done.

It was decided to hold a special meeting at the club room on the evening of January 21, to settle the question of having a show.

Various Notes.

The writer called at the home of the club's president, E. A. Scribner, and found that worthy gentleman laid up with the grippe. Friday night, January 17, was the first time since being in business that Mr. Scribner had to trust some one else to look after the greenhouses. Mrs. Scribner has also been in the powerful grasp of the grippe for over a week.

Thomas F. Browne, of Greenfield, is sending in some fine White Enchantress. These are bringing good prices and are in big demand. H. S.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—H. T. Potter will exhibit a variegated carnation at the Washington convention of the Carnation Society. It is said to be a seedling of Lawson and Queen.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—Burton B. Crane is using a night light in his lettuce house with success and would like to hear from those who have used a night light in radish growing, as to the benefit, or otherwise, apparent in the crop.

State Society Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the State Florists' Association, held at the Commercial Club January 15, it was unanimously decided to extend an invitation to the Carnation Society to hold its convention in this city in 1909. There was a good attendance present, both from the city and state, and if the society sees fit to accept the invitation, a banner attendance and a good time generally is assured. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, J. S. Stuart, of Anderson; first vice-president, H. Junge; second vice-president, Chas. Knopf, of Richmond; secretary, A. F. J. Baur; treasurer, Homer Wiegand.

The B., K. & B. Floral Co., of Richmond, made a fine exhibit with its new carnations Sarah Hill and Lawson-Enchantress, both of which made a very favorable impression on all. Mr. Barick, of Seymour, had some very good Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress. Baur & Smith set up a vase of May.

The out-of-town members present were Messrs. Hill, Knopf and Evans, of Richmond; Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson; W. W. Coles and W. A. Bitler, of Kokomo; Geo. Moore, of Rushville; M. A. Barick, of Seymour, and C. S. Barnaby, of Columbus.

The Richmond florists invited the Indianapolis push to visit them sometime in February, and we will all be there, with thanks. S.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Business continues to be good, but mostly funeral work. We have had several good jobs, with smaller ones now and then, to keep us busy all the week. Plant trade is not as good as it might be.

One day last week I picked about a dozen dandelion blooms in my yard; but now we are having cold weather, with the sun nice and bright, bringing us good stock. Roses, carnations, hyacinths, narcissi, valley and daffodils are in fine shape and bring good prices.

W. C. Johnson was a visitor last week.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There has been a decided improvement in the movement of all kinds of cut flowers, which means a good, clean market.

Roses are a little short in supply, but carnations are coming in quite heavily and have been well cleaned up. Tulips, narcissi, Romans and valley have all been moving better than before. There has been a heavy call for double violets, as well as for both callas and Harrisii.

Various Notes.

John Kirchner, of Quincy avenue and East Sixty-seventh street, has a fine house of Boston ferns in pots, which will be just right for spring trade. Quantities of bulb stock are grown here, the Romans and tulips being exceptionally good. Mr. Kirchner may well be proud of the good condition of the place.

Frank Smith, of Smith & Fetters, has been called to the east, where his sister has been critically ill.

F. W. Griffin has added a fine collection of oil and water color paintings in flowers, which give his store a very artistic appearance.

Smith & Fetters had a beautiful window of decorated Lorraine begonias last week.

Knoble Bros. report a marked improvement in trade last week.

George Neubert has been sending in a fine cut of stevia.

Paul Kunze, of Rice avenue, has had some good hunting lately, having shot two foxes at Bedford.

The J. M. Gasser Co. has been showing some fine window displays the last few days.

Visitors: Mr. Schwake, representing Charles Meyer. B.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—A quantity of household supplies was stolen from Theodore Smith's buggy recently, while the vehicle was standing in front of a store. Mr. Smith reported the matter first to a patrolman and then went to police headquarters.

ORCHIDS JUST TO HAND: Cattleya Trianæ, C. labiata, C. Mossiæ, C. Schrœderæ, C. Gaskelliana, C. Specciosissima, C. Citrina, C. Intermedia; Laelia anceps, L. albida, L. autumnalis, L. majalis; Epidendrum Vittellinum majus, E. Cooperianum; Oncidium Crispum, O. varicosum, O. Cavendishianum, O. Luridum; Odontoglossum citrosmum.

The New Seedling CANNA — W. E. COTTRELL

In color it is a beautiful dark salmon pink, slightly flecked with crimson. Flower is large and of much substance, with large rounding petals slightly recurved. It blooms early and continuously, producing large trusses of bloom carried about 12 inches above the foliage, which is dark green with very broad, heavy leaves edged with bronze. This is one of the most rapid and vigorous growers we know of, and a grand bedding plant. Height, 4 feet. It was on exhibition at Jamestown Exposition, where we were awarded a Diploma and Silver Medal. We have accumulated a large stock of this grand new Canna before offering it, and by so doing we are enabled to offer it at 25c each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

We also grow large quantities of all of the standards and a long list of the novelties, over 200 varieties in all. If you have never bought of us, ask for our quotations; or better still, send us a trial order. Our stock and prices are right. We also grow Kudzu Vines in quantity.

Good plants and good packing produce pleasant results.

Roswell, N. M., Jan. 7, 1908.

Mr. B. S. Bassett,
Loomis, Cal.

Dear Sir: Carnations arrived this A. M. They were all in fine condition, although this was the fifth day on the road. The lot ordered just before Christmas is growing fine. I did not lose a single plant of the lot. Your mode of packing is far superior to the air-tight boxes.

Wishing you a prosperous year, I am,
Yours truly, T. A. Gettys.

The above is the usual verdict.

Greenhouse Heating.

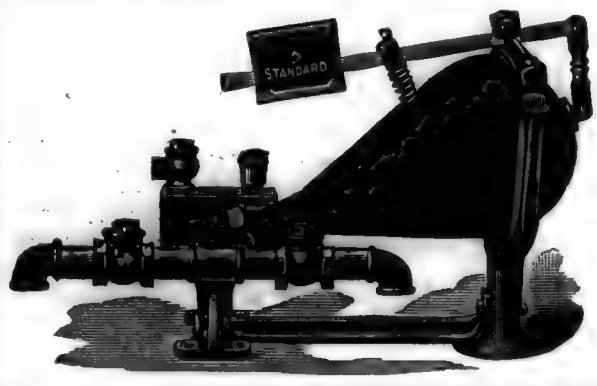
CAPACITY OF BOILER.

What extent of glass can be cared for, here in Connecticut, by a tubular boiler fifteen feet long, four feet in diameter, and containing forty-four tubes three inches in diameter? The boiler was tested at seventy-five pounds before being removed to this place. Also what extent of glass will the boiler carry using it as a water boiler? The grate is five feet long and forty-four inches wide. The temperature desired is 60 degrees in zero weather. A. H. D.

The boiler in question will care for about 4,000 square feet of radiation, which should be sufficient for about 18,000 square feet of glass at 60 degrees, or five houses 20x100, heated by hot water. If used on a steam basis it will do considerably more—about 24,000 square feet, or seven houses 20x100.

L. C. C.

PIPING FOR EXTENDED HOUSES.



I have four houses, each 17x100, with sides three feet high. I have a 3-inch flow and seven 2-inch returns in each house. I wish to make the houses 150 feet long this year. Will the 3-inch flow continued be sufficient to heat the houses to 45 degrees in zero weather, in this New Jersey climate? If not, what changes are necessary? I would like to use all the old pipe. W. C. P.

The 3-inch flow will be large enough to supply the 150-foot houses on a 45-degree basis. I believe, however, that it will be better to install nine instead of seven 2-inch returns, even in your locality, unless you are growing violets or lettuce, which would not be injured by a few degrees of cold in severe weather.

L. C. C.

STEAM FROM DISTANT BOILER.

I should like your opinion on some piping I have in view, as our place is a little differently situated from most plants. I think Mr. Scott's idea (by the way, the "Florists' Manual" is well worth $50 a copy to beginners, or any one else, in fact, instead of $5), of carrying, say, fifty pounds of steam on the boiler and reducing to two or five pounds, by the use of a controlling valve, is the only correct idea in point of efficiency.

The Standard Steam Trap

is acknowledged the best for the florist because it is durable, and does its work without trouble and annoyance, saving its cost by the economy in coal bills.

E. HIPPARD, Youngstown, Ohio

Mention The Review when you write.

We have an industry that requires seventy or eighty pounds of steam through the day and part of the night. Across an unused street, we also have an acre and a half of ground, on which we expect to put up some glass, and to which we also expect to move the houses we already have. We wish to run a steam line under the street from the boiler to the houses directly opposite, which will be a little below the level of the boiler. It will be easy to pipe the houses, which are on a little slope, but the trouble will be the condensation, which cannot be very well returned to the boiler, as it would be almost too long a lift for a pump. What would you consider the best plan, and how could we keep the boiler supplied with water when there might not be a fireman around for two or three hours at a time, or longer during the night, to start the injector?

How long could a boiler be left, generally speaking, with fifty pounds of steam, before it would fall below five pounds' pressure, provided the boiler is properly proportioned to the plant to be heated, and a good grade of soft coal is used? Would it not be hard to get the far end of the pipes in the heating coil as hot as the end near the steam supply? H. C. S.

It is a simple matter to heat the greenhouses from a high pressure plant, but I doubt the economy of running the boilers at high pressure merely for heating purposes.

It is difficult to estimate the loss of water from the boiler while the steam pressure is diminishing through waste from the heating plant. Unless there is a decided difference between the level of the boiler and that of the greenhouses, and if the piping in the greenhouses can be installed in the customary way, so as to return the water of condensation near the point where the feed pipe enters the houses, then the installation of a hot well and a return steam trap should carry practically all the water back to the boiler, so that there would be little danger from loss of water. Just how long a boiler under these conditions will hold steam I cannot say, but should think that with the fires properly banked it should not fall below five pounds in two to three hours. This will depend, however, upon the amount of radiation to be supplied. By the addition of a diaphragm valve the drafts could be automatically controlled, so as to place the plant on an independent basis for a much longer time.

NEW ORLEANS.

Various Notes.

Thursday night, January 16, a cold wave passed over New Orleans, fresh enough to keep many florists from attending the monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, and there was no quorum.

Owing, no doubt, to a steady cold winter, business in plants is dull. Cut flowers are in good demand, bulb stock being disposed of as fast as in good shape. The field roses went dormant and will not show many flowers for about two months.

R. Eichling, with U. J. Virgin, has had callas in full bloom for some time. He grows them in pots and finds them doing better than in the ground. His Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are grown outside in frames protected by glass. He cuts Paper Whites with stems twelve to eighteen inches long, about twelve florets to the spray. They are certainly as nice as can be grown and stronger than when forced in flats. He uses only cold storage valley and, with good pips, he is exceptionally successful. U. J. Virgin grows an immense quantity of bulbs to supply his store. For the next month, until Mardi gras, the demand for bulb stock will be large. A larger business than before is being anticipated this year.

James A. Newsham has a flower of Cypripedium villosum. It is not found in many collections of orchids and is rare. The outline of the flower is odd. At his place he says that his house of callas is in perfect bloom.

Frank Brocker, head gardener at the City park, is busy moving his plants to the new greenhouse. It will be the best equipped house around here in every respect. The boiler is a Henderson and the piping is so arranged that it can be regulated to send more or less heat into different parts of the house. The propagating house is unusually large, as a large number of bedding plants must be grown. A quantity of hotbed sashes also are used. M. M. L.

LINDENWOLD, N. J.—S. E. & H. D. Moore say that new properties are steadily being developed in this vicinity and they look forward to a better business in 1908 than they had last year.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O.—At the greenhouses of the Lake Newell Floral Co. one of the interesting sights is a growth of fine mushrooms surrounding a bed of sweet peas. The soil provided for the sweet peas seems to be well suited for the production of a healthy crop of mushrooms.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION

The American Carnation Society Holds Its Seventeenth Annual Meeting and Exhibition.

President, M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, Mass.
Vice-president, A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.
Secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.
Treasurer, Fred E. Dorner, Lafayette, Ind.

NEXT MEETING PLACE, INDIANAPOLIS, IND., JANUARY, 1909.

With an exhibition which for uniform high quality of stock and for number of novelties has never been surpassed and seldom equaled in its seventeen years of activity, the American Carnation Society held its annual convention and display of cut blooms at Washington, D. C., this week. The national capital is an ideal convention city, with its many points of interest to add to the attendance and its large hotel capacity to provide for the comfort of the visitors, and the number of carnation growers present was up to the best previous records, although the western representation was not large. Many old-timers were absent, but the result of last year's excursion to Canada was shown in an increased delegation from the Dominion, under the pilotage of John H. Dunlop, who has been a "regular" for many years.

The interest in the business sessions was good and the joint sessions with the American Breeders' Association added to the fidelity with which the members discharged their duty to the society. But while the papers were closely listened to and the discussions alive with good points, it was the display in the lower hall that held the chief interest and repaid the closest scrutiny. Aside from the points gained in intimate exchange of views between the members, which many consider the best part of the annual gathering of carnation enthusiasts, the opportunity to compare the novelties with the best varieties in commerce constitutes the main attraction of the meetings.

The novelties shown this year were not only more numerous than usual, but the quality showed that the improvement of the carnation has by no means reached an end; in fact, it looks as though it is now progressing with greater celerity than ever. Alma Ward, the splendid white of the Cottage Gardens Co., which received the S. A. F. silver medal at Toronto, captured the premier award, the gold medal, which was not awarded to any variety last year. Mr. Ward also had another fine thing in Mrs. C. W. Ward, pink. Of the varieties going out this year almost all were creditably shown and some were in grand shape, while the vicissitudes of travel had left its mark on others. Afterglow was fine. The Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., staged Apple Blossom, Climax and Wanoka, all in good shape. Splendor came from Stevenson Bros., Maryland growers. J. D. Cockcroft had Georgia, Harvard and others. Jensen & Dekema had a vase of Defiance in good shape considering its long journey. The B., K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., had Sarah Hill, Lawson-Enchantress, and Mrs. Charles Knopf in good form. Creole Beauty, from Ward, is a fine crimson. Andrew Carnegie, by the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., won first on its entry, and this firm, by the way, did wonderfully well on all its exhibits, considering that they left home Sunday to be judged Tuesday afternoon. H. W. Field staged Gov. Seelye and No. 100, white. Joseph Heacock also had a No. 100 seedling, but his was like Rose-pink Enchantress. M. Tierney put up a fine vase of Mrs. Robt. Hartshorne, red, and John Reimels also had a good one in this color, No. 52. Toreador, by H. Weber & Sons Co., was one of the striking vases. T. J. McClintock had two whites and a pink and there were good exhibits of Viola Sinclair, pink; Snowflake, white; Flavius, yellow; Ruby, pink, and several others of which only a limited quantity was shown. To give an idea of how some of the general classes filled, there were twelve entries in the class for fifty of the Rose-pink Enchantress, Welcome and Winsor color.

The society elects its judges and the three are W. N. Rudd, Wm. Nicholson and Wm. Scott, but Mr. Scott is ill and Eugene Dailledouze took his place. Although all was ready at the appointed hour, thanks to the energy displayed by the hospitable Washingtonians in perfecting arrangements, the task of judging was so gr at that Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten and S. J. Reuter were selected to help out by covering classes A and B. The task was performed to the complete satisfaction of all, the hall being closed only two hours.

The Opening Session.

The first business session was called to order at 8 p. m. Tuesday, January 28, in the hall above the exhibition, by Peter Bisset, president of the Washington Florists' Club, who, after speaking a few words of welcome for the trade in Washington, introduced Commissioner McFarland, whose job in the District corresponds to the mayoralty in other cities. He has the typical mayor's gift of felicitous oratory, but said he need not offer the keys of the city, as most mayors do, for it is considered that every American citizen has the same interest in the capital city as has the resident there, and feels equally at home. He spoke of last year's meeting having been at Toronto and referred to the evidence that the Carnation Society is American in fact as well as in name. He told of William McKinley's love for the carnation and referred with feeling to the coincidence that he was welcoming an organization of other lovers of the divine flower upon the eve of McKinley's birthday anniversary, a day always generally observed in Washington.

Chairman Bisset introduced F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., to respond and he, too, paid tribute to McKinley's memory, speaking also of the impetus given the carnation by the martyred President's favor. He said there is no north, no south, no east, no west, and no dividing line between Canada and the United States in things horticultural.

J. H. Dunlop, who presided last year, was introduced to speak for Canada. He spoke of the interest Toronto took in the visit of the society in 1907 and of the value the exhibition had been to the trade. He also pointed out the coincidence that at Boston in 1890 the S. A. F. voted to meet the next year at Toronto and went thence to Washington, just as the Carnation Society did in 1906.

Mr. Bisset then turned the gavel over to President Fred H. Lemon, who read his annual address, as follows:

President's Address.

It has been the custom for a number of years for the president to share in extending a welcome to the members of the American Carnation Society. Today the seventeenth president has the privilege and honor of sharing in the expression of thanks and appreciation for the hospitable reception and cordial welcome extended by the convention city.

It must be remembered at this time that the real work of preparation for this convention has been done by our most worthy vice-president, Peter Bisset, and his able assistants in Washington. Allow me to express at this time my personal appreciation of the unfailing courtesy and the untiring zeal and activity of the vice-president, which, together with the efficient services of the secretary, made possible this most successful exhibition and convention.

The Society's Certificate.

Reference has frequently been made during the last few years to the subject of the society's certificate; it is a pleasure to refer to the eminently sensible and correct settlement of the controversy at the convention in Toronto last year. The remarks on the subject by our honored member, W. N. Rudd, contain the best exposition of the aims and province of the American Carnation Society to be found in all the society's literature. It is indeed true, as stated in those remarks, that "the certificate is nothing except an opinion of the quality of the flower shown at the exhibition. The commercial value of carnations must be shown in other ways; and it is beyond the ability of this society, beyond its province, to attempt to say whether or not a certain carnation shall prove a profitable investment to the buyer." I wish at this time to most emphatically endorse this position in relation to new varieties and to urge the society to encourage in every way possible the production of new kinds, and especially the exhibiting of new things at our annual shows.

Value of Society's Endorsement.

There has been a decided inclination, during the past few years, to belittle the value of the showing made by a carnation at the American Carnation Society exhibition. Opinions of this kind have been expressed by many prominent members and have even crept into a number of addresses by our past presidents. I desire to especially emphasize my opinion that any variety which can win the American Carnation Society medal, or obtain first place in one of our open to all classes, must possess many points of exceptional merit. The fact of its winning is prima facie evidence, and is incontrovertible, for the judgment is the expressed belief of at least two, and more often three, of the leading experts of the country, that such variety has produced blooms superior to any others of its class. The trade at large, and particularly members of this society, should accept this at its full value; that is to say, they should recognize such action as coming from the highest tribunal and as being the best opinion obtainable in the United States on the subject. The idea that the American Carnation Society does thereby guarantee such variety to be a profitable one to grow commercially is a false position and should be avoided in the future. The society as a body can possess only the prescience of its integral parts, its individual members, and what man among us can unfailingly predict a carnation's future, even after studying the variety from all vantage points?

The production of fine blooms is a prime requisite and with this alone should the society concern itself, leaving prophecies as to the probable future of a variety to individual judgment.

Just as long as I remain a practical grower of carnations I shall consider the grant of a certificate or medal by the American Carnation Society as the highest recommendation possible and amply sufficient proof of merit to justify a thorough test and earnest effort to grow the variety as well as it has been grown by the raiser.

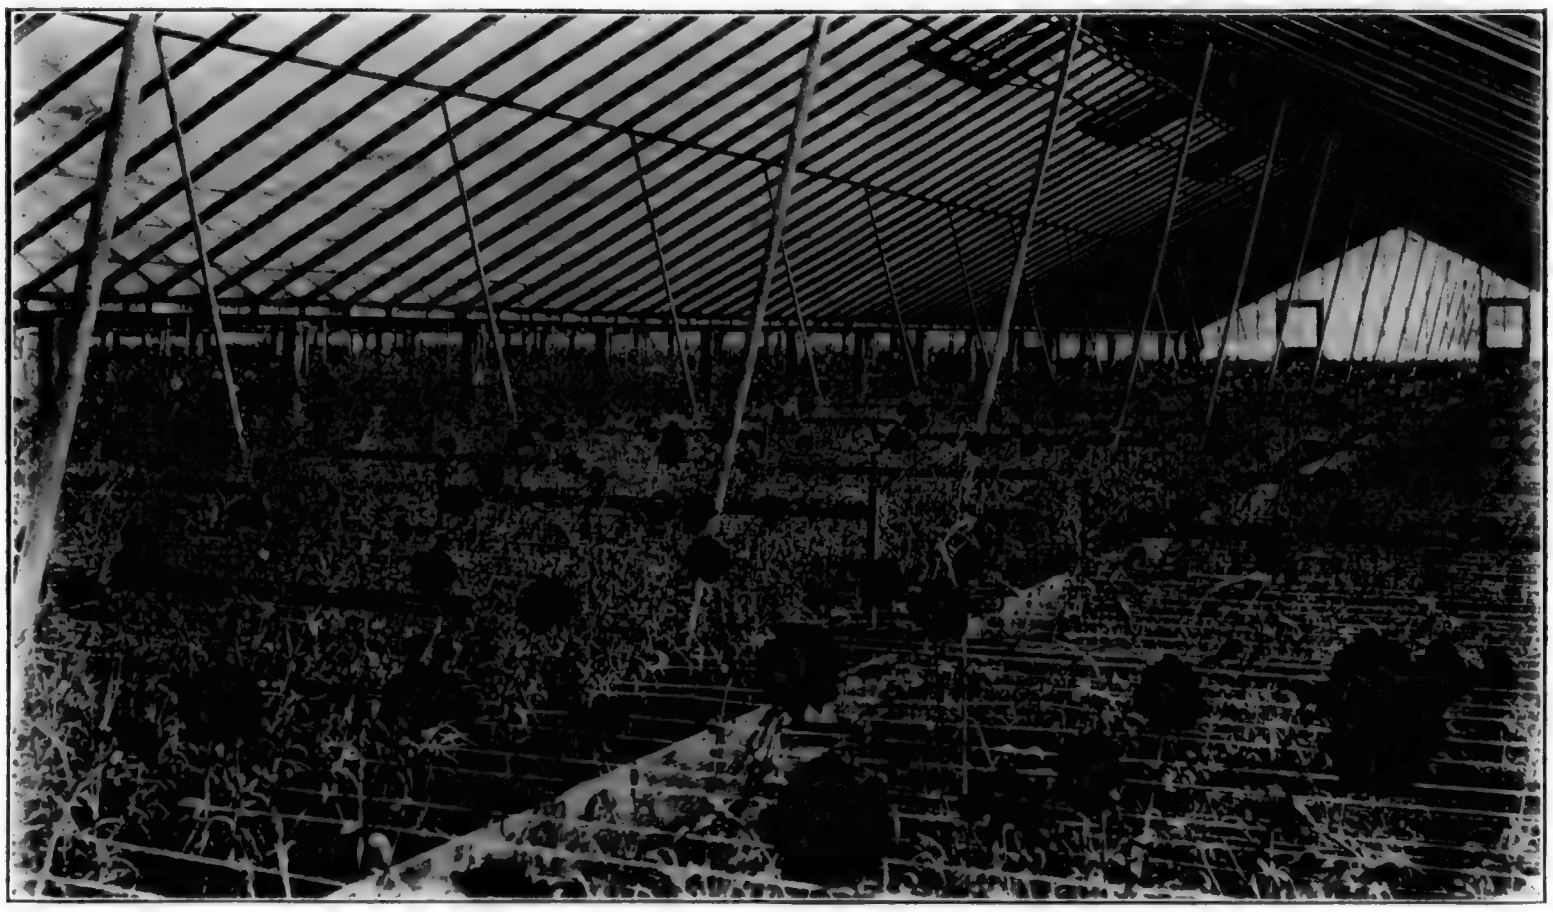
Due Recognition of Merit.

However, there is one point in this connection which does come within the province of this society, and that is, the proper recognition of merit which has been abundantly proven. Seven years ago, at Indianapolis, when the fatal illness of the president, Wm. J. Bertermann, placed me in the position of acting chairman, I suggested that the society ought to take some action commending the raiser of any carnation which has proved itself the premier variety of its class for a number of successive years. No attention was given the suggestion at that time, but my opinion has not changed on the subject. I believe that when any variety wins first prize in any Class A (open to all) section, for three successive years, the raiser of such variety should be granted the society's gold medal, fittingly engraved, as an award of sterling merit. It is at least a subject worthy of discussion.

There ought also to be a sweepstakes prize covering Class A (open to all) sections.

To refer again to the certificate classes, I believe that the entrance fees, in both preliminary and final certificate classes, should be omitted except when such certificate is granted, and that the only restriction placed on exhibiting in these classes should be membership in the society. This should be done for the purpose of increasing the number of exhibits in these classes. The judges may be depended on to properly sift such candidates.

Exhibits of Carnations in Pots.



Reference has been made annually, since the inception of this society, to the proposed exhibition of carnations in pots. Ex-president Rackham spoke of the matter in his address at Detroit. John Birnie made a strong plea for such varieties in his able paper at Toronto last year. Now, to accomplish anything in this line will require a radical step by the society and it may as well be taken at once. Offer a good, substantial prize for the best collection of plants in bloom in pots. To do this, reduce the breadth and scope of Class B, which, as it now stands, tends toward monotony in the exhibition.

Also, if it were possible to so divide the money devoted to premiums as to admit of it, a certain amount ought to be devoted each year to exhibitions showing the adaptability of the carnation to reception and wedding decorations. Competitive contests among local retail men are not practicable, but some prominent retail man might be selected to prepare some such exhibit each year, as this would interest the public greatly and add to the beauty of the exhibition.

English Competition.

The very valuable papers from foreign carnation growers last year, together with the reports appearing in our trade papers from time to time, indicate the rapid strides being taken by our co-workers in England in the development of the everblooming carnation. Such reports should stimulate the activity in America, for we should retain our supremacy in this line.

Taking into consideration the formidable competition in the securing of new varieties of carnations which the English breeders have now presented, would it not be a good thing to make some arrangement whereby new English sorts could be sent here for test as to their adaptability to American conditions and markets? Probably some exchange of novelties could be made between growers in the United States and those in England for this purpose. A great deal of interest is now being taken in American varieties over in England, and the same thing is likely to happen with English varieties in the United States; hence it would be well for the American Carnation Society to take the first steps aiming toward coöperation.

House of Defiance Carnation at Jensen & Dekema's, Chicago.

Registration of New Varieties.

In the matter of the registration of new varieties, the opinion has been expressed by interested members that the society ought to omit all superfluous verbiage as to whether the new variety is better than others of its kind, and give simply the name, the parentage, the date when the cross was made, and the color. A uniform registration blank should be adopted and this should avoid any appearance of indorsing the good qualities of a new kind.

At the Chicago convention in 1907 an action was passed authorizing the offering of American Carnation Society certificates at the fall exhibitions in our leading cities, and the appointment of judges for such exhibits. There was a committee appointed with power to act, but the plan never was carried out. This should be taken up and some definite action taken. The S. A. F. invited the cooperation of our society in the national flower show to be held in Chicago in November of this year, and we should offer our certificate and medals at that great exhibition.

It is with great pleasure that I look forward to the joint meetings with the American Breeders' Association. I hope and believe that much of benefit to the practical grower may result from the joint discussion on "Carnation Breeding." If there is anything tangible as regards Mendel's law in relation to the breeding of carnations, it should be brought out at this time.

The business sessions of the convention in Toronto were the best attended of any convention in a number of years. I am counting on the members to surpass that record in Washington.

In closing, I desire again to join with the visiting members of this society in appreciation of the efforts of the Washington florists, which have made possible a successful convention.

It is a high honor to be chosen president of the best, most businesslike and most effective florists' organization in the United States, and I thank you most heartily for that honor.

On motion of W. N. Rudd the chair was directed to appoint a committee of three to consider the recommendations in the president's address and report ways and means for making the suggestions operative. Mr. Rudd, A. F. J. Baur and J. R. Fotheringham were appointed as such committee.

Secretary Albert M. Herr then read his annual report, as follows:

Secretary's Report.

Your secretary reports having issued the regular printed matter of the society during the past year. Our annual report was more complete than usual, thanks to our stenographer and the fact that, being from my own city, it could be worked out to better advantage than could possibly be done by correspondence.

The premium list and dates for the meeting were discussed and adopted at the meeting of the board of directors held in Philadelphia last August, quite a few changes being made in the premium list and a three days' session agreed upon as an experiment, all of which was duly announced through the trade papers.

It has since developed that a portion of intending exhibitors are not able to get their flowers through in time for staging by 1 p. m. Tuesday. I would suggest that a portion of our meeting be set aside for the purpose of adopting a premium list, a set of rules governing the exhibition and the best date for the opening of the show in 1909. With exhibitors, judges, and the board of directors all present, mistakes and friction could be avoided. The exhibitor, being the first consideration in our shows, should have first consideration in our premium list.

In the opinion of your secretary, the matter of advertising in our premium list should be dispensed with. The members do not patronize it to any extent, even after personal solicitation, and it is hard to get outsiders to look upon it as a good business proposition. For the one issued this year a circular letter was sent to all members of this society, followed by a personal letter to the possible advertisers—in some cases two or three. In addition to this, personal letters were sent to about 400 other advertisers, with the results shown before you. The getting up of the premium list, aside from the solicitations, is almost as much work as getting out the annual report, and after deducting the extra cost of printing there is such a small margin of profit that it is hardly just to your secretary to pile all of this work upon him.

A pet scheme of my own was tried this year and an invitation sent to every florist, within a radius of 100 miles from the meeting place, to join the society. The responses were two new members and several inquiries, a result that teaches its own lesson.

In addition to all of the foregoing, there have been about 700 pieces of mail, mostly personal letters in response to inquiries, and the regular correspondence between this office, your president and the board of directors.

Your secretary requests that, unless you have selected a successor for the coming year, he be continued in office for one year longer, in order to use up stationery and other matter that would have to be changed and lost if a new one were elected, and that he then be released. The work of this society is increasing in a ratio of about three to one as compared to membership. It is a work that ought to be done and for which the society is not in a position to pay an adequate salary, so that in making your selection it will be the part of wisdom to select a secretary who has leisure time to devote to this work and one who employs clerical help, to whom can be given the routine part of the work. Your present incumbent, having served this society for thirteen years, feels that with another year's service to break the hoodoo, he has borne his share of the work and that some one more competent and better able to give the time and labor required should take it up and carry it on to completion.

Treasurer F. E. Dorner presented his annual report. It showed the society's financial condition to be as follows:

For the nomenclature committee, consisting of A. M. Herr, A. Herrington and Eugene Dailledouze, Mr. Herr presented a report as follows:

"Your committee reports the registration of four seedlings and three sports for the past year, a very poor showing, judging from the number of novelties described in our trade papers.

"We would suggest that a circular letter be gotten up for use by the chairman of this committee, to mail to a grower as soon as he describes a new carnation in any of the trade papers. This letter should show the advantages of and the necessity for registration and demand that he register the name of his variety if he has any intention of growing it commercially. We, of course, cannot compel registration, but we can demand it as our right, and there are very few growers, members of this society or not, who would not honor the demand.

"Another point for action by your society is the numerous increase of sports that are being put on the market each year. Your committee recommends that each of these sports be given a distinct name, and where offered to the trade as rooted cuttings that the description announce what they are a sport from. As it now stands, we have four or five Lawsons, as many Enchantress, and endless confusion reigns supreme. If each had a distinct name wholesalers and growers would not be at a loss to know which was wanted when orders are sent in by wire or letter."

The report was accepted and placed on file.

Nominations.

Nominations being in order, Secretary Herr read written invitations for 1909 from the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club for Pittsburg and from the State Florists' Association of Indiana for Indianapolis.

For president, William Nicholson nominated M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, Mass. For vice-president, William Falconer, of Pittsburg, and A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, were nominated. Secretary Herr and Treasurer Dorner were named to succeed themselves. For judges, Peter Fisher, William Nicholson and F. Burki were nominated, two to be elected. For director, J. S. Wilson was nominated to succeed himself.

Seedings were scored for certificates as follows: No. 46-205, by M. A. Patten, 86; President Seelye, by H. W. Field, 89; No. 100, by Joseph Heacock, 86, but the judges added that it is very like Rose-pink Enchantress; Wanoka, by Wanoka Greenhouses, 86; Apple Blossom, by Wanoka Greenhouses, 84. The varieties Defiance, Mrs. Robert Hartshorne and Climax were pronounced not in a condition to score.

Wednesday evening the judges presented a supplementary report scoring W. N. Rudd's light pink seedling 89 points and his white seedling 86.

Special Exhibits.

Among the special exhibits were:

Two splendid vases of Mrs. Jardine rose, staged by W. P. Craig, Philadelphia. The judges specially commented on its fragrance.

A fine vase of Queen Beatrice rose from F. H. Kramer, artistically staged on a bank of adiantum.

An especially good vase of Rhea Reid rose, staged by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

A fine specimen plant of Nephrolepis Superbissima, from F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.

Three fine vases of Boston, the big new single violet grown by Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

Baur Floral Co., Erie, Pa., the pliers for mending bursted carnation calyxes, the demonstrator being very expert.

Lord & Burnham Co., New York, photographs and printed matter on greenhouse construction.

Eagle Machine Works, Richmond, Ind., a carnation support.

Buxton & Allard, Nashua, N. H., the Economy greenhouse bracket.

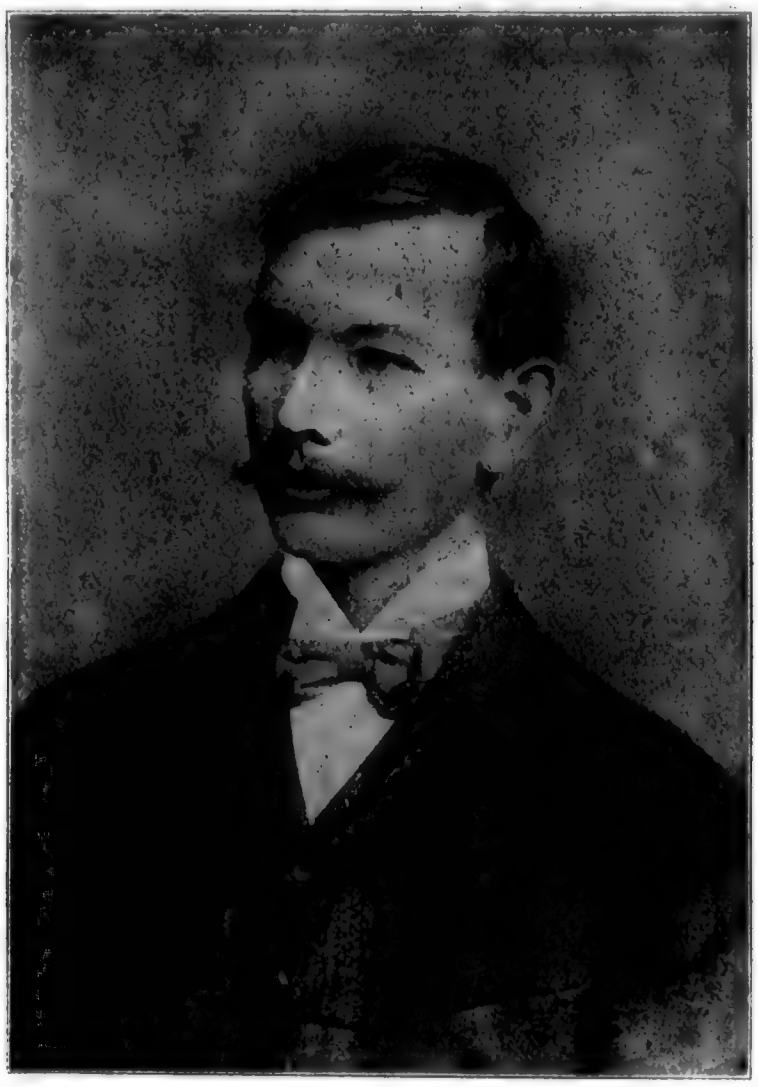
Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, exhibited drawings and photographs showing their boiler and system of heating as applied in well-known establishments.

W. N. Rudd's seedlings, unnamed, a big light pink and a fine white, arrived Wednesday and were staged in splendid shape, considering that they had been in the boxes forty-eight hours. C. E. Marshall also staged some good seedlings Wednesday.

Wednesday Morning.

At the opening hour Wednesday morning Dr. B. T. Galloway was introduced to report on the work with the carnation done by the Department of Agriculture. He illustrated his remarks with a chart, and at the close many questions were asked and answered. Dr. Galloway said that the work done had proven conclusively that plants grown under glass all summer are superior in every way and give a greatly increased yield. It is said that bone is valueless and stable manure the ideal fertilizer for carnations. Propagation from selected plants not only maintains vigor but increases production. Sandy soils tend toward shorter stems than are produced on clay soil. When clear water will not eradicate red spider, a five-cent bar of Ivory or any neutral soap shaved and dissolved in a gallon of water, subsequently diluted with four gallons of warm water and sprayed on with a Vermorel or Climax nozzle, will do the work. An hour later wash off the soap and repeat every ten days until the plants are clean.

Indianapolis Next Year.



There were lively times in the selection of next meeting place. After several speakers had recounted the advantages of the two cities, a ballot, with A. F. J. Baur and Fred Burki as tellers, showed 166 members present and 83 votes for Indianapolis and 83 for Pittsburg. To decide the tie and, inasmuch as Indianapolis withdrew last year in favor of Washington, I. S. Crall, of Pittsburg, moved to make it unanimous for Indianapolis.

A discussion of the premium list resulted in the adoption of a resolution offered by W. N. Rudd endorsing this year's list as satisfactory in its essential features. The directors later held a meeting and framed up the list for the Indianapolis show.

It was announced that the session Thursday afternoon would be abandoned, as President Roosevelt extended an invitation to a reception at the White House at 2:30 on that day.

Joint Session.

The Carnation Society and the American Breeders' Association held a joint session under the auspices of the latter on Wednesday afternoon, C. W. Ward presiding. Some of the papers were on animal breeding, but the program called for several on plant breeding, as follows: "Original Work Among Native Roses," by W. Van Fleet, Little Silver, N. J.; "Some Observations in Plant Improvement," by A. M. Soule, Athens, Ga.; "Report of Committee on Breeding Roses," by Peter Bisset, Washington, D. C.; "Development of the Immune or Resistant Character in Plants," by H. L. Bolley, Fargo, N. D.; "Report of Committee on Breeding Carnations," by C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.

Peter Bisset.
(President Washington Florists' Club.)

Thursday's Sessions.

The exhibition had disappeared Thursday morning. However necessary three days may be to dispatch the society's business, two days is fully as much as carnations are good for under average conditions of growth, shipment and staging. The public helped themselves Wednesday evening and cleaned up every bloom. The attendance also was light the third day, many having gone home, while others were sightseeing.

The first business was election of officers, which was perfunctory and resulted as follows: President, M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, Mass.; vice-president, A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.; secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.; treasurer, Fred Dorner, Lafayette, Ind.; director, J. S. Wilson, Western Springs, Ill.; judges, William Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.

The committee on president's address recommended that the society's medals be awarded as sweepstakes in Class A instead of as now. Not concurred in. The committee recommended that members be charged no fees for registration on certificate entries, non-members to pay as now; also that no variety be eligible for exhibition unless registered; also that registration consist of a statement of the history and facts with regard to a variety instead of opinions as to its characteristics and merits, all superlatives to be omitted and registration to be on a blank provided for that purpose; also that the directors may recommend to the society that a gold medal, to be known as the medal of merit, be awarded to the originator of any variety that has maintained its commercial position for not less than three years. All adopted.

Robert Craig's motion that sports be registered only under distinctive names was lost. W. N. Rudd's motion that membership be restricted to individuals was carried.

M. A. Patten, W. P. Craig and A. J. Baur were appointed a committee on final resolutions.

Thursday Afternoon.

After the reception by President Roosevelt a joint session of the Breeders' Association and Carnation Society was held, at which the papers of C. W. Ward and Prof. Norton were read, illustrated with lantern slides. Messrs. Witterstaetter and Fisher opened the discussion, the former with a paper.

Reception by the President.

Thursday afternoon the members of the Carnation Society and Breeders' Association were received by President Roosevelt in the east room at the White House. Three magnificent vases of Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward were presented to the president, whose words were to the point: "I bid you welcome and thank you for the beautiful flowers you have brought. Those of you who brought your wives I wish specially to compliment on your good taste. It will give me pleasure to shake hands with you all." And he did it.

The Banquet.

Over one hundred visitors were guests of the Washington Florists' Club at a banquet Thursday evening. President Peter Bisset acted as toastmaster. A number of brief talks followed the following program of toasts:

NEW CARNATIONS.

Marchioness.

The illustration on page 16 is from a photograph of a house at L. E. Marquisee's, Syracuse, N. Y., in which he is growing the new white seedling which he has named Marchioness. Owing to extensive repairs and alterations, the house was not planted till September 15 and the photograph was taken December 9, which will show to all good carnation growers its rapid growth and free flowering qualities. All the local florists have closely watched it for several years and will grow it as soon as it is disseminated. The flowers are large, three and one-half to four inches in diameter, high built, double and highly clove-scented. It likes cool treatment, 48 to 50 degrees at night, which makes quite a saving in the coal bill. There is not a sign of rust or stem-rot in the 8,000 plants benched this season.

The local weather bureau reports on ten bright days at Syracuse for three months, the smallest number ever recorded. All carnation growers will understand the unfavorable conditions under which Marchioness is growing. Growers also will note the character of house the variety is given.

Sarah Hill.

The illustration on page 17 of this issue is reproduced from the photograph of a bench of Carnation Sarah Hill made December 22 at the establishment of the B., K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind. It shows the character of growth and the size and style of flower quite clearly. The word enormous is hardly too strong to apply to this variety when speaking of its flower. It is certainly larger than any white thus far distributed in the trade, and the form is excellent. The petals are serrated and the flower is well built up in the center. It is pure white and carried on long, strong stems. Mr. Knopf says that with him, in the four years he has grown it, it has proved much more productive than White Perfection, which is generally considered the best fancy white carnation.

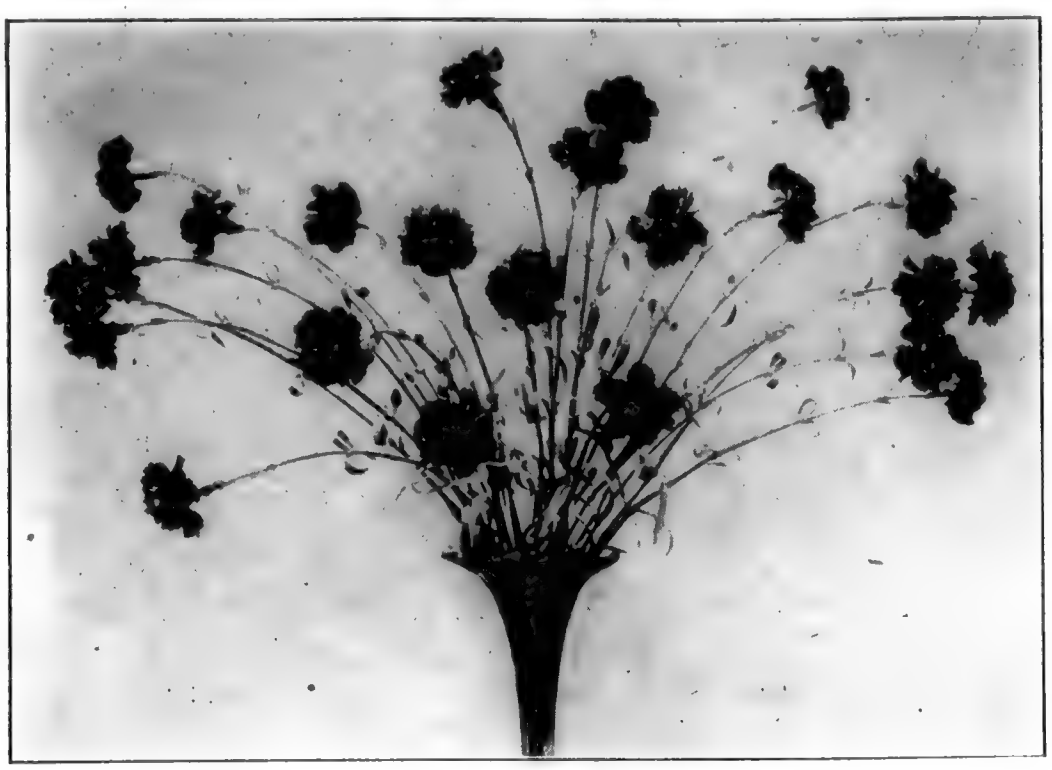
Charles McCauley.

Secretary Washington Florists' Club and Manager Carnation Exhibition.)

Lawson-Enchantress.

The illustration on page 15 of this issue is from a photograph of a bench of Lawson-Enchantress made at the establishment of the B., K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., December 22, 1907. This is not a sport of Enchantress, but a seedling of that variety, with the habit of Enchantress and the color of Lawson. Mr. Knopf grows it in a house with Enchantress, giving identical treatment, and produces similar results in growth and productiveness. He says the trade takes to it well, because everyone is able to do Enchantress profitably.

Splendor.



Carnation Splendor is a seedling now being disseminated by Stevenson Bros., Govanstown, Md. It has been given a trial for four seasons and has in every particular proved a grand commercial variety. In color it is somewhat lighter than Lawson. The flowers are finely formed, averaging from three to three and one-quarter inches in diameter, borne on long, stiff yet graceful stems. The calyx is perfectly formed, insuring a non-splitting flower. It is absolutely healthy, an early, free, and a continuous bloomer, produces no grass and is an "easy doer," taking a night temperature of 50 degrees. Shown on page 23.

Afterglow.

The illustration on page 13 shows a house of Carnation Afterglow that was planted August 8 and photographed seven weeks later. These plants were propagated the first week in April, potted in 2¼-inch pots May 10, and planted in the field June 2. The blooms could be cut with stems ten to fourteen inches long at the time the photograph was taken.

President Seelye.

On page 16 of this issue there is a reproduction of a photograph of a house of Carnation President Seelye, which is a new white being grown by H. W. Field, Northampton, Mass. It is a seedling from Mrs. Lawson and Queen, now in its fourth year. It is a large, well formed flower, pure white, on long stems from the start. It is free, does not split and does its best in a temperature of 50 degrees to 52 degrees at night. Many visitors have inspected it at Mr. Field's this season and all speak well of it.

Carnation Faust.

Harvard.

On page 19 of this issue there is an illustration of Harvard, a crimson which originated four years ago, with J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I. It was the result of a cross between Prosperity and Maceo, and Mr. Cockcroft says it "combines the size and stem of the former with the freedom and rapid growth of the latter. The flowers measure from three and one-half to four inches in diameter and are symmetrical and well built, with deeply fringed petals, and are splendid keepers and shippers. A critical examination by a disinterested party just before Christmas of the 5,000 plants now being grown disclosed not a single case of split calyx. The stems are long, stiff and wiry at all seasons, averaging about twenty-four inches in length. The plant is a rapid and vigorous grower, with no superfluous grass, coming in bloom early and continuing throughout the season, every shoot producing a well-formed flower."

Andrew Carnegie.

Andrew Carnegie, a bloom of which is shown on page 23, is a scarlet sport of Harlowarden and has the characteristics of that variety in habit of growth and the qualities of flower. It sported simultaneously with the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., and Jenny P. Snow, Sharon, Mass., and is being sent out this year by the former concern.

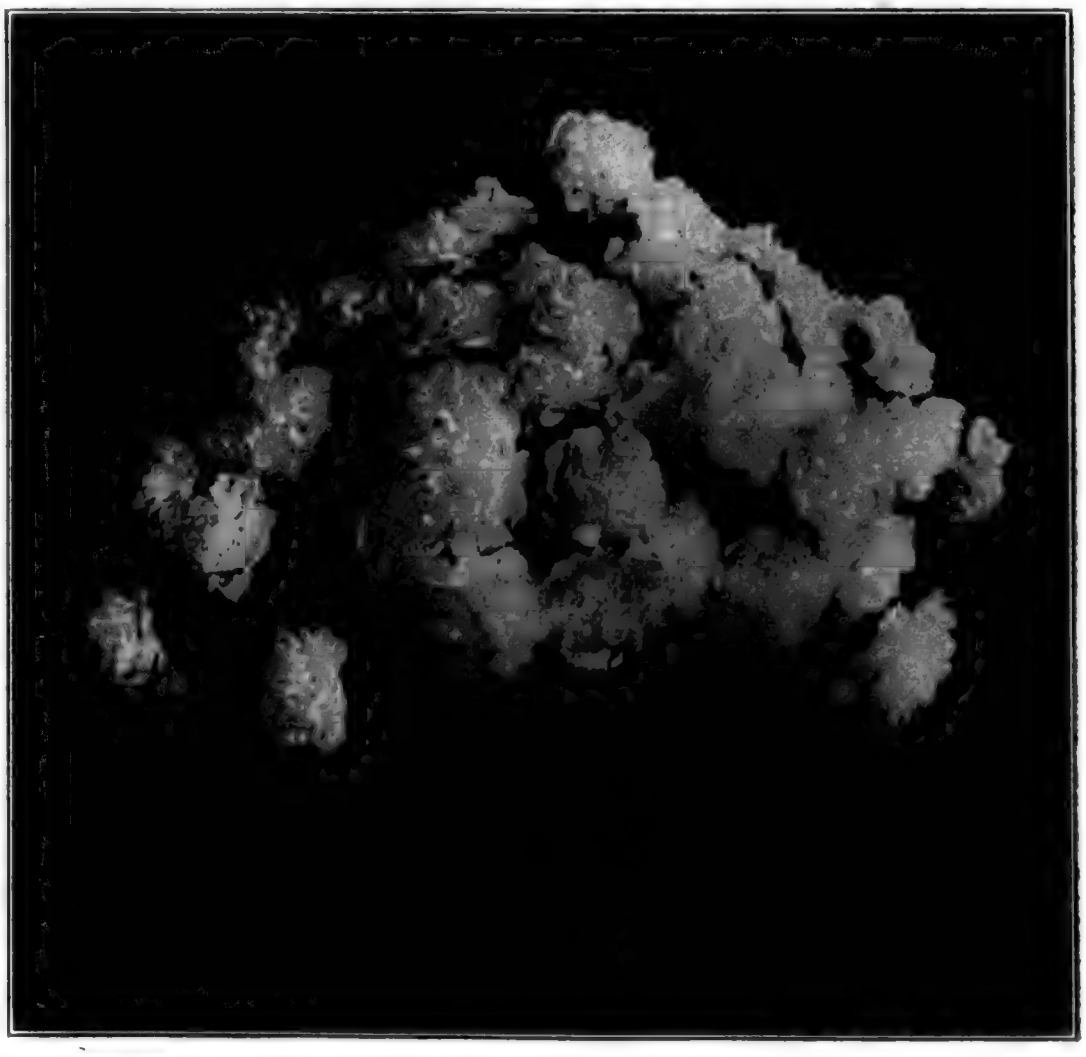
Georgia.

Georgia is a new fringed white that J. D. Cockcroft intends to send out in 1909. He says it "stands in a class by itself, as it is a commercial variety in productiveness and a fancy one in size, fragrance and form." It is illustrated on page 19 of this issue.

Faust.

Carnation Faust, illustrated on this page, is a brilliant scarlet, a shade brighter than Victory, with wiry stems averaging twenty to twenty-four inches. The flowers are of medium size, well built up, with a strong calyx. It is a strong, healthy and clean grower, coming into bloom early, and J. D. Cockcroft, with whom it originated, at Northport, L. I., says its productiveness makes it desirable for commercial use, especially for the Christmas trade, when it is in full crop.

Apple Blossom.



Raised at the Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y.; Apple Blossom is a white with a delicate pink blending in the center of the flower, suggesting the delicate apple blossom of early spring. The flowers are carried on long, stiff stems. It is fragrant, comes early and is free through the season. The grower, A. O. Grassl, says "the calyx does not split, and the flowers have excellent keeping quality and ship without difficulty. It is best grown in a night temperature of 48 and 50 degrees. This variety is distinctly the bread and butter sort, its prodigious blooming quality making it one of the foremost carnations of today. Flowers average three inches through the season." It is to be disseminated during the season of 1908-9. A vase of it is shown on page 22.

Wanoka.

Named from the Indian word, "Wah-No-Kah," meaning "Just one of its kind," H. H. Nicholson and A. O. Grassl have a fine name for a new crimson carnation. The growers say: "Wanoka is a superb, well formed and fragrant crimson, being of remarkable production, and borne on extremely long and heavy stems which never grow soft. It succeeds best in night temperatures of 50 degrees, but it can be successfully grown in higher temperature. The calyx never splits, and the flowers average three inches and are first-class shippers." This variety will be disseminated during the season of 1908-9, by the Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y. It is pictured on page 21.

Climax.

Carnation Climax is a seedling raised at the Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y. It is illustrated on page 21 of this issue. The originators describe it as follows: "A beautiful, well made pink, being a shade or two deeper than Enchantress, and a color long desired by the growers and the public. The color does not fade. Flowers do not have the regular form of Enchantress, are borne on long, stiff stems and are fragrant. They average, the season through, three inches and from December to April are three and one-half inches and over. Flowers come early and the plants yield more per season than any other light pink variety, Enchantress included. The calyx is remarkably strong and seldom splits; the flower is an excellent keeper and ships well. It is best grown in night temperatures of 48 and 50 degrees.'' This variety will be disseminated during the season of 1909-10.

H. A. Jahn's New White Carnation, Lloyd.

Defiance.

The illustration on page 14 shows a house of Carnation Defiance photographed January 20 at the establishment of Jensen & Dekema, Chicago. Defiance is a seedling which flowered first in 1902 and is now in its sixth year. It was raised by W. N. Rudd. The cross was Estelle on a scarlet seedling, having Macco, Mrs. McBurney, Lizzie McGowan and Wm. Scott blood in it. Its habit may be described as a compromise between that of Maceo and Estelle. Mr. Rudd says it retains all, and he believes more than, the free blooming habit of Maceo. ''It is the same compact, upright grower and produces absolutely no superfluous grass. The color is better than Estelle and we believe it to be the brightest so-called scarlet in cultivation. It is early and continuous in bloom. The form is fine and under ordinary conditions it reaches a size of three inches. The stem is longer than that of Estelle; in fact, it is amply long, growing from two feet to thirty inches. It has a fine constitution and is free from disease. We now have a bench in good shape which was grown in the house last year, lifted, planted in the open ground, grown through the summer and planted in again at the usual time in the fall. This variety is not a show variety and cannot compete on the exhibition table. We believe, however, that it is the commercial scarlet for all purposes and we feel sure it will make a record for itself in dollars and cents for those that grow it.''

Carnation Wanoka.

Lloyd.

A visit paid to H. A. Jahn, New Bedford, Mass., a few days before Christmas showed house after house of his new white carnation, Lloyd, in fine shape. It can easily be called a bread and butter carnation. It is next to impossible to find a split flower among all the 10,000 plants; in fact, Mr. Jahn says that his houses have gone as low as 34 degrees and still they hardly split at all.

Lloyd originated five years ago with Mr. Jahn, and is a pedigreed seedling. The blooms are fully three to three and one-half and often four inches across and are borne on stiff stems from eighteen inches to three feet long. It is fragrant and a free bloomer. One day last October Mr. Jahn picked 3,000 blooms from his 10,000 plants, all good stock. At the beginning of January he was picking about 1,800 blooms weekly, which he is shipping to Boston. The first year of this variety, from one plant Mr. Jahn picked sixty-five flowers. It of course was exceptional, but if any one can beat this I would like to hear about it. The way the plants are blooming and in such old houses, too, is a sight the writer will never forget. What this variety would do in a northern greenhouse we leave to your own imagination.

CARNATION HYBRIDIZING.

[A paper by Richard Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O., read before the American Carnation Society at the Washington convention, Januar 28 to 30, 1908.]

Some sixteen years ago, when I first undertook the work of hybridizing the carnation, I had very little knowledge of nature's law regarding the results to be expected from crossing the standard commercial varieties of that date, and concluded that experiments, with a complete record of the parentage and the results, were necessary. As regards color, size, stem, form, habit, freedom, etc., I found, while we had some very good seedlings that pointed up well in everything except color—and color is a very important factor in a commercial carnation—that we got quite a few variegated, purples and off colors, and very few identical to the parent color. I concluded, therefore, that this must be nature's law in plant life, the same as in the human race, and that blood would tell. Hence subsequent breeding was carried on with that point in view; namely, scarlets in a race by themselves, whites in theirs, and so on, always selecting for future work that which came nearest to an ideal as to color and commercial value.

Difficulty With Scarlets.

Some have held that by following this method you lose constitution. We have proven this to our own satisfaction to be untrue, if a selection of vigorous parents is made for the work. This opinion may have arisen from the fact that a very brilliant scarlet has no vigor to back it up, our most vigorous scarlets being only a fair or dull red, and if a good constitution and a brilliant color are combined the result is apt to be a slow and shy bloomer, not up to the commercial requirements. As most of my endeavors have been devoted to the scarlet race—amounting to about one-third of the number of the seedlings raised—I have taken the pessimistic view that it would be an impossibility to produce a brilliant scarlet of free blooming quality, backed up by a vigorous constitution. Of late years, however, I have observed that this will not be an impossibility.

on the semi-double, or not too many petals to insure a good setting of seeds; also guarding against parents with flowers containing too many petals, as the result will be too many extremely double flowers, with no calyx to speak of.

Vigor of Constitution.

Constitution, next to color, is the most important factor of a commercial carnation, from a grower's point of view, and should be given the utmost consideration. The parents should be selected and bred to such varieties as are noted for their healthy and vigorous constitution. We believe that in order to gain the best results this crossing should be done during the months of March and April, when plants are making their most vigorous and rapid growth, insuring well-developed and ripened seed.

We sometimes question whether the condition and class of food with which we supply the mother plant when crossing, and up to the time of ripening the seeds, are not responsible, to some extent, for our failures or successes, as the case may be.

Regarding any other points of hybridization, I might suggest a strong, well-rooted love for the work, untiring patience and perseverance, with a studious observation of the results and with a fair sized bank account at your disposal, until your aim has been attained.

Carnation Apple Blossom.

Qualities Sought in Breeding.

In breeding for form we always selected those that had reproduced themselves in that point for two or three generations, choosing one or the other of the parents, preferably the seed parent, and using the same as a seed parent. In pink we do not hold so closely to the color line, but are very particular that whatever color is used shall be of good, clear, strong and lively tone, not subject to fading into dull colors, nor easily affected by the sun.

In breeding for size we do not hesitate to use a small flowered variety as a seed parent, provided its progenitors of the first and second generations past were large flowered varieties; neither do we fear to use it as a pollen parent, if it has all the other attributes of a good commercial variety.

In breeding for stem and calyx I like to select a variety that has inherited these good points from one or two generations past, with the bloom bordering

INTRODUCING NEW CARNATIONS.

[A paper by S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, read before the American Carnation Society at the Washington convention.]

It would be hard to find in the history of floriculture another instance of the rapid development of a flower to equal that of the carnation.

The divine flower has indeed sprung into favor as if by magic wand. Unlike the short-lived chrysanthemum or the queen herself, the rose, the carnation is preëminently the flower of the masses. It is grown everywhere; it is sold everywhere; the "curb merchant," no less than the society florist, handles it in immense quantities. More glass is going up, more carnations are being grown, and the demand continually is for still more. Nor is its popularity confined to our own borders. England, Germany and France depend upon our varieties; far-away Norway and Sweden grow them with success, and even darkest Russia, we are told, can do Lawson, Enchantress and White Perfection well. Let us hope—and you will pardon my slight digression from the subject—that with the advent of Beacon there may come a light to brighten the hovels of the semi-civilized, wretched peasantry in the czar's domain.

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

When John Thorpe, but a comparatively short time ago, predicted that our puny carnation of yesterday would attain the respectable size, by actual measurement, of four inches in diameter, there were many among us who were inclined at the time to treat such prophecy with a four-inch grain of salt. That prediction of Mr. Thorpe's has come true, nevertheless. We have practically reached the goal of our ambition. The four-inch carnation is here, and has evidently come to stay. Nor are we content to rest upon the laurels achieved. We are aiming higher and still higher. What was good enough a season or two ago, does not satisfy us today. We must have something better. It will not do to stay the march of progress or to check the course of evolution. Aside from the size of the bloom itself, we must have also stem, a long and a stiff one at that. We must have a carnation with a non-bursting calyx, of good color, good keeping qualities, and last, but by no means least, we insist on varieties that will produce the flowers and yield us dollars and cents—"bread and butter" carnations, if I may borrow the stereotyped description, now and then applied to seedlings which do not pay for the bread, let alone the butter.

It is not my intention, however, to point out any particular varieties, nor do I wish to call to the bar of the growers' opinion any of the introducers of the "bread and butter" sorts, the kinds that never paid for either the bread or the butter.

Origin of Worthless Varieties.

I am rather inclined to the belief that the average introducer of a new variety is honest and honorable, that he means well, that his sole aim and object in introducing a carnation is to give satisfaction, that under all circumstances he aims to give the grower his money's worth. There have been some exceptions, of course, but this is another story, having no bearing upon the subject under consideration.

Granted, then, that no fraud or deception on the part of the introducer is ever intended, the question arises, Why are worthless varieties thrown upon the market? Why, indeed?

I shall attempt to answer this question, as I have studied it at close range, depending upon my personal impressions and observations, which, of course, are in no wise infallible. My observations, upon numerous occasions, lead me to the conclusion that there are some hybridizers who are inclined to be too optimistic, often being carried away, so to speak, by the momentum of their own enthusiasm. The man thus inclined makes his cross, selecting for the purpose sturdy and meritorious parents. The result, he takes it for granted, must be highly satisfactory. I say "he takes it for granted'' advisedly, because taking things for granted is a characteristic trait of the enthusiast. He watches the seed pod with all the care, hope and love which a young mother bestows upon her first-born. ''To be sure,'' he reasons, ''something good must result. A chip of the old block is an asset not to be despised.''

Enthusiastic Dissemination.

In course of time the seedling or seedlings appear. Out of a dozen or more ''uncertainties,'' the one looking the most promising is selected and duly labeled. No sooner does the bloom break through the calyx than the plant is chopped down, literally hacked to pieces, in order to get all the cuttings, good, bad and indifferent, that it may yield through and beyond the season. The vitality of the ''promising one'' is thus impaired at the very outset of its ephemeral career. The season following, it still looks promising, although the calyx is somewhat inclined to go asunder and the stem is not strong enough to sustain the weight of the bloom or the bunch of petals. The season, of course, which happened to be either too dry or too wet, is accountable for that. Perhaps a little overfeeding did the mischief, or the temperature was a degree or two too low or too high to suit its delicate constitution.

To be sure, there are numerous reasons for its misbehavior, but no matter, where there is life there is hope. A second massacre is in order and the plants are propagated to the limit. Cuttings are taken regardless of their condition. It will not do to ''put off'' when the growers are so much in need of a good white, a good red or a good pink, and, incidentally, when there is a fortune in sight. I will stop right here, however, to reiterate my assertion that the introducers of new carnations are absolutely honest, that no fraud is intended when a carnation is finally launched, with all the pomp and all the songs in its praise which we are accustomed to see and to hear.

The question as to what the grower should expect from the introducer of a new carnation is rather a perplexing one and is not so easily answered as one might expect. Our ideas of the fitness of things are so much at variance with local conditions and local requirements that it would be practically impossible to set up a standard with a view of insuring general satisfaction.

Carnation Andrew Carnegie.

Real Bread and Butter Sorts.

In one of the November issues of Horticulture, John Thorpe, in his notes on the Chicago flower show, has this to say about the carnations which were on exhibition there: ''Of new carnations—in quantity very short, in quality never better. Raisers of seedlings are getting wise. It is not how many, but how few. Let this prevail, because the few have the best chance.'' Tersely expressed, but true. That the few of superior quality have the best chance is not to be denied. Yet, on the other hand, we must also not ignore the fact that while there are comparatively few growers ever in quest of ''fancies'' or carnations of quality, whose products are sure to command the highest prices at all times, there are hundreds and thousands of others who are ever on the lookout for ''the bread and butter sorts,'' whose local markets, either wholesale or retail, do not warrant heavy investments in ''fancies,'' who, in brief, must have carnations which, taking local conditions into consideration, will pay for the coal, the help, the interest on the greenhouse plant, and will leave a dollar to boot. It is the rank and file that is to be considered, the man who can no longer grow Lawson or Queen and who is in want of something to take their places. A standard, therefore, to suit alike the sucessful growers in the vicinity of New York or Chicago and the man in the Dakotas, is not to be thought of.

But what, after all, is the grower to expect from the introducer of new seedling carnations?

Carnation Splendor.

A Happy Middle Ground.

Coming to the point by the shortest possible route, it begins to dawn upon me that there ought to be a sort of happy middle ground, upon which both the grower and the hybridizer could meet for the purpose of advancing their mutual interests, for the purpose of adjusting differences, of overcoming prejudices and of facing conditions. If the one realizes the need of the other; in other words, if the introducer of seedling carnations will exercise the most scrupulous care in behalf of the ''goose that lays the golden egg,'' and if the grower in his turn will bear in mind that his very success, or the ''golden egg,'' has been made possible by the men who have made hybridization their life study, who are sacrificing their time and means in order to improve upon past achievements and thereby advance the interests of the carnation growers—if both, I say, could meet upon such ground, there surely would be no cause for disappointment or dissatisfaction. But how is this to be accomplished? Leaving the hybridizer's cause in the hands of Mr. Rudd, who, I am sure, will do ample justice to it, I will take up the grower's end of the question and will briefly outline his expectations from the introducers of new seedlings.

Reasonable Expectations.

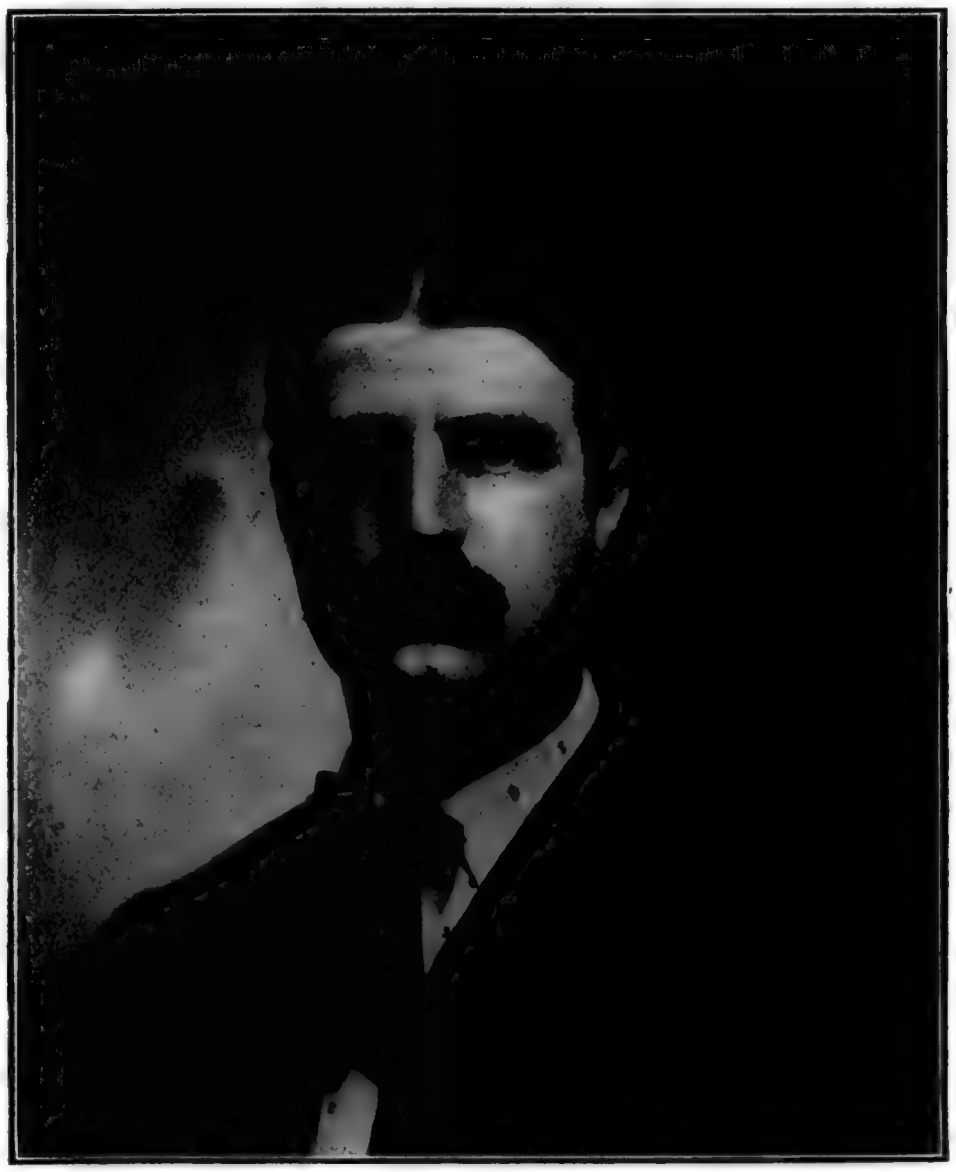
First, the grower expects his money's worth. By this I mean that when he orders a batch of high-priced cuttings, he expects and is fully entitled to high grade stock, cuttings that have been carefully selected and well rooted—rooted not by dint of the steam pipe at so many thousands per week, but by the natural process of keeping the feet comfortably warm and the heads cool, to insure vigor and health.

Second, he expects from the variety just what it is represented to be. In other words, when a variety is a cropper, it should not be represented as a continuous bloomer; when its calyx splits at certain seasons or under certain conditions, that fact should be brought to the surface, regardless of losses or gains.

Third, he expects the benefit of the introducer's experience without paying an additional price, often a heavy one, for the experience himself. By this I mean that when a seedling has been thoroughly tested and its requirements and peculiarities studied and recorded, the introducer is morally obliged to give the grower the benefit of his own knowledge and experience. The grower is entitled to such information and it should not be withheld from him. A printed slip, bearing all the cultural notes about the variety introduced, should accompany each and every shipment.

Fourth, the grower expects a "square deal." By this I mean that no matter what a carnation's previous record may have been, no matter how many points it scored or how many medals were awarded it, unless it maintains its record in all its essentials up to the time and including the season of its dissemination, unless its vigor is in no wise impaired, it should not see the light of day. The introducer must be absolutely certain on this point; he must take nothing for granted, else the grower is sure to be a much disappointed man.

The grower's expectations, it seems to me, are within the bounds of reason and need hardly be dwelt upon at greater length here. Let a condition of thorough understanding and most scrupulous honesty on both sides prevail, and we will no longer hear about "gold bricks" and "suckers."



After all, there is a deal of truth in the old saw of honesty being the best policy. The most successful business men of today are those who pursue such a policy, whether it be in the dissemination of seedlings or breadstuffs. The child that burns its fingers fears the fire; so does the grower steer clear of the man who sells him a winner and gives him a gold brick instead. It is to our own interests, whether we be hybridizers, dealers or mere agents, to discourage worthless varieties, to stamp them out, root, branch and all, if we wish to see the most important branch of our business thrive and develop without hitch or hindrance.

CULTURE OF CARNATIONS.

[A paper by Irving Gingrich, South Bend, Ind., read before the American Carnation Society, at the Washington convention, January 28 to 30, 1908.]

The subject of this paper is really one that should have been assigned to a grower of long and wide experience, as the writer feels that he is just beginning to learn something concerning the culture of carnations, his experience dating back only eight years. During this time, however, mistakes have been made that he has profited by, and if he can say something that will be of benefit to but one out of ten of the growers here assembled he will feel well repaid for the effort. The writer will also endeavor to confine himself very closely to his subject, as any slight digression will make the paper entirely too long.

Beginning with the propagation of the carnation, we may say that in this country the commercial grower has but one method, namely, by cuttings. The specialist makes use of seed propagation to secure new varieties, but we will not discuss this method, as the average grower cannot devote the time and attention absolutely necessary to success in this special field.

Irving Gingrich.

Taking the Cuttings.

There exists a marked difference of opinion as to where and how to take a cutting and this subject received considerable attention at our Toronto meeting. There are, however, many present at this meeting who were not fortunate enough to be present at Toronto. At that meeting a discussion was raised as to what constitutes a top cutting, some being of the opinion that it was one taken rather high up on a flowering stem and others maintaining that it was the top taken out of one of the bottom shoots, which would ultimately have become a flowering stem itself. The writer's own experience, supported by actual experiment, is that neither is an ideal cutting. The former soon sends forth a bud which, if removed, will send up four or five weaker buds, and if these are stopped or pinched back the plant is gone; the latter sends up a rank growth which, on being stopped several times as the growths are ripe for the operation, produces a heavy but rather slow growing plant, with plenty of foliage and few flowers. These statements must be made with some reservation, as the writer has not had much experience with different soils and these exert a marked influence on the growth of the plant.

A heavy, rich soil might produce a fairly good plant from a side-shoot cutting, whereas a light, quick, sandy soil might have the same effect on the other. Our soil being a medium chocolate loam, with considerable silt in its composition and not very rich, we much prefer a side cutting on a flowering shoot, taken at one joint above and one joint below the usual point of cutting the flower. Cutting off the flower, therefore, requires some discretion, as some varieties develop the cutting before the bud matures and some varieties do not develop the cutting until after the flower has been removed.

Time to Take the Cuttings.

With us January and February are the best months in which to take cuttings, though there are others who prefer March struck cuttings, on account of the rapid growth made in their particular soil. Some slow growing varieties, such as Prosperity, need to be taken in December to make profitable plants.

It matters but little whether the cutting is taken with a heel or not. If taken with a heel, it is grasped firmly between the thumb and forefinger and severed from the stem with an upward and outward movement. This takes the leaf and part of the wood of the flowering stem with the cutting. The old wood is then cut off an eighth or sixteenth of an inch from the end of the shoot, and the cutting is ready for insertion in the sand. In March or later it is well to clip off the ends of the leaves, to reduce the transpiration or loss of moisture. Cuttings not taken with a heel, and cut off at the base to any extent, should be cut slightly below a joint, so that when the lower leaves are pulled off backwards they strip off the outer bark, leaving the inner cambium tissue adhering to the wood. It is on this tissue that the roots form. Whatever may be the method of taking and trimming the cutting, the most important thing is its treatment after reaching the sand.

After trimming, the cuttings are given a drink by soaking for a half hour to an hour in fresh water, to thoroughly fill the tissues and prepare them for the ordeal to come.

The Propagating Bench.

The best propagating bench is six inches deep, with a layer of brick on the bottom to distribute the heat and moisture evenly, and filled up with clean, sharp sand. This is wetted down and packed hard with a brick. Then wet again slightly, and cut a crack in the sand with an old putty knife and straight edge. The rows can be two inches apart and three-fourths of an inch in the row, or three inches apart and one-half inch in the row. The cuttings should not extend more than one-half inch below the surface of the sand. After the cuttings are in, water with a sprinkling can, or with the hose if you have it fitted with a sprinkler head. Syringe lightly for several mornings; then gradually let the sand dry out, always being careful, however, that the foliage is not allowed to wilt. During this period the cuttings are very impatient of drafts, and ventilation must be carefully looked after, as a trifle too much air may result in the loss of an entire crop of cuttings when all other details have been faithfully carried out. Direct sunlight should not be allowed on the cutting bench, at least until the cuttings show signs of rooting, after which anything but midday sun will prove beneficial. The propagating house should be 45 to 50 degrees at night, with 60 degrees in the sand. Some prefer to have no bottom heat, but we have had no success without it.

Planting Out the Cuttings.

In three or four weeks the cuttings will be ready for planting out, and for speed and good results generally we always plant directly to a bench, in three inches of soil that is somewhat spent. If such soil is not available, mix enough sand with it so it will not be too rich, as a rich soil will cause considerable damping off. If so desired, they can be potted up in 2½-inch pots, using a heavy loam lightened with well decomposed leaf-mold. They can be planted into the field without a shift, and this ball of soil will remain intact when lifting time comes. December struck cuttings planted directly into a bench four inches apart each way, and January struck cuttings three inches and a half each way, can be planted in without field culture by June 1. But by all means plant out into the field all cuttings coming from the propagating bench later than the middle of February. If you can have your bench for young stock arranged to give a gentle bottom heat for a few weeks after coming from the cutting bench, the plants will show grateful appreciation. This is not necessary, but it is desirable. During this period weeding and stopping should be carefully attended to. We make it a rule to go over the young stock once a week regularly and then stop or cut back only those plants that are really ready for the operation. When a plant is ready for stopping it will be brittle and can be snapped off very readily, and this method cannot be too strongly advocated, since the knife will carry disease from one plant to another. At this stage the plants are very tender and disease is most easily transmitted.

Removing to the Field.

About May 1 the young stock is ready for the field. Benched plants can be taken up with a trowel with a good ball of earth, slightly pressed together to keep it intact. Place in flats and take to the field. Let one man or boy distribute the plants about where they ought to go in; this can easily be determined from the adjoining row. Another follows with the trowel, with which he makes the hole with a single stroke, inserts the plant and presses firmly into place without dropping the tool. The rows should be sixteen to eighteen inches apart and from eight to ten inches in the row.

Weather conditions at this time of the year are uncertain and the work should be so planned as to get as many plants as possible out before a rain. In sandy soil without a bottom, and in dry seasons, a Wittbold or Skinner watering system is very beneficial in the field. Neither is expensive to install and the benefits are out of all proportion to the cost of installation.

After the plants in the field become well established, stopping should begin again and continue weekly to within a week or ten days of lifting time. Use a hand wheel cultivator to keep the weeds in check, and mulch the soil to conserve the moisture. If artificial watering has been resorted to, cease the operation long enough before lifting begins to ripen the growth.

Rebenching the Plants.

In our locality, lifting begins from July 15 to August 1, according to the quantity of plants to be benched. At this time have a convenient number of crates, eighteen inches wide and three to four feet long, prepared. Spread the bottoms with one or two inches of wet moss, to keep the roots moist until planted in. Two men with spades dig on both sides of the plant simultaneously, and lift. A third shakes off the soil, inserts the roots in a bucket of water and places them in the crates with roots standing on the moss.

When the plants are lifted from the crates the roots are shaken out so they will spread, and a man on either side of the bench does the planting by making a hole with the hand or trowel, spreading the roots out evenly, bringing the loose soil around the roots, jumping the plant up and down gently to distribute the soil particles among the roots and then firmly pressing in, leaving a shallow depression around the plant to receive the first few waterings. The plants should not under any circumstances be set lower in the bench than they were in the field. Observing this caution will save many a loss by stem-rot. Care should also be taken to have the smallest plants on the south side of the bench and the largest in the center or north of the center of the bench. By winter you will be able to distinguish but little difference in the size of the plants.

During the planting-in period the glass should be heavily shaded with a clay wash squirted on the glass with a syringe, to cool the houses and prevent wilting.

The Soil for the Bench.

And now let us take up a matter that has been omitted, the soil for the bench. If you can secure top soil from a pasture where the soil is loamy and to the feeling velvety, you have an ideal carnation soil. We do not mean to say that carnations cannot be grown on any other kind, for the writer has seen most excellent results secured from widely divergent textures of soil. We merely mean that the soil mentioned requires the least skill to get good results. When you have secured the soil, remove four or five inches of turf; place in piles grass side down, with one-fourth good cow manure, during the fall preceding the time wanted. Chop down and work over several times during the winter and spring, add a 4-inch potful of air-slaked lime to one barrow of soil, run through a coarse mixer and it is ready for use. If this is impracticable, take any good loam that contains no decaying vegetation, work it over several times to germinate and kill the weed seeds it contains and wheel on the benches, after spreading an inch and a half of well decomposed manure on the bench bottoms. Add the lime as with the compost.

Resuming the treatment of the plants, syringe lightly several times a day and, as the plants take hold of the soil, gradually remove the shade. From now on water the entire bench, and after the weeds have been thoroughly disposed of, a mulch of spent manure mixed with light soil will be beneficial in retaining the moisture. Syringe once a week on bright days throughout the season, to keep down red spider. Fumigations of nicotine products every two weeks will keep aphis in check.

Proper Feeding.

If the soil has been well enriched, further feeding will be unnecessary until the first crop of flowers has been harvested. Then, after a week or two of rest, a light mulch of sheep manure, with one-tenth part of dried blood added to give a generous surplus of nitrogen, may be given to hustle the growth along. This may be followed two to three weeks later by a dressing of wood ashes to ripen the growth. After another interval a dressing of bone meal will materially assist the development of the second crop of buds. This rotation may be continued to the end of the season, by increasing the quantity according to the growth of the plants. Towards spring a mulch of rotted cow manure may be added. Among the commercial fertilizers as good a combination as we have yet found is 500 pounds of bone meal, 200 pounds muriate of potash and 100 pounds nitrate of soda, the latter two well pulverized and the whole well mixed and applied at three-week intervals at the rate of a handful to two rows halfway across the bench.

In conclusion let me say that this is far from being an exhaustive treatment of the subject. It would be impossible to give one within the limits of such a paper. Every grower will find it necessary to adapt his cultural methods to his local conditions, and these he can only find out by actual experience.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

For a Luncheon Table.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a luncheon table in the style most popular with the "smart set" in early spring. The center-piece is composed of three ladies' hats crushed into irregular shapes, all filled with the same variety of flowers. Corner-pieces are omitted in this style of decoration, as arranged by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia.

FUNERAL WORK.

The Broken Column.

The comment on the alleged broken column pictured in the REVIEW of January 16 anticipated my criticism of the manner in which the top is finished; but I still have to disagree slightly with the writer of that comment when he says the broken top should be filled with flowers of a deeper color than the body of the column. While I do not often advise the use of what may be called architectural floral work, the florist is occasionally called on to manufacture it; and when he does, his imitation should resemble the object copied as nearly as is possible with the material at his command.

I venture to say that the common idea concerning a column is of one composed of white marble; and the flowers used should be of that color, and all of the same kind; such as white carnations, for instance. These should be arranged to form a fairly smooth surface, as is seen in the ideal column; and the broken top should be of the same color, but finished rough and uneven to represent a real break.

In our own practice, if we use white carnations for the shaft, we sometimes finish the break with tufts of sweet alyssum to give the desired roughness.

Columns seldom spring directly from the ground, or from a stone floor, but are set on a base which is usually of the same material as the column itself; and this should be indicated in the finished design, below which the ambitious florist may with good taste add a sub-base composed of any material he may choose, decorated with any kind or kinds of flowers and greenery thought suitable, as his taste or the lack of it may suggest.

While the shaft should be of one color, and smooth, it is allowable to throw or twine a slender festoon of foliage or flowers or both around the column; but this should be very slight, and show what it is meant to represent, and so used as not to obscure the main feature.

The Wreath.

A recent issue of the REVIEW contained a picture of a wreath on which the mechanical part of the work was nicely done, but which showed a fault very common with this design as usually made. That is, the foliage and flowers used in its construction were allowed to extend too near the center of the circle, thus partly obscuring the form of the piece and making it look too much like a flat and formless body of flowers and leaves.

The wreath is the simplest and most satisfactory formal design that can be used on funeral occasions, being appropriate for either sex and all ages and conditions, but should be used of fairly good size. When it is necessary to use a size that is smaller than it should be, the line of flowers should be narrow enough to still show its form. This rule will apply to any small design, because, if it is necessary for the artist to explain what his design is meant to represent, someone has made a mistake.

I have been surprised occasionally when judging at flower shows to see what inartistic affairs are sometimes entered and exhibited, evidently with the expectation of winning prizes.

So-called pillows, say, the flowers used in which seemed to have been cut exactly to the same short length, set in straight lines, perpendicular to the surface they were inserted in, and so far apart that they seemed unable to communicate without a telephone, and with the shining tin foil showing between. W. T. BELL.

TROUBLE WITH ORANGE TREE.

I have an orange tree that looks nice and healthy, which was in a tub, and I put it in the ground in the greenhouse. It is full of blossoms every spring and they form oranges the size of marbles, and then fall off. Will you please answer in the REVIEW what the trouble is?

E. L.

From your query it would seem probable that if the tree flowered well, but always dropped its fruit at an early stage, either the soil was too dry or, as is more likely, the soil is sour and lacking in drainage. I would advise lifting the plant carefully, keeping as many roots intact as possible, and grow it in a tub if it is not too large. You will have root conditions more under control in a tub than a bed, on which latter are probably standing other plants, the watering of which will keep the soil soggy and wormy. If you prefer to plant out again, remove the soil to a depth of at least two feet, and put in stones, broken brick or coarse cinders as drainage. Use fibrous loam, dried, lumpy cow manure and bone meal for compost, adding some coarse sand and broken charcoal to keep it porous and sweet. In such material your plant will thrive and should perfect its fruit. Do not keep the plant in a heavily shaded position. Oranges want abundance of sunlight. C. W.

ORCHIDS IN ROSE HOUSE.

Could a few orchids be grown in a rose house to bloom during the winter, and what is the best variety? How about watering and syringing? When is the period of resting and what is the proper treatment then? F. D. B.

A rose house temperature will suit a good many varieties of orchids. Among cattleyas, C. labiata, blooming in October and November; C. Percivaliana and C. Trianæ, in season during December, January and February, and C. Schroederæ, flowering in March and April, can be recommended. These will do well hung up near the roof and may be in pots, pans or baskets. Their resting period is after flowering, when only sufficient water to prevent shriveling should be given, until the new growths and roots are pushing, when the supply can be gradually increased. The plants like plenty of air, especially in summer, and will require some shade from March to November.

Dendrobium nobile and its various forms, D. Ainsworthii and D. Wardianum, are some of the many fine and easily grown dendrobes for winter blooming. Their season is February and March. These will be better removed to a cooler and drier house when the growths are completed, where they can be kept on the dry side until flower nodes appear, when they could be placed in the rose house again. They like plenty of water while growing and enjoy syringing overhead in bright weather. Such lælias as L. anceps and L. autumnalis, if they can be grown during summer in a carnation temperature, with but little shade, and placed in a rose house in November, will do well.

Many of the cypripediums would do finely in such a house all the time, if they could have a piece of bench and be given necessary shade in summer. A few reliable, free blooming sorts are: C. insigne, C. Leeanum, C. Spicerianum and C. villosum. Cœlogyne cristata would be a useful variety, blooming in February and March. Oncidium ornithorhynchum, O. tigrinum, O. varicosum Rogersii, O. incurvum, Phaius grandifolius, Zygopetalum Mackaii and Vanda cærulea are others which can be recommended. The majority of those named can be suspended from the roof. The cypripediums would do better on a bench, as would the phaius and zygopetalums. Potting or rebasketing is best done after the flowering season. Watering can be safely done with the hose on all occasions. If you do not wish to shade the glass for the orchids, perhaps you have another house you could grow them in during the hottest months. If you can grow good roses, you need not be afraid to try orchids.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cannas.

It is too early to divide and start canna roots, unless you want some to bloom in pots for spring trade. It is surprising that these showy plants are not more cultivated in pots. There would seem to be no good reason why commercial growers could not make good use of them at Easter. Certainly a pot carrying two or three stalks of blooms is very effective, much more so than a number of other plants commonly grown. If you want to have a few in bloom for Easter, lose no time in starting them in a brisk heat. Do not divide to single eyes, as you would for outdoor planting, but leave clumps which will give two or three growths each. Flower the plants in 7-inch or 8-inch pots, gradually accustoming them to cooler conditions as the flowers open. Customers purchasing cannas in pots have not by any means thrown their money away, for they can be bedded out later and will soon send up additional shoots in rich ground.

Look over your stock of canna roots. Perhaps they are under a bench where drippings from the daily waterings are starting them to grow. Move any such plants to drier quarters. If you want to raise seedlings, the present is a suitable time to sow the seeds. The majority of growers do not trouble about seedlings, but if you are short of stock and mixed assortments will suit your customers, seedlings will answer very well. Then there is always the prospect, though a rather remote one, that you may raise something that will beat anything yet in commerce. The seed of named varieties comes fairly true and is offered occasionally. Seeds should be soaked in warm water for twenty-four to thirty-six hours; then cut off a little of the shell. Sow in flats or pans of light, sandy compost and plunge in a brisk heat. The little plants are not long in appearing. Pot them off when large enough to handle.

Mignonette.

Do not neglect the benches of mignonette. Perhaps you have picked a fine crop of robust spikes and have given the plants but little care since doing so. Mignonette will produce excellent spikes for a long time yet if properly cared for. Rub off any weak shoots. Support those which have taken the lead. If they become bent and crooked you cannot sell them. Keep the soil clear of weeds. If you have not given any top-dressing, sprinkle some pulverized cow or sheep manure over the surface. It will provide some food in liquid form for the roots and will also attract them to the surface. Mignonette, like the majority of plants grown in benches, enjoys some liquid stimulant. Once a fortnight is as often as it will be required yet. Keep the temperature at night down to 40 to 45 degrees and, other conditions being right, there will be plenty of this popular flower for many weeks yet.

Lobelias.

Perhaps you carried over a few pots of that useful little trailing, flowering plant, Lobelia speciosa. If so, get in a good batch of cuttings without delay. For hanging baskets, rustic work, window boxes and vases, this pretty dark blue lobelia is very effective. You can raise seedlings if you have no stock plants to propagate from. These, however, will not give you as fine a lot of plants as those you get from cuttings, neither are they so uniform in color. The dwarf lobelias, which are so fine for carpet bedding in Europe, are unfortunately not successes here, except in shore and mountain resorts, where the moisture-laden air and cooler conditions are more to their liking.

The newer race of tall lobelias make excellent pot plants for spring sales. The flowers are much larger than those of the other sections named and attain a height of nine to twelve inches. There are now several colors of Lobelia tenuior, or ramosa as this new class is termed, including dark blue, pale blue, white and rose. For bedding out these lobelias are also very useful, being of thinner growth than the speciosa and gracilis section. They do not rot off in hot, moist, cloudy weather, as the other varieties do. Lobelias have fine seeds and a thin dusting of sand is all the covering they require.

The perennial Lobelia cardinalis is a beautiful border plant. It is the most brilliant of all our herbaceous plants. It is a popular fallacy that the Cardinal Flower must be grown in moist ground, as it is generally found in such locations in a wild state. It grows splendidly in any good garden soil, and by sowing seeds in heat now, some of the plants will bloom in the field the first year. All will do so the second year, and customers seeing them in flower can hardly resist the temptation to try one or two.

Sweet Peas.

The splendid sunshine which was vouchsafed to us during the major portion of January was ideal for sweet peas. The early batch, which has furnished flowers since Thanksgiving, is still in heavy crop and will produce excellent sprays for a long time yet. A good supply of water is needed, and as this early crop is now exhausting the soil, afford them liquid manure, also a surfacing of some well rotted manure. Look out for that insidious foe of sweet peas, the red spider. It is most likely to attack them in the hottest part of the house, near the heating pipes. Use a fine sprayer on the hose if it appears and do not give it any quarter.

Seeds of any of the sweet peas, sown now, will come in very useful in carnation houses or wherever there is room to plant a few. They will give a nice lot of flowers in late spring, at which time they always sell well. It is better to sow in flats and transplant, or in small pots, rather than to drop a few seeds here and there among other plants and expect them to make satisfactory headway. A few good sorts to sow now are: White, Dorothy Eckford; pink, Countess Spencer or Gladys Unwin; orange-pink, Miss Willmott; red shades, Queen Alexandra or Phyllis Unwin; lavender, Mrs. W. Wright or Frank Dolby; striped, Blanche Ferry; mottled blue and white, Helen Pierce.

Antirrhinums.

Antirrhinums carry magnificent spikes when well grown. Their keeping qualities in a cut state are excellent, and as their culture is not difficult, it is not surprising to find them increasing in popularity. Plants which have followed chrysanthemums will be starting to give a few spikes. Keep them tied up, for twisted stems are of little value. If you want extra strong stalks, it is better to rub off all the shoots on a plant but three or four. Attend to the disbudding of these, as a swarm of side shoots will appear, which will largely weaken the flower stalks if left on. Mark some of your finest plants and propagate stock from these now. Plant them outdoors in May and you will get vigorous cuttings from them for next winter's crop.

Seedling antirrhinums possess greater vigor than those raised from cuttings, but do not give such uniform excellence of spikes as the latter. Neither do they come so true from seeds. Antirrhinums will run out in a few years, however, and it is necessary to start fresh seedlings and save the best of these for cuttings. It is yet a little early to make a sowing for outdoor culture. The first week in March will do.

Cyclamens.

The little cyclamens raised last fall must not be neglected. They should occupy a light bench in a house kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night. Do not allow the roots to become too matted in the pots before giving them a shift. Stir the surface soil occasionally, and give them space enough so that the leaves do not touch. Crowded plants now mean inferior ones at flowering time. If your old plants have been grown for late winter sales, they will now be starting to flower in a cool house. Do not attempt any forcing. If you want nice, stocky plants, which will hold their flowers erect, they must be grown cool; 45 degrees at night is ample. Some good growers run them even cooler. As the pots will now be full of roots, a pinch of Clay's Fertilizer, alternated with liquid manure, will prove beneficial. Once in ten days is often enough for stimulants.

Brief Reminders.

Spiræas for Easter can now be started. If bench room is scarce, place them under the stages for a week or two.

A batch of cuttings of sweet alyssum will give you nice plants to propagate from again in March and April.

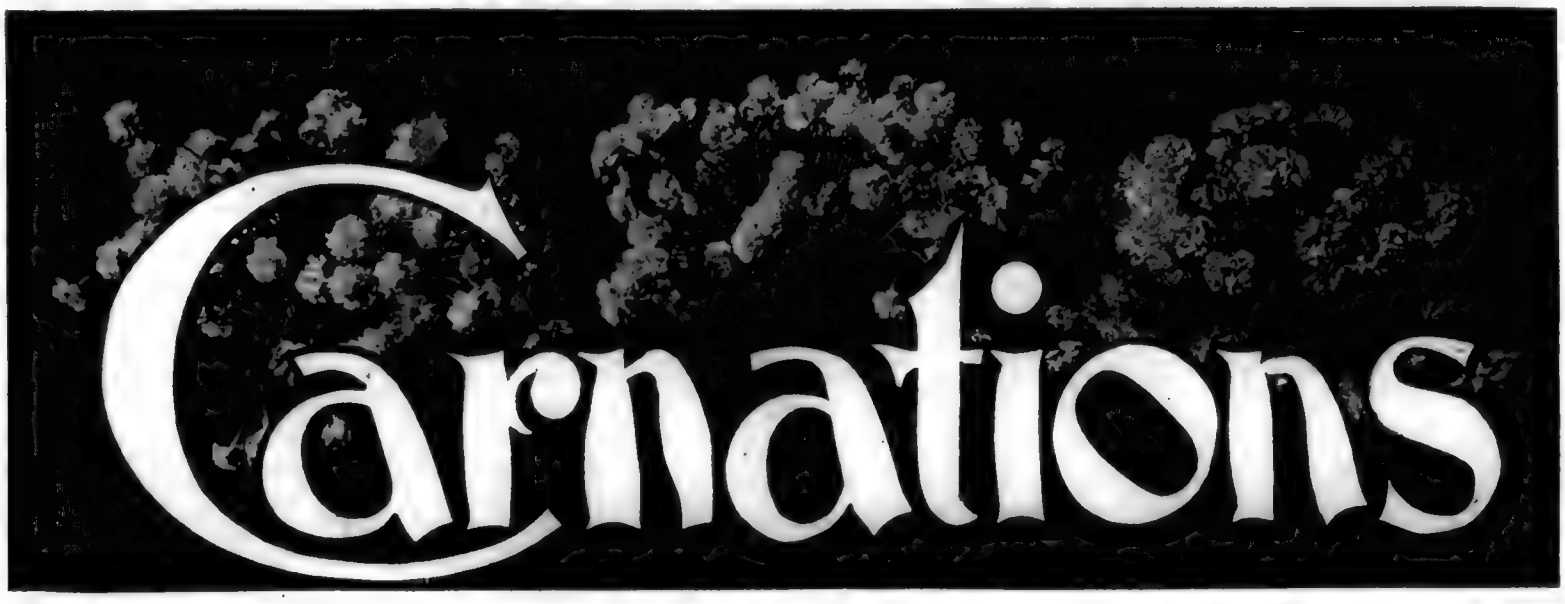
Look out for mildew on rambler and hybrid perpetual roses. Keep the steam pipes dusted with sulphur and avoid cold drafts.

Any of the narcissi can now be started. It will be unnecessary to draw them up in the dark after this time.

It is much too early to start azaleas, acacias, rhododendrons, lilacs, Azalea mollis, Staphylea Colchica and genistas for Easter. Keep all these as cold as possible.

Your Easter lilies cannot afford to be neglected. Give those which promise to be too early a cooler house. If your plants are eight to nine inches high, they are all right. Those less than six inches high will need a warmer house.

Rambler roses for Easter should have been housed before this time and be breaking freely in a temperature of 50 degrees at night.



If you have neglected to sow smilax, Asparagus Sprengeri and Asparagus plumosus nanus, do so at once.

If you grow tomatoes to follow your violets, it is time to make a sowing in flats in a warm house.

Put in tops of any geraniums needing a pinch. You cannot have too many of this most valuable of all bedding plants.

Carefully water the Lorraine begonia leaves in the sand. They should soon be sending out roots now.

Never neglect fumigation, if you do not wish aphis and thrips to cause you trouble.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Disseminating Novelties.

Most of the disseminators of new carnations have begun delivering the young stock, and it is interesting to note the difference in the quality of the cuttings and the way they are handled. The old hands at the disseminating business have long since learned the wisdom of sending out only strictly first-class stock, but there are here and there growers who are having their first experience at the game, to whom the 12 cents apiece is too alluring to let slip if it can possibly be held onto on the least pretext. To them the matter of 12 cents is the paramount issue. This is entirely wrong, as they will learn sooner or later if they continue to raise and disseminate seedlings. To the veteran the first and most important thing is to have his variety "make good" after leaving his place, and he allows nothing to stand in the way, either in painstaking work or in sacrifice of inferior cuttings. To him every snip of a cutting, be it ever so small and weak, does not represent 12 cents, nor does he keep counting so many cuttings as so many dollars. Of course, every disseminator should and does want to get as much out of his variety as he can, and he is entitled to all he can get, as long as he delivers honest value for money received.

Shipping Inferior Cuttings.

We will leave out of the discussion, for the present at least, the question of cuttings being properly rooted. The offense, as far as I have observed, has not been along that line. It has been in the selection of the cuttings. One batch in particular, which came under our notice recently, contained mostly cuttings which must have been taken from the upper part of the flower stems, the very first shoots which did not show a bud, and most of them had bladeless stems from three-fourths of an inch to over one inch long. No experienced grower would expect to keep up the vitality of his stock with such cuttings, and no such cuttings ought ever to be put in sand. No buyer should be expected to accept and to pay for such weak cuttings and no variety should be subjected to such abuse. Both are entitled to better treatment. That the disseminator is more or less responsible for the success or failure of his variety after dissemination is a fact which cannot be denied. At least he is praised or censured by the trade in accordance with the behavior of his variety, and his success with such ventures in future depends very largely on it.

The Right Sort of Cuttings.

Now, I realize full well that no man can guarantee that a variety will do thus and so for another grower; yet he can do much toward that success by supplying strong, healthy cuttings, cuttings which will, with ordinary good care, grow into strong, sturdy plants. If a variety, on account of variation in soil or climatic conditions, fails to prove satisfactory, he is not to be blamed. But for a grower to propagate just anything that will strike roots and to send out such weak cuttings that they cannot possibly make strong plants, even with the best of care, is not only rank folly, but an outrage on both the variety and the purchaser. In such case the failure of a variety must be charged directly to him.

On the other hand, however, you must not be too exacting when you purchase a new variety. Do not demand that each cutting should be absolutely of the very top grade. If the cutting is fairly well rooted and has good vitality, and if it will grow with ordinary care into a first-class plant, then you should be satisfied. We sometimes hear it said that when one pays 12 cents per cutting he should get fine stock. That is true, but it is no more true in this case than it is when you pay only 2 cents. The extra you pay is not for quality in the cutting, but it is for quality in the new variety. It was earned long before the cuttings were put in the sand. So, if the cuttings are as strong and well rooted as you would demand of the standard varieties, then you have no cause for complaint. A. F. J. Baur.

SPLIT CALYXES.

We are having trouble with our carnations and write for information. In almost every instance the calyx bursts. The plants are looking well and the buds are coming freely. They were planted in rich soil and then heavily mulched with well rotted manure. We have been keeping them rather on the dry side. The house is rather cool, sometimes as low as 40 degrees. T. & C.

You will have to change your treatment considerably before you will be able to stop your carnations from bursting the calyxes. To allow the temperature to run down to 40 degrees occasionally will cause almost any variety to burst, especially if it happens after a warm, bright day. Such carelessness is entirely inexcusable. Running them too much on the dry side will aggravate the trouble, too. At this time of the year the plants should be in a robust condition, with the soil full of roots, and overwatering is not likely. Your plants will enjoy a liberal supply of water, just so you do not keep the soil soggy. The thing for you to do now is to give close attention to the ventilating and heating, and to handle them otherwise as if you wanted them to grow. Water liberally, though not excessively, and keep the temperature between 6 p. m. and 7 a. m. as near 52 degrees as you can. During the day run them at 58 degrees on cloudy days and 65 to 70 degrees on clear days. Avoid sudden changes, but make the changes gradually, taking a couple of hours each morning and evening to change from one temperature to the other.

A. F. J. B.

STURDY STEMS, SMALL BLOOMS.

What causes large, healthy, fast-growing Lawson carnations, grown in a night temperature of 52 degrees with plenty of air in the daytime, to grow small, soft blooms, with perfectly sturdy stems? M.

I will need to have more data than you give here to be able to form any intelligent idea as to what ails your Lawson plants. I will say right here, however, that large blooms do not always grow on rank growing plants, nor do rank growing plants always produce large blooms. A well balanced diet will produce both a strong growth and large blooms, but a one-sided diet will produce the one at the expense of the other. So long as I do not know what you have done, I cannot suggest a remedy. One would need to know something about the texture of the soil and how it has been prepared, and what has been added in the way of mulch and of feeding, before any suggestion can be made. A. F. J. B.

A FAVORABLE SITE.

Would it be advisable to build a greenhouse where one must depend on shipping trade exclusively? I would like to utilize land I now have, two acres, near a natural gas main and with good water pressure. Should like to grow carnations and violets. I can reach Buffalo, Cleveland and Pittsburg in three or four hours. J. M.

So far as mentioned, the conditions are favorable for growing for the wholesale market, but many other factors would have to be considered, not least of which is the character of the soil. A large number of growers make more than a living growing exclusively for the wholesale markets. I have in mind a greenhouse foreman who six years ago had saved up the price of a piece of land suited to his purpose. He borrowed the money to erect two houses and started to grow roses. He has been steadily adding to his place until now he has an investment of $35,000 with only $7,000 incumbrance, besides having taken a living out of the business for six years. His is possibly an exceptional success, but there are plenty of others who have done well. F. R.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Gustave Wittbold.

Gustave Wittbold died January 24 at his residence, 1681 Buckingham place, Chicago, in the ninth day of an illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held from the residence Monday afternoon, January 27, with public services at the chapel of Graceland cemetery, where interment took place.

Mr. Wittbold was 37 years of age, one of the five sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Wittbold, and since his youth engaged in the business of the George Wittbold Co. He was born at the well known Wittbold establishment at North Halsted street and Buckingham place, Chicago, where Mr. and Mrs. George Wittbold still make their home. Having reached young manhood, Gustave Wittbold took up the retail end of the business and since the firm's interests became so large and so diversified, he has had charge of the retail stores. There have been five brothers identified with the business and this is the first break in the Wittbold family, for both father and mother, four brothers and three sisters survive; also Mr. Wittbold leaves a widow and two sons, the elder a boy of 7 and the younger a baby of 5 months. He was of quiet, kindly disposition and liked and esteemed by everyone in the trade. The funeral was largely attended and many floral pieces were sent.

Hauswirth.

John Edwin Hauswirth, Jr., son of Edwin and Pearl Hauswirth, and grandson of the late P. J. Hauswirth, died January 25 at Chicago. The boy was only 5 months of age. Under the circumstances the blow was especially severe, and the family has the sympathy of the trade.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Some More Prizes.

A silver cup, valued at $25, is offered by H. F. Michell Co., seedsmen, of Philadelphia, Pa., for fifty blooms of Kate Moulton rose.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., offers a silver cup, valued at $25, for the best new rose not in commerce, nor yet exhibited before the American Rose Society.

There has been mailed to every florist or grower, located in Chicago, a copy of the schedule for the annual exhibition.

August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill., is duly appointed chief of the executive committee to represent on the spot the American Rose Society.

Any entries, prizes or other matters should be forwarded to the secretary of the society.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

How about those printed letter-heads, Mr. Grower?

DRIVE thy business; let not that drive thee.—Poor Richard's Almanack.

HASTE makes waste; don't put it off till the last moment.

C. BETSCHER says cannas will be a scarce item this season; tubers undersized.

F. R. PIERSON says that there now are really only three white carnations that are worth the name—White Enchantress, White Lawson and White Perfection.

THOSE who propagate carnations for the trade report that there is a big call for rooted cuttings of White Perfection and that the probabilities are that the demand for this variety cannot be met this season.

SOME observers say that Aristocrat carnation pleases the growers better than it does the buyers. They say all growers think highly of it because it opens its buds so quickly, but that some buyers prefer some other shade of pink.

THE telegraph companies would lose quite a bit of business if the florists would order in season, or as soon as the need for ordering becomes apparent—and the florists would gain many times the saving in tolls by the better satisfaction it often is possible to give when a little time is afforded on orders.

FRA ELBERTUS SAYS:

"Most anybody can do business fairly well. Many men can do business very well. A few can do business superbly well. But the man who not only does his work superbly well but adds to it a touch of personality through great zeal, patience and persistence, making it peculiar, unique, individual, distinct and unforgettable, is an artist. And this applies to all and every field of human endeavor—managing a hotel, a bank, a factory—writing, speaking, modeling, painting. It is that last indefinable touch that counts; the last three seconds he knocks off the record that proves the man a genius."

THE man who complains that opportunities are no longer what they once were in the flower business has wholly lost sight of the fact that the field has broadened and is broadening every day. Different methods may be required, but the opportunities are better than ever. The fact is that when things are too close to them, some people overlook them altogether.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

A week of cold weather has had its effect on the market. Prices have stiffened under the influence of reduced receipts, particularly in the rose department, other crops being less affected and the supply adequate to all requirements.

The receipts of roses are materially reduced, Brides and Maids being specially shortened. But top prices have not advanced, except perhaps on some special fancy stock; the advance has been, as it usually is under such circumstances, in the lower grades, such as are used for funeral work. The local demand, although there is an occasional fair wedding decoration, is largely confined to funeral work, of which there has been a heavy run for several weeks. It is the out-of-town demand which gives the market its strength these days.

Carnations continue in fairly large supply. While the weather has been seasonably cold, the skies have been bright and carnations are not only plentiful but of fine quality. Prices continue considerably below what they were on this date last year, but carnation growers are receiving about as much money as ever, because crops are heavier. While some houses have been short on white, others have large receipts in this color and stock can be bought for orders, if quality and price are right.

There continue to be too great receipts of violets and quality is not high. Prices are extremely low. Valley is another item on which the market is weak; there is much new valley of low grade offered. All bulbous stock is abundant and meeting with but indifferent sales. Sweet peas of good quality go well. There are heavy receipts of callas. Orchids continue in large supply, principally cattleyas.

The market for hardy green stock continues good, much of this class of material entering into the funeral work.

St. Valentine's day comes February 14. It is a day which has shown great increase in the flower business in the last few years. Violets sell especially well that day.

Mardi gras, in New Orleans, March 6, will mean larger southern shipments.

January Business.

While January business has not been as satisfactory to the wholesalers as it might have been, the fault is found with other things than the total of sales. The volume of business in the market has not been far from what it was last year, but the prices of stock have been much cheaper; the volume of sales has been made from the greatly increased production.

From the grower's standpoint, he has shipped more flowers than usual in January, because of bright, mild weather, and received about the usual amount of money. He has, however, saved something in coal consumption.

The retailers were well pleased with the first half of January and have had no complaint to make of the latter half, although for the last two weeks there has been little but funeral work. With an average demand in January, the retailers have made fully as much money, if not more than usual, because of the cheaper wholesale prices of cut stock.

Greenhouse Building.

Aside from the large ranges which Peter Reinberg and the Poehlmann Bros. Co. have in contemplation, and the extensive rebuilding to be done by George Reinberg and others, it appears that there will be much building this season on the part of the smaller growers. The cheapness of glass is one of the strong inducements to build. What the season holds forth in the way of greenhouse building is shown in a report by the John C. Moninger Co., which says that in January estimates have been sent out on more jobs than in any other month in the history of the concern. It furthermore is stated that the estimates are not on wild cat schemes, but on additions of two or three houses for established florists.

Various Notes.

The sympathy of the trade again goes out to the Hauswirth family in the death of Ed Hauswirth's second child, a boy of 5 months, who died January 25.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, was a visitor last week.

Last season Bassett & Washburn received, from the W. W. Barnard Co., 5,000 bulbs of a new strain of Harrisii, coming from some undivulged southern island source. They like them so well that they doubled the order for this year. Arnold Ringier says the source of supply is a new one and the crop this year will be from 125,000 to 175,000 bulbs.

H. R. Hughes is preparing for the Valentine's business by sending out one of his characteristic advertising folders, with a Valentine's story and offering special Valentine's boxes of flowers at $1, $2 and $3 each.

Scheiden & Schoos say the business in carnation cuttings is starting fairly well.

F. F. Benthey reports business in January satisfactory.

C. W. McKellar looks for an early revival of the orchid market, when crops pass off.

A note on the untimely death of Gus Wittbold appears in the obituary column this week.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that Dorner's Winona is a popular carnation because of its color and its keeping quality. It is nearest true pink of any carnation in the market.

Albert Lies is sending Zech & Mann an extra fine cut of roses.

J. J. Kruchten says business in boxwood is steadily increasing.

A visitor last week was C. De Weaver, of St. Louis.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., has been ill with the grippe for a few days.

Each season Vaughan & Sperry sell quite a number of rose and carnation cuttings for their growers. They say that with plants, as with cut flowers, there is a good market for the new and up-to-date varieties, but no one wants Flora Hill, Portia and the other superannuated sorts.

The George Wittbold Co. has been consigning considerable quantities of cut orchids to the wholesalers during January.

Weiland & Risch have in mind another range of rose houses for spring, but have not yet fully determined the matter.

Clifford Pruner, who has been ill almost continuously since the flower show in November, is again feeling like himself and traveling for E. H. Hunt.

At E. C. Amling's it is reported that fancy sweet peas take as well as anything in season. The long-stemmed flowers are mostly spoken for in advance, while the short stuff goes slowly.

N. J. Wietor is planning to make his usual trip around the circle in February. He gets out once a year to see how the trade in Indiana and Ohio is progressing.

C. N. Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., says that white lilac is in such good demand that the daily supply is nearly always all ordered in advance. So far as reported, Emil Buettner has this specialty all to himself again this year.

Word comes from the east of a white sport of Killarney that looks to be the real thing. It is said that the Poehlmann Bros. Co. got next to a big block of it when the brothers, August and Adolph, were east last summer.

It is reported that the E. F. Winterson Co. has made and is making arrangements for a big stock of roses, shrubs and other plants for spring, and that it is planned to make so big a show in Wabash avenue that everybody will recognize the horticultural emporium when a block away.

A number of eastern carnation growers have made the rounds of the Chicago district in the last couple of weeks and several have said that the carnations at J. A. Budlong's looked as good as anything they saw.

Leonard Kill says that Peter Reinberg is doing exceptionally well on Beauties this season, in spite of the low prices. Another section of Beauties is just now coming into heavy crop.

J. P. Foley has recovered from an attack of the grippe.

The Chicago party at the carnation convention at Washington this week consisted of August Poehlmann, W. N. Rudd, J. E. Jensen, J. S. Wilson, A. T. Pyfer, P. Olsem, F. Lautenschlager and H. B. Howard. Nick Zweifel, Milwaukee, was with the main Chicago party going. With his usual carnation convention luck, Mr. Rudd's shipment failed to make the expected train and was twenty-four hours late.

E. C. Amling and party, who, as reported last week, had departed for southern California, arrived safely at Orange, Cal., early in the morning of January 24.

E. Wienhoeber has been ill with the grippe for the last week or two, but is now recovering.

I wish to take this means of expressing my appreciation of

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

During the period that I have been taking it I have found something in each issue of interest to myself and beneficial to my business. I always find a vast quantity of valuable information in your list of questions and answers. I am in the flower and vegetable business, devoting nearly all my time and labor to the greenhouse and hotbed feature.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The long delayed winter has at last arrived. January gave us clear skies and no snow until the 24th, which furnished us with a northeast snowstorm. Newspaper paragraphs about dandelions, daffodils, snowdrops and other spring flowers blooming outdoors are temporarily suspended, but the late arrival of cold weather, with the longer days we are now enjoying, will make the winter less felt than usual. Business remains fairly good in the flower markets. Roses are not yet overabundant and sell well. The number of American Beauties arriving is hardly up to the requirements. Richmond, Killarney and Chatenay are all selling well. The quality of Brides and Maids is now excellent, the colder and clear weather improving them. Carnations are abundant and have fallen in value, although white and light pink shades are selling better than the higher colored sorts.

Violets are not selling quite so well, but sweet peas clear out very well. Some of these are of splendid quality. In bulbous stock there are now several varieties of tulips in addition to La Reine, but the latter is in heaviest demand. Golden Spur narcissus is very good. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths are in good supply. Bulbous flowers are selling a little better than early in the month. In green stock, adiantum is not so good or abundant as it was, but Sprengeri and plumosus are each in ample supply and meeting with a good call.

Exhibition.

The first show of the year at Horticultural hall, January 25, was an interesting one, there being some fine exhibits. Carnations were the feature among cut flowers and filled several tables. For twenty-five white, Patten & Co. led with White Perfection; Backer & Co., second with the same variety, and third with Puritana. In scarlets, S. J. Goddard won with fine Beacons; Patten & Co., second with Beacon; Backer & Co., third with Firefly, a good seedling, its only drawback being lack of stem.

For daybreak pink, S. J. Goddard again won with Enchantress; second, Patten & Co., with the same variety. For light pink, Patten's Winsor beat Rose-pink Enchantress from S. J. Goddard; Patten, third with Rose-pink Enchantress. A splendid vase of Helen Goddard, from S. J. Goddard, took first for dark pink, Patten & Co. and Backer & Co. following with Pink Patten.

In the striped class, Variegated Lawson, from Patten & Co., beat Mrs. Patten, from Backer & Co. Goddard's Octoroon led for best vase of crimson; Harry Fenn and Octoroon, from Patten & Co., being second and third. Backer & Co. took first and second for yellow with Sunrise and Golden Glow, their own seedlings. William Nicholson showed a fine vase of Afterglow, not for competition. For 100 double violets, prizes went to H. F. Woods, H. F. Calder and W. B. Goodenow in order named, all showing Campbell; while for singles, H. F. Woods, Mrs. Frederick Ayer (George Page, gardener) and W. B. Goodenow won, all showing Princess of Wales.

For six Primula Sinensis, E. J. Nutton (J. Lawson, gardener), Dr. C. G. Weld (W. C. Rust, gardener) and Mrs. J. M. Sears (W. C. Ritchie, gardener) won in order named. Mrs. J. L. Gardner (Wm. Thatcher, gardener) had the best six Primula stellata, while for P. obconica the successful exhibitors were Dr. C. G. Weld, Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Mrs. J. M. Sears. In the way of miscellaneous exhibits, R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had a nice group of Lorraine begonias and Nephlolopis Whitmani. Wm. Davis had half a dozen splendid specimens of the same begonia. Mrs. Frederick Ayer had a pair of handsome Erica melanthera, beautifully flowered. Primula Kewensis came from Walter Hunnewell (T. D. Hatfield, gardener), Gen. S. M. Weld (Thomas Coles, gardener) and Dr. C. G. Weld. The plants in the largest pots were not well flowered. This primrose evidently does better in pots not exceeding six inches in diameter. T. D. Hatfield received honorable mention for Corydalis Wilsonii and Mrs. H. F. Durant (Thomas Watt, gardener) a similar award for Schizocentra elegans; the latter also showed Calceolaria fuchsiæfolia. W. A. Riggs had a fine vase of Leptosyne maritima; Mrs. E. M. Gill, a good general display; E. A. Wood, fine mignonette, and Walter Hunnewell, camellias.

Some splendid pans of Celsia Arcturus, from Mrs. J. M. Sears, received a cultural certificate. Dr. C. G. Weld also showed the same plant in pots, well flowered.

Various Notes.

Robert Cameron's lecture on "Annuals and Biennials" attracted a large audience to Horticultural hall January 25. The lecture was an interesting and exhaustive one, enjoyable to all who heard it.

Boston and vicinity sent a good delegation to the Washington carnation convention. The snow storm, January 24, came a little ahead of time. A warm rain storm was allotted them this year for a change.

Carnation night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 18, promises to attract a big attendance. Those who cannot attend and wish to exhibit novelties should address them, express paid, care of the club secretary at Horticultural hall, and they will be well cared for.

Quite a number of members of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club attended the annual banquet of the North Shore Horticultural Society at Manchester, January 29.

Welch Bros., who are selling-agents for Carnation White Fair Maid, report a good call for rooted cuttings. They are having a good trade in cut flowers and other supplies.

Mann Bros. and E. Sutermeister are handling some extra fine tulips, hyacinths and narcissi in pans at Park Street Market.

Celsia Arcturus, as shown at Horticultural hall, January 25, should prove worthy the attention of commercial growers. It ought to become popular as a pot plant.

Harry F. Woods, of Brookline, who has grown double violets successfully for several years, is this year producing splendid singles, also, the size and color being remarkable.

T. Harrison, of the English firm of Cragg, Harrison & Cragg, who visited America some time ago, has decided to locate in America permanently and will arrive about February 20. Mr. Harrison has sons located in and around Boston, who have been studying commercial floriculture for some time. W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The prices of carnations in the wholesale market do not improve. Shipments are increasing daily and no advance from present quotations seems possible. Four dollars per hundred will buy the best novelties, while the old time kinds have fallen at times to $10 a thousand. We have in abundance now all the varieties and the quality is excellent.

The best Beauties still bring 60 cents. Roses of all kinds hold at last week's prices. The supply hardly keeps pace with the demand.

Violets were a dump on Saturday and Monday. Great quantities of left-overs were cleared out to the sidewalk merchants as low as $2 a thousand. Even the best of them do not go above 50 cents a hundred.

The orchid asserted its domination Monday, one wedding using, if reports are correct, over 5,000 blooms.

There is a great abundance now of hyacinths, narcissi, freesias, sweet peas and mignonette. Lilies, too, and valley are beyond the digestive power of the market.

A gradual improvement is looked for from now until Lent. Society dinners are more and more costly, elaborate functions are given instead of the simple affairs of the beginning of the season and balls, weddings and musicales involve joyous floral decorations, which the bon ton florists are finding fully up to their expectations and capacity. Unique methods of distribution are in vogue, including floral sedan chairs, wheelbarrows, etc.

McKinley day has been better advertised this year than ever. The prominent wholesalers have suggestive announcements in their windows. We hope New York will do its share in honoring the memory of the martyred president. Too little interest is manifested by the florists themselves.

Various Notes.

The New York convention contingent, headed by President Traendly and Director Young, left for Washington at 3:30 Monday. Mr. Young declared the delegation was large enough to deserve a special car and that Caterer Nugent had not forgotten his duty as usual. The Northport, Flatbush, Cottage Gardens and Tarrytown representatives were on hand. If every city does as well as New York, there will be no complaints as to attendance.

Not to be out of fashion, the McManus headquarters had a little fire of its own last week that did little damage and left the orchid supply for the big wedding undisturbed.

On February 7 the dinner of the Orange Society will be held, and on February 29 the grand reunion of all the members of the New York Florists' Club, at the Hotel St. Denis.

The next meeting of the New York club will be on Monday evening, February 10. Exhibits of new carnations will be in order and the returning conventionists will have their say.

J. D. Cockcroft is averaging a shipment of over 2,000 carnations daily to Traendly & Schenck, Georgia and Harvard among the specialties.

The Traendly family celebrated the birthdays of two of their children Janu-

PETER REINBERG

1,580,000 feet of Modern Glass

51 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO

ary 27, one 15 and one 6 years of age, by a reception to about fifty young folks of Ocean avenue.

Mrs. John Raynor has been seriously ill with pneumonia. Her recovery is hoped for.

Joseph Fenrich has been unable to attend to business during the last week, the result of a serious accident from a collision with a street-car. It was a narrow escape, it is reported, but he is out of danger and will be back in his office before the week is over.

Nicholas Cocaliaries has sold his interest in the firm of N. Lecakes & Co. to the other three members of the organization. This firm has been very prosperous and has built up a large business, not only in green goods but cut flowers, under the able management of John Foley.

The Wholesale Cut Flower Association reports most gratifying results to date, with no withdrawals and every prospect of including every wholesaler in the business in due time. The combination may be safely characterized as a perfect success. The majority of the retailers now give it their unqualified approbation.

The wholesale plant market is holding its own. Some of those who withdrew temporarily during the dull weeks after Christmas are returning. Greater efforts to have the plants on exhibition fresh and frequently renewed are made, and gradually, since the sensible hour of closing has been advanced from noon to 4 p. m., the retailers are beginning to appreciate the convenience. With the advent of spring and the approach of Easter, the plant market will take on new life.

Mr. Rennie, who was expected to take a position as manager with a New York seed house, has accepted an offer from a Boston firm, and J. R. Russell, formerly with Vaughan's Seed Store, has joined the force of W. W. Rawson & Co., of Boston.

Mr. Chadwick, formerly with Thorburn, has accepted a position with a seed store on Barclay street, New York.

Robert G. Wilson has had a wonderfully successful winter with weddings, receptions and funeral work, his big force being kept continually busy. His store at the corner of Greene avenue and Fulton street is far ahead of any Brooklyn store in beauty and convenience and artistic decoration. While his greenhouses on Greene avenue are now completely refitted with the Wilson concrete patent benches and under the management of G. E. Layton, formerly with Dummett & Wagner, of Mount Vernon, this branch is proving a most profitable venture.

Last week T. Wahlgren, a gardener on the estate of James Burden, Jr., Westbury, L. I., was shot in a desperate fight with a burglar and was reported dying in the Nassau County hospital, in Mineola.

The American Nursery Co. has been incorporated here, by Frederick W. Kelsey, Theodore Foulk and William Flemer. The authorized capital is $100,000.

A corporation has been formed by Elizabeth Mackintosh, James Malone and C. A. Flynn, with a capital of $2,500.

At the store of A. M. Henshaw a large plate glass window was broken by a falling safe, causing a loss of about $200.

The Szechenyi-Vanderbilt wedding is all over. The Rosery officiated as floral decorator. The count ordered his bride's bouquet and bridesmaids' muffs at Thorley's. The bridal shower bouquet was of white orchids and gardenias. The muffs were made of acacia blossoms, suggestive of ostrich plumes and the court flower of Hungary. It is interesting to read the metropolitan dailies' description of the floral decorations. Apart from the fact that an avenue of large palms and a bank and grotto of the same were used, with some thousands of lavender orchids attached in charming decorative effects, the rest may be left to the imagination.

A. T. Boddington's numerous salesmen report a most successful canvass, with optimism everywhere, and the business outlook is encouraging. This seems to be the verdict of all the seedsmen of New York.

Never have such beautiful catalogues been sent out, and never so many as are being mailed this season.

Evidently this branch of horticulture has faith in the country and its resources and is preparing for a busy year. The financial skies grow clearer weekly. The money situation is no longer a menace to enterprise and legitimate business again receives the confidence to which it is entitled. The panic and the agitation of a presidential year together cannot stem the tide of this nation's prosperity and progress.

F. W. O. Schmitz, of Prince Bay, has received in fine condition his big importation of azaleas from ten to eighteen inches in size, well shaped and true to name, and all the popular varieties.

A. T. Boddington has a quarter of a million cannas of every popular shade and variety for this season's demand.

H. H. Berger & Co. report a rapidly growing business and their sales of tuberous-rooted begonias, caladiums, gladioli and gloxinias are far beyond any former season. The new store at 70 Warren street is a model of convenience. Some fine Japanese trees of 100 years and over have lately been on exhibition there.

Bridgeman's Seed Warehouse is busy day and night, and the only worry there seems to be is the need of thirty hours a day to keep ahead of orders. Nevertheless the Rickards Bros. manage to take in all the banquets and dispense melody, while their list of friends and customers increases.

D. Smith & Co., the new wholesale house at 111 West Twenty-eighth street, are enthused by the addition of several growers to their force, and quite encouraged, they say, by their experience to date.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. may well claim one of the handsomest and most complete seed stores in the country. They announce an active demand for gladioli, caladiums and Gold Medal strain begonias, with a complete stock of everything for the spring trade.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The last week the wholesale market showed signs of steadiness and the retailers report a fair trade. The wholesalers were not so overstocked as the week previous, both local and shipping demand being better than at any time since the holidays.

Fancy long-stemmed American Beauties, also the shorter grades, are in good quantities. Roses in other varieties have been none too plentiful, especially white. Bride and Ivory are in big demand.

Carnations sold well. These, too, in white sold out clean almost every day. Today, January 27, there is a large demand for red and pink, the retailers buying for McKinley day. Tulips, jonquils, Harrisii and callas are plentiful, also Romans, Paper Whites and valley. California violets are selling for $3 per thousand this week.

George Waldbart had the decorations at the Central high school for the mid-season graduating exercises. Mrs. Ayers, Miss Newman and others in that neighborhood, too, were kept busy for this occasion last Friday.

Carew Sanders, one of our oldest florists and nurserymen, now over 80 years of age, called on friends in the trade last week. Mr. Sanders kept close to home, near his son's place on Delmar avenue, and took advantage of the mild weather for a trip downtown, and we were all glad to see him looking so well.

Eggeling Floral Co., R. J. Windler, and Conrad Bergsterman, on South Grand avenue, report a good trade all this month. They all have pretty window displays.

Charles D. Hecht, is doing well with his carnations and sweet peas.

Werner Bros. are sending to this market a good quality of California violets and carnations.

The members of the St. Louis Florists' Club should not forget the club meeting, which takes place February 13, which will be of some importance. Carnation growers will find it of great interest to them, as Secretary Bentzen says a great many growers of new varieties have promised to send blooms for their benefit. Also quite a few carnation questions will come up for discussion. Invitations are general for all in the trade to attend.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society held its annual meeting on Tuesday night, January 21, in the Masonic Temple building on Grand avenue. The meeting was fairly well attended, but not as large as expected. The election of officers was the main feature, which resulted as follows: President, Edward W. Mallinckrodt; first vice-president, Leonard Matthews; second vice-president, Alex Waldbart; third vice-president, J. B. Gazzam; fourth vice-president, S. H. Gundlach; treasurer, Fred C. Weber; secretary, O. G. Koenig. The executive committee this year will consist of eleven members: Henry Young, chairman; C. B. Nicholson, F. C. Weber, A. Meyer, Jr., A. Jablonsky, O. G. Koenig, F. W. Brockman, C. C. Sanders, Theodore Miller, F. H. Meinhardt and Emil Schray. All the above served in the same capacity last year.

The executive committee will meet soon and determine on the plans for the annual spring flower show.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business during the last week was nothing to be very proud of. There was just about enough doing to keep one's mind from dwelling on the slowness of collections. As a lucky thing, too, the supply of flowers was not very heavy, for had they been so there would have been a pretty good sized glut on. As it was, the demand was about equal to the supply, but it took some tall hustling and talking to move the stock. There did not seem to be any special cause for the lack of demand. There was just a sort of lull, which we have at times in this business and which, as a rule, lasts but a few days. From all appearances it has already seen its end, for this week opened with a rush that was very promising.

The prices of the various flowers have not varied much from the last report. Of course the lack of demand had a tendency to take the backbone out of prices, and they weakened considerably, but there was not a decided drop in any line and at the present time they are right up to the notch again. Roses seemed to feel the effects more than carnations, and Beauties received the worse knock of all. But as that is all over now, we hope, we can forget it quite readily in the face of a good demand and rising prices.

The month of January has given us an unusual amount of sunshine. There has been scarcely a day when the sun has not been shining a good portion of the time. This has made itself felt in the quantity of flowers being cut. It is to be expected that a large number of blooms have thus been forced open, which ordinarily would not have been fit to cut till sometime in February. With February anything like what it usually is, with its dark and cold days, we can look for a shortage of stock and high prices. Last year the prices of flowers during this month rivaled those of the holidays. From present prospects this season will prove no exception; so the grower with a good crop just coming in can look for good returns.

Rodgers has put them to grading in places which have long been an eyesore, and the rock which is being thus quarried will be broken up and used in the spring to repair the old driveways and to make new ones in the parks. There will be considerable more money to spend on the parks this year than last and Mr. Rodgers is promising all sorts of innovations.

The Market.

January business in this city seems to have been better than expected. According to the expressions of different florists, the outlook for the balance of the season is not as bad as predicted some time ago. Everything cleans up well at the local commission houses, and what more can be expected? There has been considerable good funeral work, using up much of the best stock on the market.

Special Meeting of Club.

The president of the Detroit Florists' Club called a special meeting of its members January 21, to settle the question of a local show. The members did not turn out as well as might have been expected with such an important matter before them, but after a short discussion on the subject it was finally decided to give up the thought of a show, for the coming fall at least. A motion to this effect was made by Ed Beard and seconded by the secretary. Mr. Beard was really in favor of holding a show, but there was little enthusiasm among either the growers or the store men, and so he thought it better to give up the idea, for, without the proper push at the back of it, the failure of a show was already certain.

Several of the members were neutral. Mr. Taepke was one of these. He could not see where any real benefits were to be derived from a show, either for the grower or store man, but he promised that if the rest were in favor he would help all he could.

J. F. Sullivan gave quite a lengthy talk, in which he expressed his views very plainly. He spoke of the interest, or rather the lack of interest, which the people of the present time took in the development of flowers as compared with those of fifteen years ago. At that time many people were as well posted on the newer varieties as some of the florists. This was one reason why Mr. Sullivan thought that if flower shows could not be made to pay in those days they could never be made profitable at the present time.

Some of the other members also expressed their opinions on the subject. Most of them were either opposed to holding a show or were neutral.

Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens, is by far the biggest shipper of stock to the Detroit market. La Detroit roses, as grown by him, meet with a big demand and bring fine prices. In fact, this rose is one of the best pink ones we have on this market.

W. B. Brown is well pleased with business up to date this winter. He had several decorations, not large ones but profitable, besides his share of bouquets for the numerous debutantes of the season.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

W. A. Wettlin, of Hornell, N. Y., finished rebuilding in time for the busy season. He has now one of the handsomest and most convenient stores in the state. A very noticeable feature is the low window stage, constructed of tiling on a concrete base, with a gentle slope to allow of drainage. The store proper is 25x55 feet, and connects with the houses. The floor is mosaic, the counters Tennessee marble. A solid cement cellar runs the entire distance. While the cost exceeded the estimate, he says it is the best advertisement he could have.

A. H. Woeppel, Corning, N. Y., is picking Rose-pink Enchantress carnations that sell at sight. He has great success with Enchantress and intends planting nothing but this family another season. Having no room to spare for testing new varieties, he, together with many others of the craft, depends almost entirely upon the report of those who can experiment. Mr. Woeppel has several seedlings that possess merit.

George R. Clark, of Scranton, Pa., is installed in his new stores at 124-126 Washington avenue, each one separate but communicating, with a total width of fifty feet by 150 feet deep. One is fitted up as a flower store, the other as a seed store, this branch being the largest in this section of the state. It gives him great facilities for handling a rapidly increasing business.

Richard King, the busy superintendent of the United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., says he does not remember when crops were so short as they have been this season, considering that the weather has been favorable. Quality has been first-class, especially in Beauties. He speaks highly of Lady Bountiful, considering it one of the best white carnations yet sent out. He notes that Lawson has been in greater demand than Winsor or Pink Enchantress. Lawson, both pink and white, is very fine. Shipping business is steadily increasing, the result of sending out good stock.

H. N. Hoffman, of Elmira, has added a farm of thirty acres to his valuable property. This gives him one of the best tracts of land in the Chemung valley, with abundant soil for roses and carnations. W.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There has not been any great change in the market in the last week. The supply is not heavy, though enough to meet all requirements. The crop of Beauties, which is not very heavy, is moving slowly and at times is hard to sell. Red roses are in good demand and bring fair prices, which is due mostly to the cut, which has fallen off considerably in the last few days. Brides and Maids are a trifle scarce and sell up very clean. There has been a good deal of funeral work of late. The demand for Brides and white carnations has been good. Killarney and Chatenay sold well and were good stock at all times.

The Drexel ball last week, for which the William Graham Co. had the decorating, used quite a lot of Killarney and pink carnations. The effect was very striking and much admired. Wild smilax and also quite a number of string smilax were used extensively in the decoration.

Carnations are not selling very well. Most of the growers are cutting heavily, and if the bright weather continues, the shipments will be much larger. Winsor, Beacon and Enchantress head the list, with Lawson coming next, which is fine at this season. White Perfection is also fine and sells well. The flowers are of enormous size. There are too many violets, both single and double, and they are sold for almost any price. Valley and mignonette are moving slowly. Tulips, which are not very long-stemmed as yet, are hard to move. The demand for daffodils is fair and they are used in quite a number of the smaller decorations. Sweet peas and freesia in the fancy grades are in good demand. There is also plenty of lavender peas, which are good stock. Cattleyas and gardenias have shortened up and there is not quite enough to fill the demand.

Smilax and plumosus are moving off in good shape, as is also cornflower, of which the supply is limited. Lilies sell fairly well and are especially fine.

Various Notes.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving some very fine gardenias, which are good stock.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are receiving a large lot of Japanese air plants, which are sold before they reach the store. They also sent some goods to Manila, India, South America and England. The spring trade among the florists is very heavy.

John Ruppert, who represents the H. A. Dreer Co., is back and reports business as being very good in the east.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. had a nice order for Killarney last week.

D. Connor, who represents the Lord & Burnham Co., was among the many visitors at the carnation convention at Washington.

Berger Bros. are receiving some of the best Brides and Maids coming to this town, which is a great credit to their growers.

Harry Crawford, who is the grower for the Secane Greenhouses, says they will need a wagon for the carnations which they will cut in the next few weeks.

William P. Craig reports the demand for the stock of Mrs. Jardine to be very heavy, which goes to show that she has a great many admirers.

Edmond A. Harvey will deliver an address before the Florists' Club Tuesday evening, February 4, on "The Indoor Cultivation of Carnations." Mr. Harvey is a member of the firm of Albin Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, Pa., who have achieved an enviable reputation as growers of the divine flower. He has advanced ideas on cultural points.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has offered a silver cup for fifty blooms of Miss Kate Moulton, to be competed for at the American Rose Society's annual meeting in Chicago next spring. Now, Mr. Farenwald.

The Wm. Graham Co. decorated Horticultural hall for a large private ball January 24. Mr. Graham arranged a novel idea, with a canopy of smilax as the chief feature. Killarney roses were also freely used. This decoration elicited much favorable comment.

M. Rice & Co. are enjoying the usual amount of business for January, with excellent prospects for the Easter trade. Their Easter novelties are arriving daily.

Charles F. Krueger is sending out very prettily illustrated postal cards, showing his stand in the Reading Terminal from different viewpoints. The cards give a good idea of the tasteful decorations.

CULTURE OF GREEN ONIONS.

I wish some kind reader of the REVIEW would tell me the proper way to treat onion sets for green onions. What is the best variety? Should they be started in the greenhouse and transplanted to the hotbed or coldframe? Are they of any commercial value? Also what variety of radishes is best for this purpose? T. G.

The best variety of onion sets to grow green onions from will depend upon the demand of the market to be supplied. The Egyptian or winter onion set, when planted outdoors in September in the north, will produce green onions early the coming spring. This variety of onion set, however, does not make anything more than a scallion, but its earliness makes up for the lack of bulb. In some localities the Potato onion, or English Multiplier, is a popular set for making early green onions. It is planted outdoors as early in the spring as possible. In the south the Shallot is used largely for the same purpose, the difference in climate compared with the north making the time of planting different. In general the White Bottom onion set is the one that market gardeners use to make the early green onion. The Yellow Bottom set is also used, but, owing to the color, is not so salable as the white.

Green onions meet with a ready sale on all markets. The expense of getting them to market will be the main factor in determining whether it will pay to grow them. Onion sets may be forced in greenhouse or hotbed, but it would be a waste of time to transplant them. In a general way it may be stated that the onion set, when planted to make green onions, is invariably an outdoor crop.

The Scarlet Globe radish is the best turnip-shaped variety for forcing in the greenhouse or hotbed and the Woods Early Frame is the best long variety.

LEAF BURN ON LETTUCE.

Enclosed you will find some lettuce leaves. Can you tell us what the trouble is and what to do for it? The lettuce has seemed to be all right until now, and it is heading up and the leaves on a great many are getting this way. We have found a small worm on some of it, but do not know what to do for it. We are growing a bench of it in a house with other stock, at about 55 degrees. R. H. L.

Your trouble is a very general one, commonly called leaf burn, which is brought about mainly through unsuitable atmospheric conditions. I am not at all surprised that you should have trouble with this disease, seeing that you are running the temperature of your house at 55 degrees. It is impossible to do lettuce successfully at as high a temperature as this; 45 degrees is as high as the house ought to be allowed to run for this crop while fire heat is being employed. The term small worm is very indefinite; there are so many insects which might be so termed that would be apt to be found on or around your plants, some harmful and others harmless, but I fail to see where any of them could possibly cause or have anything to do with the disease under consideration. If you must maintain a temperature of 55 degrees for the other stock grown in the house, you had better cut out the lettuce altogether, especially head lettuce. The Grand Rapids variety, which is not a head lettuce, will succeed at a higher temperature, but 55 degrees is too high even for this.

W. F. Allen has discontinued his seed store at Salisbury, Md.

Did you know that canners in Utah pack 30,000 cases of peas per year?

Some odd lots of onion seed are being secured at fairly reasonable prices.

The Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., is introducing Big Four tomato and Apex cucumber this season.

January has given the mail-order seed houses more business than it usually does, possibly because the catalogues were out earlier than usual, but shipment has been somewhat delayed by slow deliveries.

Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, says that there is every prospect of a banner season's business. The farmers in the west have the money to buy all the seeds they can use.

Visited Chicago: W. J. Fosgate, Santa Clara, Cal.; C. C. Wheeler, representing the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal. Other California growers are on the way and are expected to reach town within a few days.

That the Livingston Seed Co. can command attention for any new tomato it sends out is shown by the fact that its 1908 novelty, Coreless, is listed in almost all the general seed catalogues of the season.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., are this season introducing a new musk melon named Grand. It originated with H. B. Davis, a grower near Jackson, five years ago, as a sport from Osage.

IN voting to hold its next convention at Detroit, the executive committee of the Seed Trade Association also voted that each participant pay for his place at the annual banquet. Possibly the gentlemen did not care to impose upon the hospitality of a non-member to the extent that would likely be the case under the former arrangement.

THERE is still a scarcity of the red flat varieties of onion seed. It is thought that there is enough for all legitimate purposes, but the holders do not seem to be willing as yet to let go of it at prices that the purchaser will pay. The next month will have to do the adjusting of this matter, as by March seed will have to be planted.

ONION sets are being shipped out in car lots at present and the stock is reported to be in good shape. The market shows no sign of breaking and the demand for later shipment will be heavy, judging from the inquiry for prices from localities that have not yet stocked up for the spring trade. High prices are bound to rule this spring. Normal January conditions prevail in all lines of the seed trade, according to the reports at hand from the best authorities in the different lines. An unusually heavy trade is expected in what is termed fill-in business with the jobbers. Most of the wholesale lists are out and a general feeling of stability prevails. The catalogue houses report good returns so far and the seed purchasers seem to be in fairly good financial shape. Market garden trade in the central west is fully up to the average January expectations and a feeling of satisfaction with conditions is general.

SEED TRADE DISCLAIMER.

At the meeting at Chicago January 21 the following resolution was adopted:

The Executive Committee of the American Seed Trade Association recommends that its members still further emphasize and publish its Disclaimer by having it printed on all stationery, including letter-heads, bill-heads, quotation sheets, acceptances, labels and packages, and by disseminating same to all merchant customers possible and supplying merchants with Disclaimer Cards to be hung in a conspicuous place in the salesroom.

Cards will be furnished by Secretary C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., free to members on request, and to others at 10 cents per copy, postpaid.

The disclaimer is as follows:

John Doe & Co. give no warranty, express or implied, as to description, quality, productiveness, or any other matter of any seeds, bulbs or plants they send out, and they will not be in any way responsible for the crop. If the purchaser does not accept the goods on these terms, they are at once to be returned.

CARING FOR LAWNS.

A good lawn is a highly prized possession, whether public property or owned by a private individual. And in like manner there is dissatisfaction when a poor lawn is in evidence. Handsome trees are objects of interest and unceasing sources of pleasure; shrubberies and flowers are likewise means of enjoyment, but all of these are enhanced in their value when they are surrounded by grass, varying in its extent of surface as conditions demand, but unvarying in verdant beauty.

A great deal is accomplished in the keeping of a lawn in good order by careful attention to the routine work in summer, but there is more than that needed in order to have good grass year after year. Perhaps the most essential requirement is supplying the roots at the proper time with nutriment which will enable them to act so that exhaustion will not be apparent in the meagerness of the resulting verdure.

Fertilizers in some form or other should at frequent intervals be applied to lawns, and there is probably no better time for their application than the winter or early spring. When stable manure is applied it should be well rotted before its application, not because there may be less nutriment in its component parts when fresh, but because a larger quantity of the rotted manure finds a way to become available for use and because there is less likelihood of its being the means of causing objectionable vegetation in the lawn.

When a fertilizer is applied to a lawn in the form of well rotted manure or loam, with the addition of bone meal, the grass is not only benefited directly by means of the chemical properties thus applied, but the matter, when simply considered as solid substances, aids the roots of the grass in the material it affords for their extension and preservation. The benefit thus obtained can be increased by rolling the grass thoroughly in the early spring.

Wood ashes contain properties which many people believe are capable of producing grass of a richer and darker color than any other fertilizer. However that may be, there is no question but wood ashes are very helpful to grass, but great care is necessary in their application, because, if heaps of the ashes are allowed to remain here and there, burnt patches will surely result.

When lawns are in such a condition that it becomes necessary to sow seed in order to make them look presentable, and when a thorough renovation is out of the question, a good plan is to mix bone meal, or whatever other fertilizer is used, with screened loam and apply it in the early spring, taking care to allow an extra portion to fall where seed is needed. Then sow the seed, raking it well in and finishing with a rolling with a heavy roller. M.

CLIANTHUS DAMPIERI.

My only desire, in writing this for publication in your esteemed paper, is to make known the result of a few personal observations on the culture of Clianthus Dampieri. This plant is reputed to be very capricious; yet I am convinced that if its culture, which is by no means difficult, were a little better understood, one more remunerative and splendid plant would thus be supplied to our retail trade, both for pot culture and for planting out.

The necessary material is not so very considerable; a good propagating house, with a warm propagating bed covered with a sash, is sufficient.

Sow at the end of February or first days of March some Colutea arborescens or Caragana arborescens, preferably the latter, in a small flat or pan, and place it in a warm propagating house. As soon as the seedlings are large enough, prick them out into 2-inch pots and plunge these in a warm propagating bench that has a steady bottom heat of 65 to 70 degrees.

As soon as the cotyledons are well developed you may sow out in the same manner your Clianthus Dampieri seed, which will be up in three to five days. Now you are ready for grafting. Pull out delicately your Clianthus Dampieri seedlings, cutting them with a very sharp knife, the same way as you do for cleft-grafting. When the scion is ready, insert it in a well made split between the cotyledons upon the colutea or caragana, being careful to take off their young shoots. If the operation is carefully finished, the graft will be calloused over the next day. Although not absolutely necessary, it is well to tie the grafts with very thin raffia. The grafting of clianthus, which may seem at first sight very difficult, is simply a little delicate and demands a rather steady and sure hand to be practiced with success.

When the grafting is done, the plants are plunged back again in the warm propagating bed, under the sash. During the next five or six days the only care they require is to wipe off from time to time the water that will have gathered on the glass of the sash. After those five or six days you may commence to give a little air. Above all, be careful that the plants do not suffer from being dry. If the sun is too strong for the newly grafted plants, place some newspapers over the sash, until the young plants are able to endure the free air and light of the propagating house. From then on they need no more shading; on the contrary, they ought to be exposed in the best lighted place in the warm house.

As soon as the grafts are well developed and strong, you may proceed to pot them over into 3-inch pots, which you may either replace in the warm house, or in an outside prepared warm frame that has given its first heat. Keep the sashes closed and shaded for a few days; then gradually give air and light. The watering is very important and needs a little precaution. If the air is dry and warm, a syringing with not too cold water will greatly benefit the young plants. A light vaporization of tobacco extract at intervals will keep the plants clean of insects, but do not syringe the clianthus with any extracts, or they may spoil the nice glaucous appearance of the leaves.

Before the plants become potbound shift them into 4-inch pots, plunge them in a closed frame, water and syringe liberally, after which the same care is given as at the first potting over.

When the pleasant days arrive, you may get your plants inured to as much air and light as possible, which is very essential for a good result. To prevent the plants from creeping on the ground you may commence from now on to tie them up on bamboo or wire sticks.

The best soil for clianthus is two-fourths good, loamy soil, one-fourth well rotted manure and one-fourth sharp sand, well mixed. The object is to have a good, permeable soil, through which water, light and heat can easily penetrate. At the end of May the plants will be quite robust and some will show their first flowers. That is the time to give to those that are to be grown in pots for retail trade their third and last potting over. It is no more necessary to have heat; an open frame, with a little shading for a few days, will do.

Two good varieties for commercial use are Clianthus elegans and C. rosens.

Louis Soldan.

LARVAE IN NARCISSUS BULBS.

Several horticulturists in the neighborhood of Toulon, France, who grow narcissi outdoors for the cut flower trade have experienced a serious loss during the last season, owing to the damage done to bulbs by a destructive larva of some insect. The matter has been studied by M. Valéry Mayet, professor of entomology at the Ecole Nationale d'Agriculture at Montpellier. He has reared the larvæ in question, and finds them to belong to a beetle named Malacosoma lusitanicum, belonging to the family Chrysomelidæ.

This insect is abundant in the central region of France, and at the beginning of May is common on the flowers of various compositæ. The larval form has hitherto been unknown, but it seems likely that it normally lives on the bulbs of species of grape hyacinth, probably on those of Muscari comosum, although this has not yet been definitely ascertained.

The larva or grub is white and is about five-eighths inch long and one-twelfth in thickness. The head is small, and is provided with two three-jointed antennæ and with mandibles, which are only adapted to deal with soft tissues.

Several of the grubs are often met with in a single bulb, but sometimes, when the attack is a severe one, there may be more than a dozen living in a more or less decomposing mass. The larvæ enter on the pupal stage during the early part of April, and the perfect insect escapes about the beginning of May.

M. Valéry Mayet advises the taking up of the bulbs and a disinfection of the soil by means of bisulphide of carbon, applied at the rate of 240 pounds per acre. As a further measure, says a French writer, it is recommended that the beetles themselves should be collected and destroyed, which can easily be done, as they do not readily fly, but allow themselves to be caught without any difficulty.

THE GRAPE-LIKE FUCHSIAS.

A certain class of fuchsia has appeared on the continent of Europe which is meeting with general favor as material for planting in beds, groups, and as hot plants, says Karl Kiskoven, in Möller's Deutsche Gärtner Zeitung. These are free flowering, and possess other good properties, besides flowering throughout the entire summer season. The newer varieties, many of which possess flowers of light colors, flower a second time at a late part of the season. The older of these grape-like bunch fuchsias have more or less tender foliage, and by a lowering of the temperature lose many of their leaves, whereas the newer varieties do not fail in this respect, and are considerably improved in growth and in duration of the flowers. This class is particularly adapted for cultivation in pots, as the plants quickly make numerous shoots and the bright tint of the flowers contrasts admirably with the dark-colored foliage of most of the varieties. The blooms appear in terminal panicles, as in F. corymbiflora and F. serratifolia. The most valuable variety is Koralle, so called from the coral-red tint of the blooms. The leaves are metallic-green; growth, vigorous and stately. Göttingen has flowers of a cinnabar-red tint, which are of large size, and the foliage dark in color. The variety Fräulein Bonstedt has rosy-red flowers, these being white at the tips of the sepals, and very effective as seen against the light green foliage. Perle has rose-pearl sepals, and the tips are almost clear white, the flowers being double and freely produced and the leaves brownish-green. Gartenmeister Bonstedt has flowers of an orange-red tint, which are of considerable size. The plant has resemblances to Göttingen, but is of an extraordinarily bushy and compact habit. Eros has rose-pink blooms, the points of the sepals being of a lighter tint, and the foliage dark green. While all the other varieties have pendent blooms, in this one they stand erect, and afford a peculiar charm.

NEW ROSE
MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

The following testimonials are from some of the most critical men in the trade in New York:

New York, Jan. 7, 1908.

Mr. W. P. Craig, Forty-ninth and Market streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

I have deferred writing to you regarding the pink rose Mrs. Jardine in order to give it a thorough trial. I have this to say about it: I find it an excellent keeper, that its color remains true, and without a particle of doubt it will fill a long-felt want. It is in itself a dignified rose; its color is of the most refined pink, it seems to improve in use, its odor is sweet and refreshing and my only regret is that it is not in the market at the present time. Yours sincerely, CHARLES THORLEY.

New York, Jan. 17, 1908.

Mr. W. P. Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: We wish to thank you very much for the samples of rose, Mrs. Jardine, sent to us. We certainly think it is a fine addition to the rose family, and in point of fragrance is queen of them all. We find after keeping these roses two or three days they are really in better shape than the time we received them, and think it should certainly become very popular. With kind regards, we remain
Yours truly, TRAENDLY & SCHENCK.

New York, Jan. 16, 1908.

Mr. William P. Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: We cannot too highly commend your new rose, Mrs. Jardine. The sample cluster which we had in our window two days, then shipped to Washington, is still in perfect condition, and the color is as clear and true pink as when first received. In color, foliage, length of stem, fragrance and durability Mrs. Jardine leaves nothing to be desired. Very truly yours, J. H. SMALL & SONS.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18, 1908.

The Mrs. Jardine roses specified above are still in excellent condition; their quality and durability are without precedent. J. H. SMALL & SONS.

New York, Jan. 15, 1908.

Mr. William P. Craig, 1305 Filbert street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: Pardon delay in replying to yours. Regarding the new rose, Mrs. Jardine, I have been desirous of thoroughly testing this new introduction to the rose family and to be better able to criticise its characteristics. I regard Mrs. Jardine as possessing most excellent qualities. The rich pink shade in the bud, becoming a lighter color as the rose develops, together with its delightful fragrance, gives it very pleasing attributes, and consequently it is a most desirable acquisition. The strong wood, which is nearly thornless, together with the bright, vigorous foliage, is invaluable and commendable to the retail florist. Its durability and lasting qualities when cut (very necessary characteristics for success) are almost unrivaled.
Respectfully, ALEXANDER McCONNELL.

New York, Jan. 9, 1908.

Mr. W. P. Craig, 1305 Filbert street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: We find the Madame Jardine rose excellent in every way, opening very double and holding its color exceedingly well. It has a color which is a very true pink and a most popular shade. Its stem shows very good strength until the last, and the size and color of the foliage are very good. Thanking you again for the samples of this splendid rose, we remain Very truly yours,
GEORGE M. STUMPP.

New York, Oct. 16, 1907.

Messrs. Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Delaware County, Pa.

Gentlemen: At the meeting held Monday evening, Oct. 14, the vase Mrs. Jardine exhibited was greatly admired and was awarded a preliminary certificate by our committee on awards. I wish to add that I placed some of these blooms in my window Tuesday morning, and they were indeed a great attraction. It is one of the most pleasing roses I have seen in years, and I prophesy a great future for it.
Yours very truly, JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

A free, strong growth, with good foliage.

A variety that can be easily grown.

Large flowers on long stems.

Delicious fragrance.

Distinct, pleasing color that will sell at sight.

A Rose that will hold its color in the dull days of December and January.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

MRS. JARDINE is not a chance seedling, but was raised by Messrs. Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland. This firm has not only given us Liberty and Killarney, but has sent out more new roses of merit than any other Rosarians in the world. Over two years ago we spent three weeks in their trial grounds, and from three thousand seedlings we selected thirty-five varieties that we thought would be successful in this country for winter forcing. After testing these for two years we have selected one—MRS. JARDINE—which has with us, and which we think will with all good rose growers, fulfil all the qualities as stated above.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this new Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing. We have it both own roots and grafted plants, and in all stages of growth. As the demand for this superb novelty will be very large, kindly place your orders early, as we fill in rotation in March, 1908.

MRS. SOURCE OF TOBACCO DUST.

A dispatch to the Philadelphia North American from St. Nicholas, Pa., says:

"Thomas Speelman, who went to New York a poor boy, is home on a visit. While here he bought several farms and endowed the town with a public library. He is a rich man, all of his wealth having been accumulated through his Christmas present exchange.

"Immediately after Christmas Mr. Speelman sends his clients a letter notifying them that he is ready to take their Christmas presents either on a cash basis or in exchange for other articles.

"Mr. Speelman says that he annually gets hundreds of boxes of cigars which wives have given their husbands. These are not returned to the market, but are ground in the form of powder and sold to florists for killing slugs."

HARDY FERNS IN VERMONT.

Vermont farmers are said by a paper published in that state to have reaped an unusually large harvest last fall from the gathering of ferns in the woods for sale to florists. That industry has been of value to the people who live in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts for several years, and it has been broadening out of late. The claim is made that the pickers of the ferns can make at least $4 a day, as they can pick 10,000 ferns and sell them for 40 cents a thousand, when tied up in bunches of twenty-five fronds each. They are plentiful in the woods of New England, where the ground has not been disturbed for several years. Florists need millions during the winter, and the supply is almost entirely obtained from the fine growth of rock ferns or dagger ferns, or sword ferns, as they are called in different localities. October and November are the harvest months and the pickers roam the woods anywhere, regardless of the ownership. The business has not been systematized so much as yet that the owners of the forest lands put restrictions on their premises. That may come in the course of time, as it has already in the blueberry pastures and the walnut and chestnut groves of some localities. There is a cash value to all these products of the wilds that have been neglected for centuries.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—The trustee in the bankruptcy case of Alfred W. Lemke has filed his final account and the creditors will have their final meeting at the office of the referee February 3.

FARMINGTON, MO. — M. Butterfield, proprietor of the Farmington Nurseries, grows an excellent quality of carnations, including many 4-inch ones, and he thinks his success is largely due to the high altitude of this locality, the fine climate and also the red soil, which is richly impregnated with iron. Trade is good.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is quiet all along the line. The weather in the central part of California for the last week has been a succession of heavy showers, while that of the southern portion of the state has been distressingly dry. The temporary effect on business in the neighborhood of San Francisco has been to stop almost everything, with the exception of funeral work, and this has moved along fairly well.

Flowers are not very plentiful, however, even in spite of the fact that they are only in reasonable demand, for the weather has been so cloudy that they have not opened well. Carnations have stiffened somewhat in price, but it will require only a few days of sunshine to lower them in price again.

Roses, with the exception of Maids, are really scarce, and good whites and Beauties are in as much demand as they have been at any time this season. Violets are plentiful and excellent, and cost the stores at the uniform rate of 75 cents per dozen bunches. They are being used more freely than ever before and they fill in volume usually half a retailer's sales. Outside mums are about over for the season, and white narcissi have taken their place to a great extent in funeral work. The mums held on remarkably long, on account of the fact that we have had such a mild winter, but we shall see no more of them before next fall.

Daffodils and narcissi are quite plentiful, but the former will not be in full swing for several days yet. There is a scarcity of cut adiantum, and until the wild variety gets plentiful the florists will have to depend to a great extent on cut asparagus sprays.

Various Notes.

Joseph R. Jacques reports a good business in the line of wholesale florists' supplies. Mr. Jacques has filled a long-felt want among the local dealers for an up-to-date supply house.

H. A. Lewis and wife, of Russellville, Ore., passed through San Francisco en route to Los Angeles, during the present week.

H. Aebi, of Berkeley, Cal., has leased his greenhouses to a local Japanese company.

L. M. Barrett, of Berkeley, has associated with him S. E. and T. R. Barrett, and the firm will henceforth be known as the Fairview Nursery Co.

J. M. Holland has opened a store in the new free market on Shattuck avenue, Berkeley.

J. J. Kegley, for many years associated with the M. J. Wragg Co., of Iowa, has taken charge of the outside department of Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland, Cal.

John C. Walbridge will leave on an extended trip through southern California in a few days. G.

ANNUALS IN CALIFORNIA.

The growing of early annuals should interest the California plantsmen at this time. During the latter part of January it is late enough to plant asters, cosmos, gaillardia, stock, coreopsis and other easily grown and quick selling stock.

The great trouble with the growers seems to be that almost everyone gets the stock ready too late in the season to be in line for early planters. With the advent of a few days of warm weather, the buying public suddenly discover that they should have a flower garden and within the next day or two they have made a hurried canvass for such stock as they require. They never take into consideration the fact that it takes quite a while to grow salable stock, and that nurseries are not like grocery stores, in that you cannot go to the shelves and pull down the required goods.

The first part of April is early enough to plant hardy annuals, but after February 1, if the weather be at all salubrious, the calls begin.

A few words about the growing of hardy annuals. They should be started in flats under glass, and with a little bottom heat if convenient. They will grow without this, however, and make fully as strong plants after transplanting out in the open. No soft-wooded stock needs to be kept in seed flats over one month, and at that time they are ready to be transplanted into other flats and planted the usual distance apart. About four more weeks, on the average, elapse before the plants are ready for sale. They should be planted at the rate of about 100 plants in the ordinary sized flat. This appears to be the most feasible way of handling them and allows of just enough space without wasting any room. G.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—W. C. Cook, who was for some years with the Dunkley Floral Co., has gone to Montgomery, Ala., where he has taken a position.

CHRISTMAS ROSES IN POTS.

Good roots of Christmas roses come rather expensive to buy, says a writer in an English gardeners' magazine; otherwise, I believe, they would easily displace many of the so-called Dutch bulbs now so largely depended upon for winter decoration. But, personally, I do not consider Christmas roses are at all expensive if one considers all their good points. Just how many flowers a clump will produce is difficult to say, so much depending on the clump. A long lasting plant it is, too, the flowers hanging on for weeks, and being reinforced by a constant succession of buds and blooms.

I grow two varieties in pots, viz., Helleborus niger major, and H. niger maximus, and both are far ahead of the ordinary form of Christmas rose. H. maximus comes in later than major, and is the better flower of the two. I find that both the plants and cut flowers are appreciated in rooms, owing to the delightful perfume the flowers possess; a fact I have never seen commented upon. I always grow the plants two years in the same pot, and then split them up and plant them outside.

The Market.

Trade for the last week has been dull here; even funeral work has been light. There is a good supply of flowers coming in. Prices remain about the same as usual. Carnations bring 60 cents to 75 cents per dozen; roses $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail. Violets have taken a little move this week and are selling a little better. They retail for $1 per hundred. Sweet peas are arriving in limited quantities. They retail at $1 per hundred. Paper Whites are quite plentiful; these bring 50 cents per dozen retail. A few tulips and daffodils are coming; these fetch 60 cents per dozen retail.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain is receiving some nice Winsor blooms.

R. E. Nofftz had an attractive window display last week. He grows a great many bulbs throughout the season.

William E. Mosher is cutting some fine violets at his new place.

William P. Pierce, on Union street, is receiving some fine Boston Market carnations from his grower, William R. Hoxie, of Mattapoisett. Mr. Hoxie grows about 5,000 plants, including Fair Maid, Joost, Lawson, etc. Carnations are his specialty.

H. A. Jahn is still busy shipping cuttings of his new Lloyd. It still keeps up its crop of flowers and buds without any let-up. This is certainly a winner, a bread and butter variety in every sense of the word.

S. S. Peckham is busy putting in large batches of cuttings in the sand. He makes carnations his specialty.

Last week we had one of the worst blizzards in years. Snow fell and drift-

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE honeysuckles are well suited for planting to wire trellises.

THE Cranbrooke Nurseries, Birmingham, Mich., have ceased to exist.

CEDRUS Atlantica makes a fine specimen if given the room it needs.

FROM all parts of the country comes the report of strong demand for and short supply of two-year cherry trees.

FROM different parts of the country we learn of a serious mortality among large oaks during the last two or three years.

THE white spruce (Picea alba) is the one that can be most safely recommended for planting in exposed places near the sea-shore.

AT the nursery of J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., over twenty-five bushels of acorns in ten varieties have been planted since autumn.

JACKSON, MISS.—The McKay Nursery & Floral Co. has been incorporated, with an authorized capital of $20,000. The incorporators are A. B. McKay, J. F. McKay and others.

THE beetle which, a few years ago, threatened quick destruction to the elms all over New England, seems to have lost heart and gone elsewhere. At any rate, we hear but little of it now.

THE American Nursery Co. has been incorporated in New York city, with an authorized capital of $100,000. The directors are Frederick W. Kelsey, 150 Broadway, N. Y.; Theodore Foulk, Flushing, L. I., and William Flemer, Springfield, N. J.

ALTHOUGH the Scotch pine (Pinus sylvestris) is planted mainly because it is being recognized as an adaptable tree to varied conditions of soil and climate, it is also a tree by no means devoid of beauty of form when it attains fair proportions.

A SUITABLE vine for the covering of single posts or like objects of medium height in close proximity to dwellings, is wistaria in variety. These, besides effectually covering the object to be hidden, can in a short time be made to appear attractive specimens in themselves.

THE pecan has become an important specialty with the nurserymen in the south and there are those who assert that the English walnut would be an equally good thing for the southern part of the United States if growers were taught to graft it on the native black walnut stock.

THE Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., has bought the tract of twenty acres on which the nursery is located and is remodeling the residence for the occupancy of J. A. Young, president of the company. He says that business was never better for spring and that the future looks bright to him. The company makes a specialty of shrubs and perennials. Mr. Young says that florists in many towns, by planting specimens on their grounds, are able to take many orders for fall planting and call upon the wholesale nurserymen for the stock instead of growing it themselves.

THIS is a good time, when there may not be a great deal else to do, to get packing material in shape for easy handling when shipping time comes around. Boards likely to be of use should be sorted and laid away in piles; every nail should be taken out and all rusty nails put where no harm will be caused by them.

IT is not so much what a grower grows as what he sells that butters his bread. A good grower, if left to himself, may be a poor seller, which is not perhaps as bad as being a poor grower. It is much better to be a good grower and a good seller, too. The REVIEW will help you to be a good seller, because it is read by those who want to find out where the best growers are.

REMEMBER that a reasonable profit on a few thousand plants disposed of next spring means more capital to work on, with the probability of repeating the profit from that same capital the spring following. Marketable stock, unsold in a nursery, is much like a team of work horses standing idle in the stable. They may be the stronger for the work when it comes to be done, but it would be more profitable to have them constantly employed.

AN ARBOR-VITAE HEDGE.

I am thinking of planting some arbor-vitæ as a fence and also as a wind-break, and should like information as to the best soil and culture. Our soil is light sandstone. How far apart should the plants be placed? Is arbor-vitæ a success here in Pennsylvania? D. B. V.

Arbor-vitæ makes a good hedge and wind-break and thrives well all over this country. It likes a good, loamy soil, but it will grow in the kind of soil referred to in the query. It will be better, however, to dig a trench for the plants, deep enough to receive a liberal allowance of top soil mixed with some well rotted manure. This will give the roots a body to work on. Thereafter they should do quite well.

The distance between the plants must depend on their size when planted, if as fences or wind-breaks they are wanted to be immediately effective. For a hedge the plants, if small, could be placed about sixteen inches apart, or closer or otherwise, as seems desirable for the purpose in view. Larger plants need more room, but if the intention is to allow them to grow into each other it will be as well to plant them closely to begin with. Arbor-vitæ stands cutting back and pruning, a feature of it that commends it as much as anything else for a hedge, but it is also of such a habit of growth that very little pruning is necessary to keep it in shape.

When ready to plant, after the trench is dug and the soil is as already ad-

PRUNING.

Every man, before proceeding to act, should have some idea of what the effect of his contemplated action will be, because, for one reason, lack of such an idea will not save him from punishment if the result of his action is contrary to law. There is, unfortunately, no law of the land to mete out punishment to men who mutilate flowering shrubs when undergoing the annual butchering, dignified by being called pruning by the men engaged in the act.

How often do we see weigelias and many other beautiful flowering shrubs of like character robbed of their birthright by having their flowering wood cut away! Sometimes we see broad expanses of shrubbery composed of plants of many different species, caused to resemble a mammoth bundle of evenly clipped twigs stood on end during winter and early spring, with nothing much later but green leaves—and all that in most cases from a want of a proper understanding of the work undertaken.

No man of ordinary intelligence can be held blameless if he repeats such practices, more especially if he seriously aspires to make horticulture his life work. Pruning is always important work and should never be mistaken for clipping, or clipping for pruning. The object in pruning should be to facilitate the attainment of perfection in some form or other, but never to prevent such an end. Clipping is perhaps a necessary horticultural evil. M.

THE LIQUIDAMBAR.

The liquidambar is a beautiful tree when it is seen in a thriving condition after it has attained a fair size. Nurserymen sometimes advise planting this tree on low ground. I have had several planted on low ground where the drainage was far from perfect, with the result that for a number of years they made but little growth. I concluded that the wet condition of the soil was responsible for their failure to grow, from the fact that others planted at the same time on land that was better drained grew remarkably well, but with this drawback, that the growth made by the trees that thrived best invariably fails to ripen and consequently gets winter killed, whereas the growth made by the others does not suffer injury to speak of.

The liquidambar is such a beautiful tree that any one having trouble with it should persevere and keep on nursing it until the time comes when it will get so established that it will be able to take care of itself. M.

ADIANTUM FARLEYENSE.

Adiantum Farleyense succeeds best, according to a British grower's view, in good, yellow, fibrous loam, and a proportion of good leaf-mold, with an addition of crock siftings, charcoal and sand to keep the compost open. In the winter months the moisture should be reduced, both in the soil and in the atmosphere. An excess of moisture in the atmosphere causes the pinnæ of the fronds to damp, and this badly disfigures them. The plants should be kept at all times well up to the light; in fact, this is most essential to develop those beautiful tints of color which are seen in the young fronds when thus treated. I have not seen this fern do well when growing in peat, and it is devoid of that rich tinge of color noticeable in plants grown in the compost described. Liquid manure may be applied with safety to plants that are root-bound, and growing freely in the summer-time. If grown in small pots for table decoration at this season of the year A. Farleyense will always be admired.

PLUMOSUS AND OTHER GREENS.

When may the first cut be taken from plumosus if seed is planted this month, and how many strings are cut in a season?

How many sprays make a bunch, as quoted in the market reports?

Should cinders and drain tile be used in making beds on a hard clay soil? Can plumosus, Sprengeri and smilax be grown together, in a detached house twenty feet wide, giving the raised side benches to Sprengeri and the solid center beds to the climbers? E. C. B.

Seed planted this month should, if constantly kept in good growing condition, make nice plants for benching about a year from date. After the plants are well established in the bed, you may begin cutting a few sprays, taking care, however, not to cut the plants weak. They will gradually throw heavier shoots, which may be trailed for strings. After their season in the bed you can expect to cut about two strings per plant during a season.

A bunch, put up for market, should contain twenty-five sprays.

Cinders and drain tiles may be used to good advantage in preparing the beds. Plumosus, Sprengeri and smilax can advantageously be grown together in such a house as you have mentioned.

ALBERT F. AMLING.

STORED DAHLIA ROOTS.

If you find any dahlia roots that have signs of decaying, remove them at once, carefully scrape all decayed matter off, rub the newly cut part with a mixture of dry soil and lime and place back into storage, says the monthly bulletin of the New England Dahlia Society. See to it that the roots do not shrink or dry up; this will happen if you keep them in a place that is warmer than it ought to be. A good remedy is to cover your roots with newspapers and wet down the paper with a fine rose spray; this will produce enough moisture to swell up the roots and make them solid. Let in fresh air as much as possible, particularly during the noon hours of pleasant days, and do not allow mold to form at any time. If mold is present rub the infested spots with dry soil.

CARNATION SARAH HILL, ACTUAL SIZE.

SARAH HILL

The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

Either variety at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

SHARON, PA.

John Murchie is getting some good crops from his new range at West Middlesex, but the white carnation, Fred Burki, and its sport, a grand scarlet, were never better than now, at the home place and growing under the most adverse conditions. Both are splendid flowers, fully as large as Enchantress at its best and as free flowering. They sell easily around the holidays at $1.50 per dozen.

Sawyer & McDaniels have taken over the business carried on for many years by M. I. O'Brien.

C. B. Service has an attractive window. Flowers and fruit seem to go well together.

Fred W. Heintz does quite a business in the east end, which takes in a large territory.

It is rumored that the coming season will see a thoroughly up-to-date store opened here, with every facility for handling a first-class trade. W.

SMILAX WITH BOTTOM HEAT.

Will smilax do any better on a low bench with bottom heat than on a solid bench, and are old smilax roots, that have been in use for two seasons, of any value? M. E.

Your smilax will do far better in a solid bed and it would be a great mistake to use bottom heat for it. The old roots are not worth carrying over after the second year. They can be divided, but it is so easy to raise seedlings and they do so much better than divided roots, that they are to be preferred to the old roots. C. W.

NEW CARNATION

PRESIDENT SEELYE

The Unexcelled White

A Seedling from Mrs. T. W. Lawson and The Queen, now in its fourth year

A large, well-formed flower, long stemmed from the start, fragrant and productive, easy to grow, calyx does not split, and will do the best in a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. A money-maker for the wholesaler and excellent for the small retail florist who grows but a few hundred of each kind. The trade is invited to visit the greenhouses and see it growing. Every cutting guaranteed well rooted and free from disease. $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure gilt-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.
Strong established pot-grown plants, $9.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

PORCH BOXES AND LARGE BEDS.

What are the best blooming plants for porch boxes, also for large beds in public places? And what varieties would be satisfactory, planted together in June for summer blooming? M.

For porch boxes some of the most satisfactory flowering plants are: Geraniums, petunias, abutilons, nasturtiums, blue lobelias, ageratums, lantanas and the fibrous begonias, like Vernon and Erfordii. For large beds no other plants equal the cannas. A solid bed of one color is the most effective. If you want a little variation, you can edge a yellow bed with scarlet of lower stature, or vice versa. A few good bedding cannas are: Queen Charlotte, scarlet-crimson, banded with canary yellow; Egandale, soft red, bronze foliage; Charles Henderson, crimson; Florence Vaughan, golden yellow, spotted bright red; Alphonse Bouvier, brilliant crimson-scarlet; Pennsylvania, which grows six feet high, suitable for large beds, rich scarlet; Mme. Crozy, crimson-scarlet bordered with yellow.

Sometimes a bordering of some other plant, like Caladium esculentum, is seen round the canna beds, but if you use a dwarf variety of cannas for a bordering, it will do fully as well. In planting porch boxes you can use a few of the lower growing cannas, if there is ample root room for them. These boxes are usually filled with a mixture of plants. Zonal geraniums make ideal boxes. If you want some hanging plants, the ivy-leaved section can be utilized for the front. A few suitable geraniums are: John Doyle, S. A. Nutt, Jacquerie, Alphonse Ricard, Jean Viaud, Double and Single Grant, Mme. Jaulin and Beaute Poitevine. Solid boxes of petunias are very good and can be depended upon to flower all summer.

NEW ROSE

My Maryland

Best up-to-date commercial rose. Read what others have to say about it.

Among the many new roses of the year there is none which has impressed us more as being worthy of a thorough trial. It has been exhibited only as 294, being a seedling raised by John Cook, of Baltimore. A beautiful rose with an exquisite fragrance. In color it may be described as a soft salmon pink, which brightens up beautifully as the bud opens. We are intending to plant this rose in quantity.

A. N. PIERSON, Cromwell, Conn.

In answer to your inquiry what we think of your new rose, My Maryland, we would say that after seeing others we still believe that you have the best new rose of modern times.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Trade remains about the same as at last writing, stock in all lines being well cleaned up. Roses have been particularly scarce, it being impossible to fill orders. There have been more than the usual number of deaths lately, which means quantities of funeral work. Bulb stock is coming in freely and is a great help when other stock is scarce. Sweet peas, valley, lilies and violets are coming in freely and sell at sight.

Various Notes.

Frank Piggott, of Meyers avenue, on the west side, has an exceptionally fine bench of callas. They are well worth being proud of, as well as a bench of Boston ferns, which are hard to beat.

Guy and Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., are attending the carnation show at Washington, visiting Philadelphia and New York on their return.

C. B. Wilhelmy, of West Twenty-fifth street, has been on the sick list the past week, with a siege of grippe.

The funeral of H. Fiederman, president of one of the largest west side banks, used quantities of fine flowers. Both Knoble Bros. and the Ohio Cut Flower Co. had large orders.

Visitors: John Koning, of Baartman & Koning, Sassenheim, Holland; H. A. Bunyard, of A. T. Boddington's; R. C. Whitlaw, of Benj. Hammond Paint Co.

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

There has been no material change in the market since last writing. This is a long season for Washington and the social functions are drawn out, which makes quite a difference as compared with the rush of last season. We have had some remarkeble weather the last week. Wednesday was a fine spring day. On Thursday we had a heavy snow storm with high winds, and the thermometer down to 16 degrees above zero. Stock is plentiful, especially carnations.

Jas. L. Carbery, of Ridge road, has just completed a mushroom pit, 8x8x26 feet. He will grow mushrooms in connection with his other business. He is cutting at present some fine sweet peas.

J. J. Harty & Co., the wholesalers, have added a fine line of baskets and floral supplies to their business.

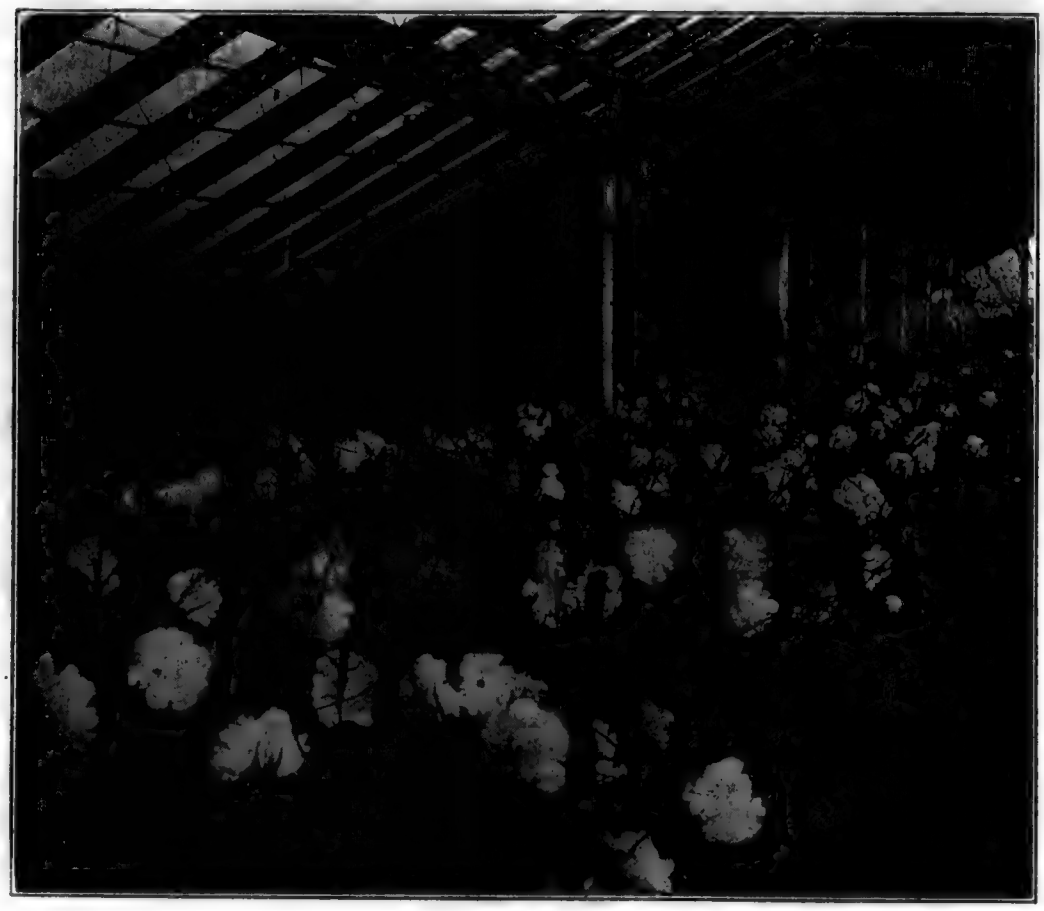
J. C. Reuter, wife and daughter, from Westerly, R. I., arrived January 25, to attend the convention.

O. O.

AUSTIN, TEX.

The winter here was mild up to January 12, when a severe norther caused a drop to 22 degrees Fahrenheit and severely hurt many outdoor plants.

Alfred Holm is closing out his business, to go to Corsicana.



The Hyde Park Floral Co. cannot produce enough carnations for its trade.

Olsen's Capitol houses are full of good stock.

The Seiders greenhouses are turning out a lot of carnations and pot plants.

Chas. Alff & Co. are filling all their benches with plants for spring work.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of The Florists' Review.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The beautiful spell of weather which has crossed the country was broken in Buffalo by a long snow storm, followed by a drizzling rain. However, the weather was elegant last week and has made Easter stock jump. Heavy shading has been applied to houses containing azaleas and such stock, which come so quickly. As a result of this weather the stock is being forced and still the market is not overcrowded.

Funeral work has been so plentiful as to take all the short roses, and in some cases the long stock had to be used. There have been an unusual number of deaths and we learned that one day last week broke all records for funerals at Forest Lawn cemetery.

Violets are showing the results of the warm spell which prevails over the east, for they seem to have taken that faded look. We hope they will last for Easter, but, judging from last year, we may have to sell sweet peas in their place.

Various Notes.

Conrad Forbach was in the city, visiting the different florists, last week. He is just as entertaining as ever and, after his few stories, went on his way, leaving everybody happy.

F. S. Hale, of Hamburg, Mich., made us a short visit last Sunday. Mr. Hale does the retail business of Hamburg, and although he only started a few years ago, has built up a fine country business.

Mr. Higgins, of R. M. Rebstock's, has been on the sick list for a few days.

Harry Bunyard paid a visit in the interests of A. T. Boddington. He was happy as ever and his bright smile always commands attention.

CENTAUREA IMPERIALIS.

Will you be so kind as to tell me how to transplant the Centaurea imperialis, or giant sweet sultan, from the seed boxes to the open ground, where they are to be grown for cutting the blooms? I wish to plant them in rows like other plants, so they will grow and be satisfactory. Also please tell me how they are forced in the greenhouse for cut flowers. F. C. P.

The annual centaureas do not bear transplanting as well as the majority of seedlings. If you want plants to set outdoors, it would be much better for you to sow one or two seeds in a number of small pots; 3-inch size would be suitable. If turned out with a ball and carefully planted, they would receive no check. Grow them in a cool house, not over 50 degrees at night.

We have had no experience in forcing Centaurea imperialis, but one or two acquaintances who have tried it have not found it at all profitable. Centaurea Cyanus, especially the true dark blue one, does well on a light bench in a cool house. A very successful cultivator of these sows his seeds in rows eighteen inches apart on the benches early in September, giving them a temperature of 45 to 48 degrees at night. He picks quantities of flowers all winter from these. We think you will find C. Cyanus superior for indoor culture to C. imperialis. C. W.

PELARGONIUMS.

Please let me know what size pots to put pelargoniums in to bloom by Memorial day. I have a nice lot of them now. H. P.

I presume you refer to the large-flowering show pelargoniums. Do not allow these to become pot-bound. You can flower nice, bushy plants for Memorial day in 5-inch to 6-inch pots. Grow cool. Pinch the tops out of the leading shoots to make the plants shapely. Pack some tobacco stems among them to keep green aphis in check, or fumigate every week for the same object. Use a compost of fibrous loam, dried cow manure and sand, to which can be added a dash of bone dust for the final potting. Feed liberally when the pots are full of roots. C. W.

NEW LANTANA

VIOLET-KING

KING OF ALL LANTANAS

I shall introduce to the public the grandest novelty in Lantanas ever offered. It is the finest combination of colors ever seen in this flower.

This great novelty was grown by me in 1906 and has been tested for 2 years. It is a seedling from Radiation, also a choice variety. Violet-King in color and habit is as follows: It is a continuous bloomer, making extra large buds. The umbels are of large size, of light yellow and pink; opens yellow and golden center, changing to pink and orange. When about one-half in full bloom the first florets change to a beautiful violet-maroon shade (from which its name was taken) and it shows all these colors until in full bloom. It makes the largest truss of any Lantana. The flowers last longer than any other of 10 of the best varieties that I grow. This variety roots in half the time required to root any other Lantana. It is semi-dwarf.

Last year I grew and sold 6,000 Lantanas; 800 were Violet-King, and sold for double the price of the other kinds. There were as high as 5 to 8 flowers in full bloom at a time on each plant in a 3-inch pot. They were perfect beauties and always picked out first by the customers.

I propagate my cuttings to have them ready by January 15 and pot in 2-inch pots. About March 15 I shift to 3-inch pots, in which they remain until sold at retail, in May and June. Those I root after March 1 I pot in 2-inch and shift to 2½-inch and sell from this size. Out of the 6,000 I grew, 3,000 were of the smaller size. Of these 2 lots of Lantanas, when in full bloom for market, the 3-inch plants were not over 5 to 7 inches high, while the 2½-inch were not over 3 to 5 inches high.

Now, this is the way to grow Lantanas. This beautiful dwarf bedding plant should be grown more by all florists, as there is a demand for more than double the number grown. I intend to grow from 10,000 to 12,000 each year and would grow double the number if I had the room.

Now then, make out your orders, as I will offer to the public this new variety, and ten other leading sorts. These varieties sell readily at from 75c to $1.50 per doz., in bloom, while the new Violet-King sells first at from $1.50 to $2.00 per doz., in bloom. Loomis, Cal.

Dear Sir: Carnations arrived this A. M. They were all in fine condition, although this was the fifth day on the road. The lot ordered just before Christmas is growing fine. I did not lose a single plant of the lot. Your mode of packing is far superior to the air-tight boxes.

Wishing you a prosperous year, I am,
Yours truly, T. A. Gettys.

HAMMOND'S GRAPE DUST

MILDEW ON ROSES, CARNATIONS, ETC.

Now, in regards to your "Grape Dust," I must say that when I first heard of it I had but little faith in it, because I had tried all the remedies for Mildew I had ever heard of, but they were of little value. It seems that my location favors Mildew especially. When other Florists are but little troubled, my houses are generally well covered with the Mildew, so when I sent for the first keg of "Grape Dust" my Roses were almost worthless, but since using the "Grape Dust" my Roses are the "Picture of Health." There is not a vestige of Mildew to be seen on my place, and my Roses fetch double the price; besides, I have saved a month of firing, which I used to be compelled to do to kill Mildew.

Yours respectfully,
To Hammond's Slug Shot Works. F. J. A. SCHAEFER, Florist, Newburgh, N. Y.

AS MANY FLOWS AS RETURNS?

I have started to pipe a greenhouse 22x 108 feet, running east and west. There are twenty-four inches of glass on the south side. The house is protected on the north side by another greenhouse. There is a glass gable on the east end, and the boiler-house is on the west end. I intended to carry the water from the boiler to the floor level, then running a 4-inch pipe the width of the house, continuing in 3-inch pipe to the manifolds and using as many flows as returns.

I would thank you for suggestions that would be better, and would like to know the advantage of an expansion tank twenty feet high over one twelve feet high, and the advantage of more returns than flows. C. L. C.

I judge from what you say that you wish to use cast-iron pipe in your heating system. If you do not and can use wrought-iron pipe as well, I would suggest that you carry a 3½-inch flow under the ridge of the house from the boiler to the far end, there divide by 3-inch pipes to supply as many manifolds as there are benches, under which place in all thirteen 2-inch pipes, giving the extra pipe to the most exposed side. The reason for this plan is that you have pipes more easily installed and deliver the hot water from the boiler directly into the radiating pipes under the benches at a higher temperature than when as many flows are used as returns. The far end of the house will show less variation in temperature from the near end than by your system. A 20-foot expansion tank is eight feet higher than a 12-foot one, thus adding approximately four pounds' pressure to the system, which in turn raises the boiling point of the water in the boiler, thus making it more efficient. The idea in a heating plant is that the flow pipes act merely as conveyors, while the returns act as radiators. If a large number of flow pipes are used the water is distributed and begins to cool, so that by the time it reaches the returns the temperature has fallen many degrees, because of the slow circulation due to many flows. One end of the house is hot and the other end cool, which is not desirable. L. C. C.

TEMPERATURE FOR SALESROOM.

What is the proper temperature for a salesroom where plants are kept? In our place it has been from 65 to 73 degrees most of the time. Will you tell me if there are any kinds of flowering plants which will or can stand such a high temperature? F. J. Y.

The correct temperature at which to keep a salesroom where plants are to be kept depends somewhat on the heat you have. With hot water or steam you might run up a little higher than in the dry heat from a coal stove or a hot-air furnace. From 60 to 65 degrees is about right. Of course, in the case of a sudden change in the weather it may run a little above or below for a short period, but this you cannot prevent and it will do no harm.

While almost any blooming plants will live in a temperature of from 65 to 73 degrees if given enough water, they will not last. Azaleas, for instance, would soon be too far advanced to sell, as would lilacs, bulbous stock, etc. The temperature you speak of is really about right for an ordinary living room, and any florist knows how short a time blooming plants will last in the house. The Market.

There does not seem to be a discouraging note as to future business. While the sale of flowers has been somewhat limited during the last few days, it has not been an unexpected slump and there is no disappointment expressed by the local dealers.

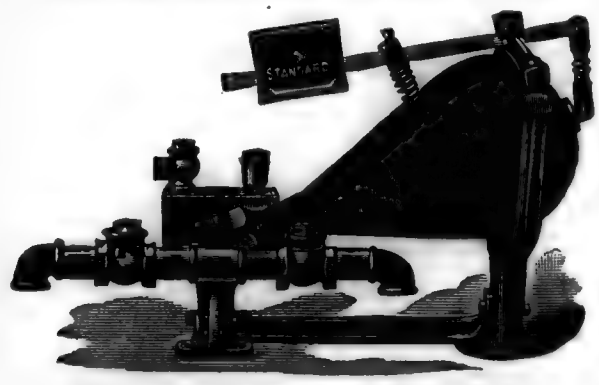
There has been a steady demand for roses, however, ever since the holiday season, and assorted varieties have been sold in large numbers during the last few weeks. There is not quite as strong a demand for carnations as usual at this time of the year and at present violets seem to hold the call.

There is an ample supply of stock of all sorts, and while shipments from the outside have not been as great as they might be, local growers report excellent conditions.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. Suder says that her hyacinths, narcissi and violets are the best she has ever raised, and that one house of sweet peas is in exceptionally good condition.

Although there is no contest on among local florists, it seems that each one is trying to outdo the other in the matter of beautiful window decorations. Particular among these show displays is the window at the new retail store of Geo. A. Heinl, on Superior street, which is filled to overflowing with azaleas, tulips, marguerites, sweet peas and lilies of the valley. The Schoen Floral Co., the Barrow Floral Co. and the store of Miss Helen Patten have other notable displays.



Geo. A. Heinl is spending several days at his brother's home in Terre Haute, Ind. Mr. Heinl's health has not been the best of late.

John Barrow, who for several years has conducted a greenhouse on Detroit avenue, near the outskirts of the city, has opened a new retail store in a recently completed building at Adams street and Ashland avenue. Business has been increasing in fine shape.

The Youngstown Floral Co., on Madison avenue, expects 50,000 violets to be delivered to its store in a few weeks for the Valentine day trade. There is a particularly large demand for violets here on this festal day.

John G. Heinl, of Terre Haute, Ind., visited his brother George, the local florist, several days last week. H. L. S.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

This is the time, at the end of January or in the first days of February, when business is generally starting at the market, and judging from the stock that some florists are already bringing, buyers must be thinking that our spring is opening.

Paul Abele, George Thomas and M. M. de Lapouyade, at the French market, had an assortment of blooming plants that could not be much better for an Easter Sunday. Abele Bros. say that their stock is unusually large and in good condition.

E. Valdejo, the retired florist, has a good sized piece of ground adjoining his newly built residence. He cannot help cultivating for a pastime, if nothing else, and he says he cannot grow pansies and sweet peas enough to supply the demand.

C. Ory met with a serious accident while riding in his wagon on St. Charles avenue. A missile was thrown at him by a mischievous boy, breaking his nose.

Louis Brichner, formerly with U. J. Virgin and the Metairie Ridge Nursery, has formed a partnership with O. Knobloch and established himself at James A. Newsham's old place, on Nashville avenue, having bought from J. A. Newsham

The Market.

Trade has been active since the holidays, the leading stores reporting a forty-five per cent increase in sales over last January. Stock has been of good quality, with the supply about equal to the demand. An unusual demand the last week for funeral flowers has nearly exhausted the supply of white flowers. Violets are in oversupply and of most excellent quality. Some fine tulips and Golden Spur daffodils are coming in.

Club Meeting.

The first regular meeting of the club was held January 21, at Holm & Olson's store. There were about seventy in attendance and an interesting meeting was held. Mr. Nagel read an interesting paper on "Bedding and Bedding Plants," which was freely discussed by several. This led to a question of prices and a committee was appointed to fix prices for the coming season. The advisability of holding a flower show next fall will also be decided by a committee named for that purpose.

At the next meeting the subject of bulbs will be open for general discussion. The name of the club is the Twin Cities Florists' and Gardeners' Club, and the next meeting will be held at the City park greenhouses, Thirty-eighth street and Bryant avenue, Minneapolis, Tuesday evening, February 18.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson have some extra fine long-stemmed white sweet peas, with real apple blossom fragrance. Such stock sells quickly. They had the decorations and bouquets for the recent Hill-Barrows wedding and used several hundred white orchids for the occasion.

The traveling fraternity are moving freely since the first of the year. We recall the following as they flitted by, among many others: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co.; Allister Currie, of Currie Bros.; Arnold Ringier and C. W. Scott, of Chicago; Wm. Hagemann and Mr. Knickman, of New York, and a dozen or more Holland bulb men.

P. Holm returned January 19 from a two weeks' trip in the east and has since been laid up with the grippe.

A. N. Kinsman, of Austin, was a recent caller. He is planning to build three more rose houses the coming spring.

Theo. Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, is another grippe victim, but is convalescing, we understand.

G. A. Carlsen, of Albert Lea; Neil Neilson, of Mankato, and John Larson, of Red Wing, were recent callers.

LENOX, MASS.

Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held January 18, with President Jack in the chair. Percy Ellings was unanimously elected a member of the society. The schedules for the August and fall exhibitions were approved as read. S. Carlquist was awarded a diploma for a fine vase of Celsia Arcturus.

The annual banquet of the society will be held at the Curtis hotel February 15, and promises to excel anything ever held by the society.

The fourteenth annual concert and ball was held in the town hall January 22. This event is always looked upon by the people of Lenox as one of the chief attractions of the winter season, and this proved to be no exception to the rule, as there were fully 200 couples participating in a very enjoyable evening. The committee of arrangements, of which H. P. Woolsey was chairman, is to be congratulated upon the social and financial success attending its efforts.

Geo. H. Instone, Sec'y.

Decatur, Ill.—M. Z. Kellogg says business has been good right along, both cut flowers and pot plants selling well, with a good call for funeral work. He looks for a fine spring trade.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

The burial of the late Mrs. William Broadhead at Lake View cemetery, January 20, brought out the largest and most beautiful collection of floral offerings ever seen in this city. The deceased was the wife of Wm. Broadhead, one of the pioneers of the Pearl City, and is survived by two sons, one of whom is A. N. Broadhead, president of the Lake View Rose Gardens Co. George Heelas had charge of the floral arrangements, which included a beautiful decoration of the mausoleum. Large numbers of violets and cattleyas were used.

Fred A. Dorman intends dropping his political appointment and devoting his whole time to the business. He says politics and floriculture do not run well together.

Elliot Worden has the sympathy of the craft in the long illness of his side partner. It is hoped she will soon be around to assist him, as of yore.

Thos. Russell, of the Brooklyn Park Greenhouses, is making plans for two, and possibly three, houses for carnations, having purchased a splendid location. The old plant will be used for pot plants and forcing lettuce, of which he makes a specialty during the winter season. He says Grand Rapids is the best variety. He predicts a good summer lake season, having several big orders on hand for decorations.

Hayward Bros. predict a good season in both garden and field seeds. George Chambers, the hustling salesman, has been invited to address the coming meeting of the grange on "Closer Relations With Floriculture." W.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEAT FOR GERANIUM HOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse, 10x100 feet, and wish to heat it with hot water. The house has brick walls four feet high and measures seven feet to the ridge. What size of flow pipe under the ridge, and how many feet of 4-inch pipe under the benches, will be required to heat this house for geraniums, in this Michigan climate? Should the pipes that connect the flow to the returns be the same size as the flow? J. B.

If you wish to use 4-inch pipe, which I should not do unless I had the pipe on hand, the house in question should be provided with five lines of pipe, using one flow and four returns, or, if you prefer, two flows and three returns. If you use one flow, it can be used to feed a manifold containing three returns on one side of the house and one on the same side as the flow. If two flows are used, they may serve one side and one may be divided to feed two returns on the opposite side, while the other may be carried entirely around the house. Neither of these schemes is as good, in my judgment, as to use 2-inch and 3-inch malleable pipe, placing a 3-inch riser under the ridge and four 2-inch returns under each side bench, fed from the one riser. The riser would be carried from the boiler to the far end of the house and there divided by 2½-inch or 3-inch pipe to feed a manifold on each side containing four 2-inch returns. Then you would connect an expansion tank by means of a ¾-inch or 1-inch pipe to the main return close to the boiler, and carry it twelve or fifteen feet above the highest point in the system. L. C. C.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

Will an eighty-five horse-power, brick-set steam boiler be large enough to economically heat a modern greenhouse plant, covering 35,000 square feet of land? B. H. I.

An eighty-five horse-power boiler should have capacity to supply steam for about 8,800 square feet of radiation. From the data given I cannot say whether it is sufficient for the plant or not. If you will state the length, width and height of the side walls of your houses and the temperature you wish to maintain in each, I can then tell you whether or not the boiler in question is sufficient for the work. L. C. C.

CITY WATER PRESSURE.

Can I connect my hot water heating plant with the city mains and do away with my expansion tank by using a reducing valve? The city water pres-

About Your Water Supply

OF COURSE, you know that your tower tank would have to be over 100 feet high to give you 50 pounds' pressure. But do you know that you can put in a Standard Pumping Engine and get better results by Pumping Directly into the Pipe Line? The Automatic Safety Valve takes care of the water while the faucets are shut off by changing hose connections; none wasted. Can be started in a minute and the expense stops when you are done watering.

A. Rasmussen -- New Albany, Ind.

sure is fifty-eight pounds to the square inch when the standpipe is full, but varies as the standpipe becomes partially empty. Would this variation make any difference? What pressure do I need on the plant? My water pipe is ¾-inch. Should this be attached to the return near the boiler, the same as the expansion tank, and would the expansion of the water drive the surplus back into the main? Where should the reducing valve be placed? If the city water should be shut off at any time, what would be the result? A. D. S.

You can use the city pressure in the way you indicate. It will be well to hold the pressure between twelve and twenty pounds, depending upon the pressure the boiler is guaranteed to carry. If you have a good steel boiler of the return tubular type, you might use the city pressure without a reducing valve. If you use a reducing valve, you should also equip the boiler with a safety valve, set at three or four pounds higher pressure than the reducing valve. The water connection should be made to the main return close to the boiler, the same as with the expansion tank. The reducing valve can be placed at the most convenient point in the water supply pipe. L. C. C.

A NEW DISEASE GERM.

While the entire country is now battling with the germ of "La Grippe," another, and more serious germ has taken quite a foothold among those engaged in the greenhouse business; strange as it may seem, the robust, active and prosperous in the profession appear to be most susceptible to this new disease.

While there is evidence of the presence of this germ at all seasons of the year, it is most prevalent at about this time. The symptoms are exhaustion, restlessness and irritability during the day, and mental depression, or acute insomnia during the night; this latter in aggravated cases.

During the day the one affected may be seen walking about with bowed head and wrinkled brow, apparently oblivious of all that is going on about him. When seated at his desk he seems to be gazing off in the distance at—nothing. When called, or disturbed by the slightest noise he is suddenly startled, and cold perspiration moistens his brow. At the table the most deliciously prepared "favorite dish" seems to have lost its charm. The cigar, which usually put the finishing touch to his much enjoyed dinner, now smiles at him in vain.

In short, the greenhouse man who has been attacked by this germ might well say with Marguerita in Faust, "Meine Ruh' ist hin! Mein Herz ist schwer!" (My heart is laden! My rest is gone!) Instead of having his thoughts on his crop of flowers, or vegetables, or on the popular problems of the grower, such as green-fly, sow bug, thrips, mealy bug, scale or mildew, they are diverted into channels such as these:

"My present boiler capacity is not sufficient."

"My boiler is not in perfect condition, and is liable to give out during next season."

"It is not doing my work satisfactorily."

"It is burning more coal than it should."

"If I decide to add any to my present greenhouses, my boiler capacity will not be sufficient."

"I expect to build new greenhouses, and in case I do, I shall need a new boiler for them."

Then comes the question: "How large a boiler do I need?"

"What kind shall I buy?" etc., etc.

With all these matters unsettled, the ailment continues to grow until it is almost unbearable; the only cure for this is prompt action in the application—not of a Hot Water Bag, but of a Hot Water Boiler of Kroeschell Bros.' make.

PIPING FOR WATER SUPPLY.

I am about to install a water supply for my nursery. What size of main pipes should I use to secure a good pressure, and what size of branches? The tank is eighteen feet high and the ground slopes slightly down to the greenhouses. How do you pack cast-iron pipes? Do you pack them twice with lead? T. E.

The pressure will be the same whether you use a pipe one inch or one foot in diameter. The size must be determined by the quantity of water you wish delivered in a given time. If it is a supply for greenhouses that is desired, a 2-inch main with 1¼-inch laterals will prove large enough.

If you wish to use cast-iron pipes for water supply, they are packed with oakum and lead. If for hot water, rust joints will be satisfactory. For this purpose the following may be used: Iron filings, two pounds; pipe clay, one pound; powdered potsherds, five pounds, made into a paste with brine.

FLORICULTURAL EDUCATION

Prof. Bailey's Views.

I have read with much interest the letter of Thomas A. Kempton, in the REVIEW for January 16. There is no system of apprenticeship in this country whereby a person can receive the kind of practical instruction and training in handicraft which Mr. Kempton wants. I do not know that the florists' business can ever provide such a system of apprenticeship, since it is necessarily organized on the strictly commercial basis and is not developed from the private gardening idea. It is in the well-kept and well-supported private garden that one is to look for instruction of this kind, unless he goes to the agricultural college or to some other special public or semi-public institution. The horticultural departments in connection with some of the great parks might afford a means for training a few men. The Missouri Botanical Garden is doing much for the floricultural interests.

In a number of the agricultural colleges considerable attention is now being given to floricultural subjects. If a man wants an education he must take time for it and he must take "book knowledge" as well as the rest. If he wants mere practical training in some of the handicrafts, he will find facilities provided him in many of the agricultural colleges in the way of short courses and special courses. It is undoubtedly to the agricultural colleges that we are to look in the end for help of this kind. One difficulty is that the floricultural interests have not yet asked the agricultural colleges for help in such a definite way as other interests have. There is no reason why the florists should not be served as well as the fruit growers, if they really desire such service and organize themselves to secure it. L. H. BAILEY.

From a College Gardener.

I notice in the REVIEW of January 16 that Thos. A. Kempton, Pasadena, Cal., is looking for a place where he can get a good education in floriculture and gardening. I think we would be able to offer him an extra good opportunity to learn the various branches of the trade in our greenhouses, parks, gardens, arboretum, nurseries and orchards. We also have a complete library on all subjects in horticulture and forestry, for study and reference, and we receive a number of papers published for gardeners and florists. JULIUS ERDMANN.

College Gardener, Ames, Iowa.

College for One Year.

In answer to T. A. Kempton's question, I would say, attend your agricultural college for one year. These colleges are founded for the purpose of helping us along practical lines.

By a little correspondence before starting, a course can be arranged to fit the needs of a young florist. The practical work in the greenhouses, of from one to three or more hours a day, is supplemented by book work bearing directly on the subject. There is also time and space given for any experimental work desired.

In these colleges there is little red tape, expenses are reduced to a minimum, and any energetic young person can take such a course and earn enough to carry him through the year, at the same time.

The college that I attended had no such course, but I requested it, for myself, and since then several more have taken it. We were taught propagating by seed-planting, grafting, budding, layering, top and root cuttings. We studied plant diseases and remedies, structural botany, soil and atmospheric conditions, and all other kindred topics, thus securing a most valuable foundation for our future work. Our florist was also a landscape gardener and a decorator, so the knowledge gained was such as could not be obtained in the same length of time in a commercial establishment.

Let our young people make use of the opportunities thus afforded them.

MYRA EGGLESTON.

Help From Horticultural Papers.

I have noticed with interest the article of Mr. Kempton in your issue of January 16, and later comments regarding the position of the young man in floriculture. I am in entire accord with Mr. Kempton and do not think his advisers quite understand his position.

Now, there are many hundreds, probably thousands, of intelligent young men in this country who desire to advance in this profession, but are handicapped by being with a small firm or one that makes a specialty of one thing, or even by being confined to one section in a large commercial establishment, which prevents his getting a knowledge of things beyond his confines. Of course this state of things cannot be eliminated, but could be greatly improved if a horticultural paper would run a series of articles on different subjects, starting at the very beginning and by easy stages covering the subjects completely, on lines somewhat similar to those followed by correspondence schools. We all read the carnation notes, the rose notes, the plant notes and what not, which are very interesting, but how much more interesting and instructive would these same notes be to a great many of us if we had a more practical knowledge of the flower or plant discussed!

Then again, take the average store man, who desires to know something about the growing of the things he handles, but who has had no experience in this. The plan that I have suggested is about the only way in which he can get a clear idea on it, as he will get little satisfaction in questioning, and a book on the subject is generally too technical or dry for anyone but a student.

The agricultural colleges are all right, but how many of us can attend them? Neither does it pay to keep hopping around from one establishment to another, trying to get a knowledge of different plants.

As stated before, this matter cannot be altogether changed, but I would suggest that you have a competent person, who knows the subject thoroughly, write an article each week, starting with lessons for beginners and continuing until the reader knows about all a man needs to know on each subject. Different subjects could be taken up in succession. I am sure this would be appreciated by a large part of your readers.

Study Under Specialists.

In reply to the question as to the way to receive a good, all-round knowledge of this trade or art, there is no direct method or means of learning to be proficient rapidly, except in possibly one particular branch.

From experience I would say to the earnest beginner, do three years for little or no money in a good private establishment, because by doing so you learn a little of everything, although not enough to make you a specialist in anything.

Never accept a situation where you are required to be a thorough gardener and drive a team, milk cows, etc., but just learn all there is to learn about your trade, and it is quite extensive enough to devote one's whole time to.

To the plant lover a selection of one of the numerous branches to follow up proves rather bewildering, but to the one who would choose hybridizing, a year or two in Erfurt, Germany, would, I believe, be the very best course to follow. By presenting one's self, with a reference, in the spring, there would be no difficulty in obtaining a situation, with wages large enough to support one, if economical. To learn rose cultivation in detail, the various French nurseries present opportunities. Belgium might be visited for the study of decorative plants and orchids, and England for the study of miscellaneous stock.

The question arises, "Does it pay?" In a pecuniary sense, not always. One's compensation very often must be that he knows more than the other fellow and is able to impart knowledge. It should also be borne in mind that climatic or other conditions are not always a good excuse for ignorance.

Needless to say, the experience is very interesting and you often meet your fellow workers in after years in every clime.

PONICA.

The Missouri Botanical Garden.

In reply to the article on "Floricultural Education," in the REVIEW of January 16, I should like to state the following facts:

If a young person interested in our beautiful work wishes to learn all he can about the how, why, and wherefore of floriculture and its allied branches, both practically and theoretically, I suggest that he put himself in communication with Prof. William Trelease, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, and make arrangements with him to be admitted to the benefits of the last will of the late Henry Shaw. He will not get the training of commercial hurry and rush for the almighty dollar there, but will learn all of those things which Mr. Kempton asks about in his letter. Then the commercial end of it is quickly added by good will and a little apprenticeship.

The work at Shaw's Garden is both manual and mental, each supplementing the other.

I should be very glad to give anyone any further information in this matter which may be desired, but shall not go into further details of the work, as it speaks best for itself. I do wish to say, however, that any and all time spent at the Garden, in good will and faithfulness, will always be time well spent.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

VALENTINE'S DAY.

No retail florist should fail to make a special window decoration for Valentine's day. The stationery store, with its wonderful creations of tissue paper filigree, no longer has a monopoly of the business for St. Valentine's day; the young man has found out that his best girl would much rather have a box of violets.

For several years there has been a marked increase in the flower business for February 14 and last year those who made attractive window displays of small baskets, boxes and hampers well filled, were rewarded by a most satisfactory day's trade. The plantsman has not yet made any impression on the business this day, and the cut flowers have it almost all to themselves. While all flowers share in the actual demand, violets lead, and a part of the window display should be attractive packages of violets. You can buy violet boxes, specially made for putting up this flower, for as little as 2 cents apiece, and from that up to several dollars each. For every-day purposes the square box of violet hue is a standard article, but heart-shaped boxes are preferred for Valentine's day. See that you have a supply of a quality such as fits with your trade. Also see that you have violet ties, pins and foil. You will need them all.

Last year those stores that showed in the window, boxes of cut flowers arranged to sell at 75 cents, $1, $2 or more, according to their location, found many sales. Bulbous stock goes nicely in such boxes for Valentine's day and with the present price of violets, bulbous stock and carnations a nice box can be put up to sell at from $1 to $2. Put a few in the window with a price-card on them and watch results.

Do not forget to have your newspaper advertisement changed to call attention to the special Valentine's day flowers. If you are not doing any advertising in your local newspaper, right now is an excellent time to begin. Try it, and you will see that a large number of buyers had not thought of flowers as Valentines and that they welcome the suggestion. Half the science of getting business consists of offering acceptable suggestions to possible buyers.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

For a Dinner Table.

The dinner-table decoration, "Diana Driving the Butterflies," illustrated in this issue, from a photograph, was arranged by Charles Henry Fox. This graceful effect, produced with simple material, is especially adapted for spring. It will be noticed that the beauty of the arrangement is not dependent on a variety of colors.

A NEW ORLEANS SHOWER.

The accompanying illustration of a bridal bouquet is said to have been the handsomest thing of its kind seen at any wedding in New Orleans this season. It was the work of the retail department of Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., on Carondelet street. The materials are cattleyas, lily of the valley and Adiantum Farleyense.

TEMPERATURE FOR A COOLER.

Will you kindly inform me as to the temperature which best suits carnations and roses in a cooler?

In our store we have a cooler built so that the cold air comes directly down on the flowers. It stands at from 48 to 50 degrees and keeps the roses well, but carnations do not last over forty-eight hours, as a rule, before they go to sleep. It seems to me that perhaps the cool air falling directly on the flowers might cause this, and I am now piping my cold air to the floor, so that it will not cause any draft on them.

P. P.

Florists differ in their opinions as regards the correct temperature for a cooler or refrigerator in which flowers are to be kept. About 50 degrees Fahrenheit is, in my estimation, a good temperature in which to store a variety of flowers. For a storage room for Beauties and other roses, from 44 to 48 degrees is about the best.

Bride's Bouquet by Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans.

Dinner Decoration, by Charles Henry Fox, "Diana Driving the Butterflies."

I presume that the cooler you speak of is cooled by the outside air. By rearranging your pipes so that there is no draft and keeping the box at the foregoing temperature, I am sure you will have no further cause for complaint. The current of air falling upon the flowers in your cooler was probably the cause of most of the trouble. One thing you must bear in mind is that flowers kept at about 50 degrees or warmer will give far better satisfaction when taken into a warm living-room than those which have been kept at a lower temperature, as the change is not so decided. It is also a well-known fact that carnations will keep better at from 50 to 55 degrees than in a cooler temperature, for the cooler it is the more moisture there is in the air, and this puts them to sleep. H. S.

FUMIGATING.

In fumigating a greenhouse with many kinds of plants, what amount of smoke is safe to use and how long may it be continued? C. A. P.

Much depends on the fumigant you are using. Frequent fumigations, say once a week, are preferable to occasional heavy ones. It is far better, if pests are getting the upper hand, to give a moderate smoking for three successive nights, rather than risk damage to your plants by an overdose. Tobacco stems are most likely to burn the foliage if used strongly. Dampen them somewhat and watch your fumigating pan that it does not blaze, or much injury will result. Add more stems and sprinkle water on the pan when flames appear. If you can discern objects eight or ten feet away, the smoke is dense enough. With tobacco dust there is far less danger of injury to flowers and foliage. If you are inexperienced in the business, why not try some of the preparations in paper form, purchasable in boxes by the gross? You can use these on practically all plants without injuring them. Directions for use come on boxes or cans.

Geraniums and begonias will drop all their flowers if you smoke heavily with tobacco stems. A cold night is the best in which to fumigate, when frost closes up the laps of the glass. A damp night is also excellent. You should keep the ventilators closed all night. When fumigating in warm weather, ventilate earlier and syringe overhead before the sun strikes the plants. C. W.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS.

Will you kindly tell me if too moist an atmosphere will cause the leaves of Asparagus plumosus to drop? C. A. P.

If you are wetting the foliage a good deal, the foliage will decay where it is somewhat dense, especially if little ventilation is being used. This asparagus likes a moist atmosphere, but it is better not to syringe it overhead unless it can be dried out before nightfall. C. W.

NAMES OF GERANIUMS.

We have recently bought out a small greenhouse of geraniums of about 3,000 plants, from a man who sold them in a country town and could not give the names satisfactorily. I am sending you a few blooms and could you give me the names? I will number them, so please name by number. I will send you more as soon as they bloom. H. H. B.

The flowers reached us so withered as to be beyond recognition. In sending a fresh lot, pick flowers which are just expanding and tie some damp cotton wool around the bottoms of the stalks. Let them stand in water twelve hours before shipping and use a tin box to prevent crushing.

MISS LUFFMAN WEDS.

From Spokane, Wash., comes word of the marriage of Miss Amy Kennedy Luffman and James R. Lambly January 18. The ceremony was performed at All Saints' cathedral by the Very Reverend Alfred Lockwood.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Luffman, of Birmingham, Ala., and is widely known among the florists through having served for many years as assistant to the secretary of the S. A. F., having charge of the secretary's office at the annual convention, where she came in contact with those of the trade from all over the United States. Mr. Lambly is a business man of Spokane, where Miss Luffman has been in the flower business for the last three years.

ADIANTUMS UNDER ROSE BENCH.

Can adiantums be grown under rose benches in summer and used for cut greens during winter? If so, when should the plants be started, of what size, and should they be put in pots or in beds?

GREENHOUSE.

You may be able to get adiantums to grow in a feeble sort of way under rose benches, but any fronds produced under such conditions would be worthless. If you want adiantum fronds which will have some substance and be of use to you in winter, you must grow them near the light. Excellent plants can be grown in coldframes during summer. If you have no spare house to grow them in, dig out the earth below a few sashes, so as to afford ample head room, and spread a coating of cinders over the bottom. Stand your pots on the cinders, and if at any time snails are troublesome, dust the ground over with fresh lime. Shade the sashes well with a mixture of kerosene and white lead. Keep moderately close for a time, but air freely on hot days. Plants can be grown in the frames from June until the end of September, and these will give you an invaluable crop of fine fronds for winter use. C. W.

ROOTING GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

Would you kindly inform me regarding the damping off of geranium cuttings? Do you think that cutting above or below a joint would make any difference in damping off or prolonging root formation? F. S.

While the general practice has been to trim geranium cuttings below a joint, it is of course well known that they will root if cut halfway between pairs of leaves. Those rubbed off with a heel will make roots the quickest and, being harder at the base, are also less liable to black rot. We believe it makes little difference whether the cut is above or below a joint, in regard to damping off. Cuttings taken from outdoor stock, or from indoor stock which has made a rank and soft growth, are much more liable to rot off than those taken from plants under glass, which have made a firm and short-jointed growth. The percentage of loss from the softer cuttings will be less if, when they have been trimmed, they are allowed to lie in the sun a few hours before being placed in the cutting bench.

Geranium cuttings should always be rooted in full sunshine. Give one thorough watering at the outset; then allow them to become quite dry before giving any more. A little overwatering will speedily ruin a fine batch of cuttings. In winter and spring it is far the best plan to insert the cuttings singly in small pots of light, sandy loam. At least ninety per cent should root if they have a little bottom heat and a top heat of 50 to 60 degrees. Cuttings taken with a heel or cut below a joint will root a little quicker than those taken above a joint, and we would prefer taking them in that way. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Ventilation.

The long delayed cold wave has at last arrived and taken its departure. Winters which display such abnormal mildness in December and January, usually give us in February, March or April that which has been omitted. The florist does not chuckle as do the lumbermen and ice dealers at the advent of severe weather, for he knows it means a speedier diminution of his coal pile and a reduced output of flowers, with, as a rule, no advance in prices. In severe weather the demand for flowers to be worn on the streets, at the theaters and other public resorts, is much reduced and florists' trade is hardly ever as good as when milder climatic conditions prevail.

The old adage about the cold strengthening as the days lengthen is again holding good. With the longer days, however, we get more sunlight and old Sol's power is increasing quite appreciably. While heavy firing will be needed at night to keep up temperatures, on sunny days, even with a low temperature, nearly all houses will require a fair amount of ventilation. It is a poor plan to shut off most of the fire-heat and cool off the houses so that little air is required. Of course, some valves must be closed, but sufficient should be left on to keep the atmosphere warm and buoyant and permit of ventilation being admitted for several hours a day. In ventilating, use due caution; put it on gradually and reduce it in the same way. The man who allows his house to run up to 80 or 90 degrees and then rushes on a foot of air, deserves to have mildewed roses or burst carnations. Try to admit a little air every day when conditions are sufficiently genial, in order to sweeten the atmosphere in your houses. Your plants can no more be expected to thrive in houses with closed ventilators than you yourselves will do so in dwellings where the windows are not opened daily. How to properly ventilate is difficult to teach. The man who can master it will make a successful grower. At no time of the year is careful ventilation so necessary as during the late winter and early spring months.

Chrysanthemums.

It is, of course, much too early to propagate chrysanthemums for bench planting, but many florists have no doubt picked up a limited stock of desirable novelties or standard sorts they would like to plant in larger quantity another year. In such cases a good batch of cuttings should be placed in the cutting bench at once. In about three weeks these, under proper conditions, can be potted off. If these plants, when established, can be set out in a bench or in boxes, they will soon give a lot of splendid cuttings. Do not run exclusively to single-stem Japanese varieties. The public taste favors the single anemone and pompon classes more strongly than ever. Grow some of each of these, especially if you have a local retail trade. A temperature of 50 degrees at night will root mums nicely. Do not allow the sun to strike them until they are rooted. Keep the cuttings well watered until roots appear; then reduce the supply.

Heliotropes.

Heliotropes are always popular for bedding and are invaluable for window and piazza boxes and vases. A good bottom heat is needed to root them. Few cuttings will fail to root if conditions are right. Keep warm a few days after potting; then place in a house kept at 50 to 54 degrees at night. From these early rooted cuttings plenty of tops can be obtained later to still further increase the stock. Heliotropes are also easily propagated from seed and some fine forms may be obtained in this way. The plants show a surprising vigor, where standard heliotropes are grown, and they are becoming popular in formal gardens. They can be grown much more easily from seedlings than from rooted cuttings.

Show Pelargoniums.

As Easter comes unusually late this year, it will be quite possible to have a batch of pelargoniums in flower for that holiday. When they are wanted in bloom thus early, no further stopping of the shoots must be done. Give them a shift into their flowering pots as soon as possible and grow on in a cool, airy and sunny house. Where the flowers and plants are more in demand at Memorial day, any necessary pinching may be done for a month yet. Green aphis has a special fondness for these pelargoniums and will speedily ruin them if not persistently fought. A fumigation once a week will keep this pest in control, while some tobacco stems scattered among the plants and renewed every two or three weeks will materially aid in keeping them clean. Pelargoniums should not have a night temperature exceeding 50 degrees, and 45 degrees will be better.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas will probably be rather more in evidence than usual next Easter. Its late date makes it possible to have these showy plants in flower without too hard forcing. Plants, to have them in flower by April 19, should have been started right after Christmas and ought now to be growing freely. As they grow very rapidly, it is necessary to frequently give them more room. Keep them well exposed to the sunlight to make them stocky, and remember that hydrangeas are very thirsty plants, needing lots of water, and when the pots are well filled with roots, liquid manure every fourth to fifth day should be applied. Probably some of your plants do not promise to flower well, but carry a good crop of cuttings. Get a good batch of these in the cutting bench. These can be grown along to make fine stock for forcing for another Easter or Memorial day.

Brief Reminders.

A mulching of well decomposed and broken-up cow manure on the violet benches will now benefit them.

If you have not started spiræas (astilbes) for Easter yet, get them under cover. They will not need hard forcing.

Keep the propagating benches filled while you have a good bottom heat. Do not leave cuttings any longer in the sand than you can help, after they are rooted.

Water seed boxes and pots carefully. A little neglect may mean many failures.

If you have not already sown fibrous rooted begonias, such as Erfordii and Vernon, do so at once.

Start amaryllis as you see the flower spikes pushing. A little bottom heat is good for them.

When firing heavily, damp under the pipes and benches to prevent excessive aridity. Keep a watch for red spider where plants are nearest to the pipes.

Do not keep the leaf cuttings of Lorraine begonias too close, or most of the leaves will rot. As soon as little shoots show, pot them up. Get in a further crop of well ripened leaves.

INDOOR SUMMER CULTURE.

[A paper by E. A. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, February 4.]

There is probably no cut flower of which the methods of culture have changed more in the last six or seven years than is the case with the carnation. When we began growing carnations, six years ago, we benched from the field about the middle of September, as this was the universal custom among Chester county carnation growers, and generally so throughout the United States, although some of the large growers around New York were practicing early planting. Now from the middle of July to the middle of August is generally conceded to be the proper time to house from the field.

The next development would naturally be indoor culture exclusively. To the writer's knowledge, the first grower who practiced this method to any extent was Charles W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., who has always been a leader in the development of the divine flower. I well remember seeing in 1903, at Mr. Ward's range, a house of Enchantress that had been grown inside over summer and I was struck with amazement at their magnificence. I do not think that I have ever seen them surpassed by any variety.

Potting and Benching.

To succeed with indoor culture, strong, healthy cuttings should be put in the sand not later than February 1; those potted up before February 15 are preferable. We first use 2-inch pots, and when these are well filled with roots, plant in a bench four inches apart each way. Some growers again repot to 3-inch or 4-inch pots and hold them in these until they are finally planted in the benches. When many plants are grown this method makes a great deal of work in watering, as the pots dry out very rapidly when hot weather comes, and the young plants are also liable to become potbound before the benches are ready for them. When their growth is once stunted they are practically useless. At each transplanting all the weak plants should be set aside. A weak cutting may recover in the field, but will never pay for itself grown inside.

As soon after Decoration day as possible the old plants should be thrown out, the houses refilled with a good, rich compost and the young plants put in their final place.

Care must be taken with the watering. There is not much danger of overwatering in summer. The benches should not be allowed to become soggy, but there is greater danger in allowing the soil to get too dry. As soon as it begins to appear a light color on top it should be wet thoroughly; otherwise the plants will become hard and woody, and will not break freely. Although shading is generally objected to, we believe a light shade is beneficial. We put a thin coat of whiting on every other row of glass about the first of July, and remove it early in September. This aids materially in keeping down the temperature and does not cause a weak growth unless the plants are overwatered.

Ventilating and Spraying.

Full ventilation should be given both day and night, except when a strong, dry wind is blowing immediately on the plants, which dries out very rapidly both plants and soil, and is very likely to bring on an attack of red spider.

This insect is about the only one that will cause trouble in the summer, and a thorough spraying with cold water twice a week will, we have found, keep down this pest. Should it appear, however, the plants should be sprayed every day until they are clear, as the spider will cause a great deal of damage in a very short time, from which it will take a long time for the plants to recover.

The same care should be taken in pinching as in the field. Do not break back too high, as this will cause a top-heavy growth, and the plants will be broken up by the spraying. As soon as the shoots begin to elongate and show the stem between the leaves, the top should be taken out, leaving three or four joints. Do not leave the plants two or three weeks and then break off all the shoots at once, but go over them every week, topping all the longest ones. This will make a more even growth and lessen the tendency toward cropping.

Keeping the Soil in Condition.

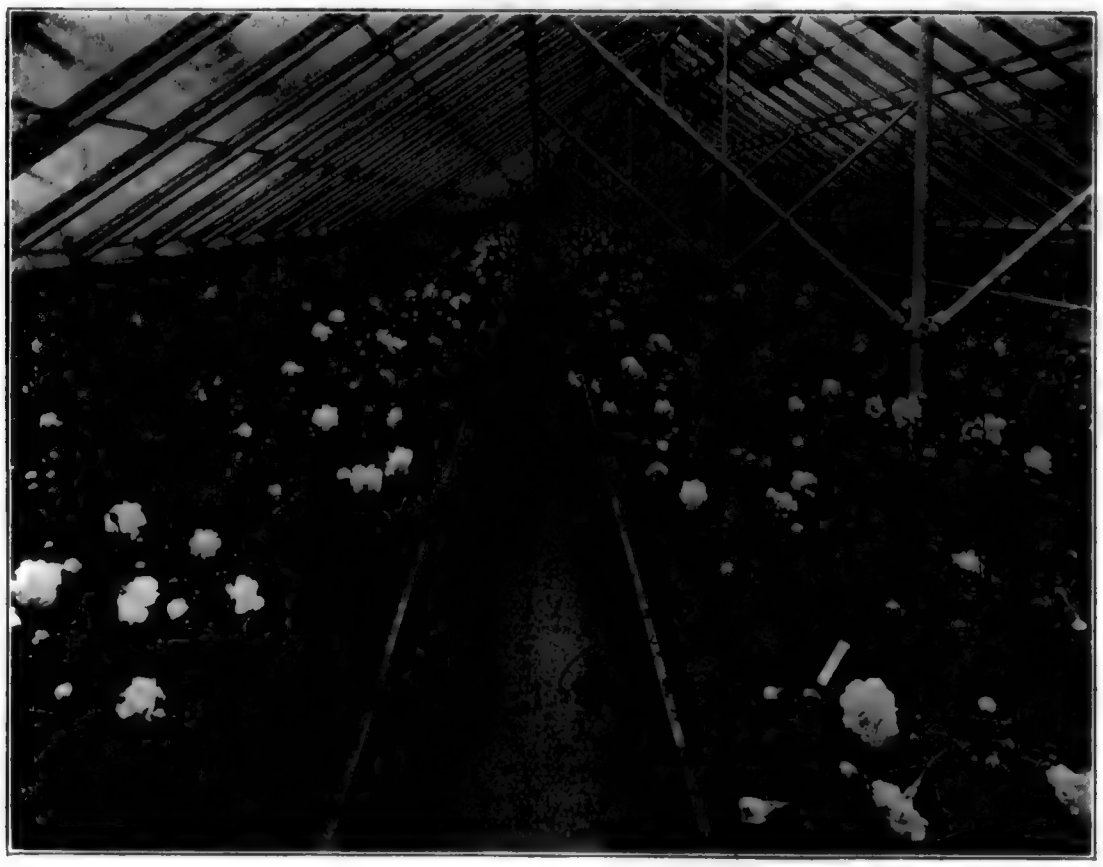
The benches should be frequently cultivated during the summer, both to keep down the weeds and to prevent the surface of the soil from becoming hard and baked. If the soil was well fertilized with cow manure and bone meal before it was put in the benches, no feeding will be necessary during the summer. Through the fall we use top dressings of bone meal and sheep manure every two or three weeks, omitting all feeding through December. In January, when the days become longer and we get more sunshine, we use a stronger and quicker acting commercial fertilizer. Feeding with liquid manure would doubtless be beneficial, but we have never used this method.

If by the first of July the plants in the houses are as large as those in the field, you may consider that you have been successful, for, although through July and August the field plants will make faster growth than the indoor stock, these will catch up later. There is always some check upon plants benched from the field, and often it is very severe, if the conditions are not right. This is especially the case in a wet season.

Advantages of Indoor Culture.

One of the greatest advantages of indoor culture is the fact that we have control of the watering, and this is especially important since stem-rot has made its appearance. How often does it happen that half of the plants die in the field, and again half of the remaining ones die after they have been planted in the houses, and it is nearly spring before we begin to cut good flowers! With proper indoor culture the ravages of the dreaded stem-rot are reduced to a minimum.

Another advantage of this method is that large flowers with long stems can be cut early in the fall, when they bring good prices and when none of the profits go into coal bills. A steadier cut is also assured through the winter, and there is less danger of getting the heaviest crop when prices are low.



Some varieties are undoubtedly better suited to indoor growing than others. As a rule, the broad foliaged, strong growing kinds are best adapted to it. Mrs. Lawson and Winsor are notable examples; in fact, we would not attempt to grow them any other way.

A Common Objection.

The greatest objection offered to indoor culture is the fact that the June cut is lost. However, at this time carnations bring very low prices and, after all, the problem is how to make each square foot of bench surface produce the most money. If we can make the returns through the fall and winter more than cover the loss during the summer by indoor culture, we are foolish not to adopt it.

It is not urged that this method is an easy way to success in carnation growing. It certainly will not help that grower who is used to letting the plants take care of themselves. A little neglect is far more disastrous to indoor stock than to plants in the field.

I should not advise anyone to change his whole plant immediately from one method to the other, but he should first try a house, or at least a bench, and prove for himself which way is the better under his conditions. Some of the largest and best growers in the country practice indoor culture exclusively, and many others in part of their plant, and they certainly would not do so if it did not pay them. When any new method of doing things is taken up by the leaders in the trade, we owe it to the success of our business to at least see for ourselves if there is anything in it; otherwise we shall soon be bringing up the tail of the procession.

HEACOCK'S No. 100.

The George H. Cooke special prize at the Washington convention was $10 in gold "for the best twenty-five blooms of a pink seedling or sport darker than Enchantress and lighter than Lawson, never before winning a prize or medal." This was won by No. 100, exhibited by Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa. Mr. Heacock wishes to have it clearly understood that No. 100 is not a sport but a seedling (Lawson on Enchantress) and is a stronger grower and more productive than any Enchantress that he has ever seen. The variety was also given a certificate, the judges scoring it 86 points.

EXPERIMENTS IN CARNATIONS.

[A synopsis of an address by Dr. B. T. Galloway, of the United States Department of Agriculture, delivered before the American Carnation Society at the Washington convention, January 28 to 30, 1908.]

Dr. Beverly T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, in his address before the society called attention to the experiments and tests of various kinds, connected with the growing of carnations, which have been carried on by the Department of Agriculture for several years. He stated that the work had for its object the securing of information on the following points:

1. The relative yield and vigor of plants grown under glass all summer, as compared with plants of the same variety grown outdoors during the summer season and moved to the benches in the usual way and at the usual time.

2. Fertilizer tests to determine the effect of different fertilizers, alone and in various combinations, on vigor and yield.

3. A study of hereditary tendencies in so far as they may affect continuous vigor and healthfulness and yield.

4. The securing of new and desirable types by crossing.

5. A study of fundamental questions of breeding, with a view to securing data that will be of value to carnation growers and others in the improvement of their crops.

6. A study of diseases and means of preventing them.

Field and Indoor Plants.

Dr. Galloway took up the subjects in the order given, using a table or chart, large enough to be seen by all present, to illustrate the results of experiments conducted during the summer of 1906 and the winter of 1907, to determine the relative yield of field and indoor-grown plants. He explained how the experiment had been conducted, namely, by propagating plants from stock of four varieties, care being taken to have the stock of as nearly equal vigor and productiveness as possible. Four benches in the greenhouse were given over to the work, each holding about 1,000 plants, and these benches were planted with stock from 3-inch pots, two rows the entire length of each bench being reserved for the plants grown outdoors. Dr. Galloway stated that the field-grown plants were given the usual treatment and produced fair average growth, but were not as large as those grown on the benches when brought in in September.

He stated that the results, as shown by the chart, were, without exception, very much in favor of the indoor-grown plants, in many cases the increase being over 100 per cent. He added, however, that while the results were so strikingly in favor of growing plants under glass the season through, from the standpoint of the Department, other considerations have to be kept in mind, such as the relative cost of the two methods, the production for an entire season, the utilization of the houses for other purposes, maintenance, etc., in determining what method to pursue.

Experiments With Fertilizers.

The speaker also used the chart to illustrate his remarks upon the fertilizer experiments which the Department had carried on. He said that this experiment had been planned to bring out, if possible, the fact that growers as a rule are prone to overestimate the value of commercial fertilizers in crop production, and he said he believed the results of the experiment would show that there is no fertilizer so good, reliable and sure as well decomposed organic manure — something which could be secured anywhere in the country. He said, however, that experiments of this kind, to be conclusive, must be carried on for a number of years in various places. He cautioned the growers to go slowly on commercial fertilizers and to put their faith and work into good composts.

He explained the work the Department had been doing in its study of hereditary tendencies in plants in so far as these tendencies may affect continuous vigor, healthfulness and yield. He said the question of whether there is true bud variation was still an open one, but that at the same time he did not think the importance and value of careful and rigid selection of stock could be questioned. This the Department has been doing, and he stated it was its intention to continue this selective work for several years, until the effects could be fully demonstrated.

The speaker mentioned the work the Department had been doing in the production of new types by crossing, and referred to some of the crosses that might be seen in the greenhouses.

He said that Prof. Norton, whose talk was to follow his, would explain in detail the fifth line of work, namely, a study of fundamental questions of breeding, which work, he stated, had been carried on by Prof. Norton before leaving the Department.

Diseases of Carnations.

Dr. Galloway now took up the sixth line of work which the Department had been conducting, namely, an investigation of the diseases of carnations. Among the diseases studied was the wet stem-rot, due to rhizoctonia, which he stated continues to be one of the most serious diseases with which the growers have to contend, but that it could be controlled by growing the plants in well drained and well aërated soil containing plenty of lime, and by avoiding mechanical injury to the plants. He also mentioned the dry stem-rot, a disease caused by fusarium, one of the wilt fungi, and stated that the only remedy for this disease was the use of sterilized soil and the liberal use of acid phosphate.

Two other diseases to which attention was called were the macrosporium spot, which he said could be prevented by spraying with Bordeaux mixture, and the bacterial spot, a disease occurring only in wet seasons on the softer-leaved varieties. This disease, he stated, might be controlled by light syringing with a mixture of two parts commercial formaldehyde to 1,000 parts water.

Dr. Galloway closed his remarks by assuring the society that the Department was always at its service, and with an invitation to its members to visit the Department greenhouses.

BUD ROT OF CARNATIONS.

Bulletin No. 103 of the Agricultural Experiment Station of Nebraska contains "The Bud Rot of Carnations," by F. D. Heald, and "A Mite Accompanying the Bud Rot of Carnations," by R. H. Wolcott.

"During the last few years a troublesome and destructive disease of carnations has been prevalent in a number of the greenhouses of the state. The disease affects the buds in various stages of maturity and produces a rotting of the petals and other flower parts, at least the parts enclosed by the calyx, thus interfering with the normal opening of the flower. The disease has therefore been termed the bud rot of the carnation," says Dr. Heald.

"The bud rot of carnations was first reported in 1905 by Dr. Wolcott from specimens received from a greenhouse at Beatrice, Neb. He attributed the trouble entirely to a mite which was constantly present in the affected buds. The mite was briefly described as belonging to a new and hitherto undescribed species and possibly a new genus. At this time the fungus origin of the trouble was not suspected. Later in the same year the same trouble was reported to the writer and an investigation was begun. The first examination showed the mites, and in addition the rotting petals were found to be pervaded by the mycelium of a fungus. An examination of the rotting buds led to the belief that the mites were only secondary, and that the fungus was the primary factor in causing the disease.

"The bud rot does not seriously affect the plant, as the fungus is confined entirely to the buds. It has never been found growing on other parts. The injury is due, then, solely to the fact that affected buds produce deformed flowers or entirely fail to develop. Flowers which upon superficial examination appear only slightly malformed are badly rotted within the calyx and soon wither and die. This fact has been especially noted in the discussion of the symptoms. If the buds have remained without infection until the calyx has opened sufficiently to expose the tips of the petals, subsequent infection will cause but slight injury, as the fungus does not have time to develop before the flower has expanded. In houses where the trouble is severe the buds become infected when quite small, probably when not more than one-half inch long. When infection took place at this early stage many of the buds rotted before they had time to open, or if they did open at all produced very imperfect and worthless flowers. The actual loss from the disease may vary from a fraction of one per cent to twenty-five or more per cent in badly affected plants. In one small house the grower reported a loss of $1.50 to $2 per day from the bud rot of the Lawson variety.

"The bud rot can easily be prevented from becoming severe, if it is introduced into a house, by pursuing the proper measures. The most successful growers of carnations have little to fear from this disease, as conditions in the well-regulated houses are unfavorable for the spread of the disease. Even though the disease is present, it will not become general if proper precautions are observed. In order to test this by direct experiment, Lawson carnations were obtained from a house where the disease was especially prevalent and then grown for a time under conditions as favorable for the disease as possible; that is, by overwatering and allowing the accumulation of cuttings, rotting buds and other debris. After the disease was well established the watering was made less frequent and a less amount of water was employed, while the benches and surroundings were kept free from decaying organic remains. All affected buds were removed as soon as observed and at once destroyed. By pursuing this method the disease was entirely stamped out. The treatment recommended was followed in one large commercial house with very satisfactory results.

"The work which has been carried out up to the present time leads to the conclusion that the disease can be prevented or eradicated if the following measures are carefully heeded:

"1. Practice clean culture, with the destruction of all refuse that might offer a temporary lodging place for either fungi or mites.

"2. Keep the moisture down to the minimum necessary for the healthy growth of the plants.

"3. Pick off all affected buds as soon as they appear and destroy by burning. Do not under any conditions throw them down on the benches. The benches should be gone over at least every other day until the disease is thoroughly under control."

A BELATED REPORT.

Through the wretchedly poor service which characterizes the Chicago office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., the following message failed to reach the Review in time for publication with the rest of the report of last week's meeting of the Carnation Society:

"At the session Wednesday evening S. S. Skidelsky presented a paper entitled 'What the Buyer Has Reason to Expect of the Introducer of a New Carnation.' In the discussion Fred Burki said a word for the introducer, contending that every variety is disseminated with the best of intent and that if healthy, well rooted cuttings are shipped, the introducer is doing his part. F. R. Pierson added that the trade has reason to expect that a variety has been given an adequate trial on all points prior to disseminating.

"W. N. Rudd spoke in humorous vein on 'What the Introducer Has Reason to Expect of the Buyer of New Varieties.' He insisted that every disseminator has full confidence in the novelty he sends out and said the introducer is entitled to fair treatment in the handling of novelties by buyers. He maintained that it is unfair to force and top cuttings to multiply the stock bought and then complain of weak plants. F. R. Pierson closed the discussion by asserting that in view of the great advance made in the last ten years, introducers as a body are entitled to the hearty thanks of the trade instead of implied censure.

"After a paper by Irving Gingrich, on 'Cultural Methods,' was read by J. H. Dunlop, Mr. Rudd introduced the subject of the national flower show and Mr. Kasting stated the guarantee fund is now $12,450. Three medals were voted for the premium list and new dies ordered, reading 'American Carnation Society Medal,' instead of 'Lawson Medal.'

"The society's regular judges were nominated to act on carnations at the national flower show."

NEW ROSE GROWING PLANT.

Word comes from Springfield, O., that Charles C. Leedle, president of the Leedle Floral Co., together with Charles P. Brunner, Henry J. Roth, Mark M. Livingston and James Sager, have filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state at Columbus for the formation of the Leedle Rosary Co.

Early in the spring the company will erect a large range of glass near the establishment of the Leedle Floral Co., which will be devoted entirely to growing roses for cut flowers. The plant will be modern in every particular. Mr. Leedle will give his attention to both companies. His son, Arthur C. Leedle, will be active in the management of the new company. Mr. Leedle is a thorough business man, and judging from the success of the Leedle Floral Co. in growing and shipping rose plants, the new company will meet with success in growing roses for cut flowers.

LILY BULBS IN THE U. S.

Referring to the account of the work of the Department of Agriculture in growing bulbs of Easter lilies in the United States, published in the Review of January 23, George W. Oliver continues:

Selection of Seed Bearers.

The seedlings now growing in California are principally crosses between the Harrisii variety and the dark-stemmed variety of longiflorum known as giganteum; others are straight Harrisii seedlings. The crosses are exceedingly vigorous and the Harrisii plants are also more vigorous than the parents, but less vigorous than the crosses. The plants selected for bearing seed were apparently free from the disease, which manifests itself in spotted leaves, dwarfed growth and distorted flowers.

In selecting ground for planting seed bearers it should be so arranged that lilies will not be grown on it for at least three years afterwards.

The Selection of Seedling Types for Propagation.

The variations among the second generation seedling plants are easily recognizable. A batch of seedlings has usually four distinct kinds: Dark-stemmed (1) long-leafed and (2) short-leafed, and green-stemmed (3) long-leafed and (4) short-leafed. Three of these kinds are marked by tying on pieces of raffia, twine, and strips of rags, respectively, while the fourth series of plants remains unmarked. One kind is lifted at a time and kept separate for future propagation by division only, as it is scarcely worth while to employ the tedious method of scale propagation.

Hugo Schroeter Looking Over the Samples of the A .L. Randall Co., Chicago, at the Hotel Ponchartrain, Detroit.

Preparation of the Soil.

The preparation of the soil in the field should be attended to much in advance of the time the seedlings are ready to be planted out. If after a very heavy manuring a crop of potatoes or cabbage be taken from the ground, it will be in good order for the reception of the seedlings. In well-compacted soils a heavy crop of cowpeas or other legume deeply plowed under the previous summer should bring about good results. Immediately before planting, the soil should be worked by disking, rolling and harrowing to make it smooth and easy to manipulate when putting in the seedlings.

Beds versus Rows.

The question of growing the seedlings in prepared beds or in rows at equal distances apart in the field is important. The bed system requires hand work, while cultivation in rows two to three feet apart can be done with a horse machine. The beds have the following advantages: When the lilies are planted moderately close together, the foliage partly shades the ground and the lilies protect each other so that they are not likely to be whipped about by the wind; moreover, by the bed system more bulbs can be grown to the acre than in rows wide apart. The foliage of bed-grown plants is unquestionably of a deeper green than that of plants grown in rows. In irrigating, the sunken spaces or alleys separating the beds can be used to convey the water. In Bermuda the lilies are all grown in narrow beds and no irrigation is practicable, much to the detriment of the crop at times. Growing lilies in beds with hand cultivation is necessarily more expensive than in rows wide apart with horse cultivation, but it is likely to be found that the additional expense attending bed culture will be more than warranted by the returns, as this crop must not be viewed in the same manner as the ordinary field crops which yield $20, $40 or $100 to the acre. It is considered in Bermuda that an acre of lilies is not much of a success unless it yields from $1,000 to $2,000.

At Time of Planting.

The seedlings at planting time are necessarily very small, having only a few very short and narrow leaves—in fact, they seem anything but promising—and to one who has not had experience in this line of work the appearance of the seedling plants would very naturally tend to discouragement. The rows in the bed should be about eight inches apart, and the plants at least five inches. If the soil is loose and easily worked, they can be put in by hand; otherwise a short trowel is the handiest tool. Care should be taken not to have the seedling bed too wet at the time of transplanting, as this has a tendency to make the plants flabby. Water should be given as soon as they are put in the ground.

HARDY PLANTS FOR CUTTING.

I want to plant a half acre or more in hardy plants for summer cut flowers. Will some one please give me a list of the best things, especially good novelties? I am located in southern Ohio, one hour from the market. C. P.

The following hardy perennials will winter in the latitude named and would be valuable for cut flower purposes: Tritoma Pfitzeri; Dianthus barbatus, or sweet william; Spiræa venusta, S. astilboides, S. Chinensis; Scabiosa Caucasica; Pyrethrum hybridum, P. uliginosum; Physostegia Virginiana, P. alba; phlox, including such good sorts as Miss Lingard, Coquelicot and Beranger. In peonies the following are good: Festiva maxima, Francois Ortegal, Marie Lemoine, Lady Bramwell, Zoe Calot and Whitleyi. Among liliums are L. speciosum, in variety, L. auratum, L. candidum, L. tigrinum. Lychnis Viscaria splendens, Liatris pycnostachya. Iris include Spanish, German and other classes, all good for cutting. The Japanese varieties are the most gorgeous.

Heuchera sanguinea, Helenium autumnale superbum, Helianthus rigidus Miss Mellish, H. multiflorus plenus, H. Maximiliani, Gypsophila paniculata, Eupatorium ageratoides and E. cœlestinum, Echinops Ruthenicus, Funkia subcordata grandiflora, digitalis, all the delphiniums, Coreopsis grandiflora, Cimicifuga simplex, pompon chrysanthemums, Campanula Medium and C. persicifolia grandiflora, any of the better asters, Boltonia latisquama and B. asteroides, Aquilegia chrysantha and A. glandulosa, Anemone Japonica, Achillea Ptarmica The Pearl.

A few plants, either novelties or recently introduced in America, are: Astilbe Queen Alexandra, Astilbe Davidii, Anthericum Liliastrum giganteum, Incarvillea Delavayi, Stenanthium robustum, Stokesia Japonica, Gypsophila paniculata flore pleno, Dianthus Napoleon III, Aster Sub-cœruleus, Trollius Japonicus Excelsior.

In bulbous plants the narcissi are all valuable. For commercial purposes yellow Trumpet varieties are in best call, followed by the poeticus and Leedsii sections. Montbretias are hardy on well drained land. Lily of the valley does well under field culture if the soil is a generous one. All hardy plants need some fall protection, in the way of a mulch of short strawy manure, to carry them through safely. W. N. CRAIG.

NILES, O.—John Dunston has added this winter one greenhouse, 24x175, of Moninger construction. He has also built a brick boiler-house and installed a ninety horse-power boiler.

Correspondents of the REVIEW are instructed to use the wires of the Postal Telegraph Co., whenever possible, and advertisers and others are requested to do so when telegraphing to the REVIEW.

ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its third annual convention in Springfield, February 18 and 19. The local florists' club is making great preparations to entertain the guests and to make this convention one of the best that has ever been held. The Springfield Florists' Club particularly requests a good exhibition and calls on all who have anything of merit to bring it; if you cannot come personally, send it and it will be taken care of. The public will be invited to visit this exhibition on Tuesday and it is expected an unusually large number of the citizens of the capital city and surrounding towns will take advantage of it.

These open and free exhibitions are a good feature, as they bring before the public the newer varieties of flowers, etc., and cause a demand for them, and also educate the people up to a higher appreciation of the florists' art. It is also good for the florist who is not able to visit the many establishments and see these newer varieties growing.

Let me urge upon all who possibly can, to attend our convention; whether members or not, all will be welcome. Our association stands for Illinois as the national society stands for the United States, and through its combined efforts in legislature and other ways can do more to advance the cause of floriculture than anything I know.

We shall be pleased to welcome, and do cordially invite, delegates from other state florists' societies and florists' clubs to be with us and participate in the work of our society. It will give me great pleasure to answer any correspondence in regard to our association and its work.

Our association, through its members, has done good work in gaining recognition from the state, for floriculture and establishing an experiment station. This is only the beginning. Better things are in store for us. The association is full of practical, energetic and patriotic workmen who are willing to give of their best for the advancement of our cause. The day is not far distant when we will see a practical course for florists at our State University. Illinois is big enough, broad enough and rich enough, and it is for this association to work without ceasing to attain that higher recognition to which we are entitled as a science and one of the arts.

The state association will take an active part in our national flower show, and many things of interest will be presented for your consideration, and I would say to you one and all, be with us.

ALBERT T. HEY, President.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

As reported in the REVIEW of January 23, a meeting of the National Council of Horticulture was held at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, January 22.

In accordance with the original stated composition of the council, the term of service of the delegates at large was arranged so that one-third, or three of the number, should expire at the end of each calendar year. The delegates were accordingly divided into groups as follows:

Terms expiring December 31, 1907: J. H. Hale, H. C. Irish, Prof. E. J. Wickson. Terms expiring December 31, 1908: J. Horace McFarland, Prof. L. R. Taft, Prof. W. W. Tracy. Terms expiring December 31, 1909: Prof. W. B. Alwood, Prof. S. A. Beach, Prof. S. B. Green.

By unanimous vote, the following were elected to succeed those whose terms expired December 31, 1907; Prof. R. S. Mackintosh, Auburn, Ala., to succeed H. C. Irish; Prof. W. T. Macoun, Ottawa, Ont., to succeed J. H. Hale; Prof. E. J. Wickson, Berkeley, Cal., to succeed himself.

It was voted to request the national organizations represented in the council, if agreeable to them, to take necessary action authorizing the secretary of such organizations to be one of the delegates to the council.

After full and free discussion the following plan was arranged for the Press Bureau service for the coming year:

(1) That at least sixty-eight articles be used or four for each week for a period of seventeen weeks.
(2) That these articles be sent on each of the fifteen weeks from February 15 to March 31, and the last week in September and first week in October.
(3) That the secretary be authorized to expend not more than $75 for the preparation of fifty articles, which with twenty already in hand will give the desired number.
(4) That these articles be prepared at the earliest practicable time, and copies made and submitted to the delegates from the contributing organizations for their approval.
(5) That the matter be sent to about 500 newspapers and newspaper syndicates (through whom it goes to several thousand publications), which will cost $30 per week for four articles.
(6) That a schedule be prepared giving the title of each article to be used, and the date when it is to be sent out; this schedule to also include a list of the newspapers and newspaper syndicates to which the articles are to be sent.

The secretary reported funds on hand of $114.28, and he has been advised that the Society of American Florists have set aside $150; the American Association of Nurserymen $200; the American Seed Trade Association $200, or a total of $550 for the purpose of the council, which together with the funds actually in the hands of the secretary make a

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market was no better than fair last week and it did not start stronger February 3. The cold weather, which has marked the week since last report, seems largely responsible for the falling off in demand. City trade is especially light and most of the local buyers say there has been a marked falling off in the business done since the middle of January. Funeral work is less active than it was and society is doing little. It is the out-of-town demand which is the salvation of the Chicago market. Shipping trade is quite good, but the call is largely for the best grade of stock, so that there sometimes is a surplus of low grades after the fancy stuff has all been cleaned up.

The rose market is strong as a result of good demand and much reduced receipts. The glut of Beauties is a thing of the past and prices have advanced about twenty-five per cent within the last seven days, with the prospect of a still further appreciation in values if the weather stays wintry. The quoted rates for other roses remain the same, but there has been a stiffening all along the line, for the supply is, generally speaking, less than the demand. There are some splendid Bride, Maid and Richmond in the market and the varieties grown in less quantity also are good.

The carnation market shows little change. The supply continues ample for all requirements and quality is excellent. Prices have been slightly influenced by the call turned to carnations by the short supply of roses.

Bulbous stock and violets continue in the dumps. There is so much of practically all kinds of bulbous stock that a clean-up is hard to make and no one seems to want violets in quantity. There is, however, anticipation of a greatly increased call for violets next week. It is remembered that last year Valentine's day brought a big spurt of business and that violets, sweet peas and small flowers for hampers, etc., were the most popular items. It is hoped history will repeat itself in this instance.

Sweet peas are selling well, if with long stems. The supply of valley is somewhat reduced and quality is better. Callas are abundant.

Credits Tightened.

A number of causes have operated toward the tightening of credits in this market, which will be to the advantage of every legitimate interest. For years credits have been notoriously lax with the Chicago wholesalers, and many losses have been sustained which would have been avoided by the exercise of a little prudence. There is no reason why credit should be more freely given in the flower business than in other lines, and many buyers have no other basis for credit than the fact that they have thus far paid their bills with more or less promptness. A tightening of credits implies, besides the refusal of credit, more attention to collections and the requirement of more prompt payment from those with whom accounts are carried.

Kidwell's New Establishment.

J. F. Kidwell owns 222 acres of land in Du Page county, near Belmont station on the C., B. & Q. railroad, and just west of Bassett & Washburn's place. The land has a frontage of five-eighths of a mile on the railroad. On one corner of this tract Mr. Kidwell is building his range of houses; the rest of the ground is at present used as a dairy farm.

The work on five of the houses is already well advanced. They are glazed and the heating plant is now being installed. They run east and west and are each 27x200 feet, and sixteen feet to the ridge, with side walls eight feet high. They are built of red cedar, of the A. Dietsch Co. U gutter construction, with foundations and lower walls of concrete blocks. At the north side of the houses is a shed 27x100, which is built of concrete blocks and will contain the boiler-room, work-room, etc. As soon as the weather will permit, four more houses will be added, of the same size and construction as the others.

The Morehead double trap system of heating will be used. The whole 60,000 square feet of glass will be cared for by a 66x16 tubular boiler, of Pratt make.

The houses will be used principally for roses and carnations, for cut flowers. One house will be used for smilax and Asparagus plumosus. The first five houses will be ready for planting about May 1, and the other four in time for carnations—about July 1.

The new plant will be entirely independent of the present business of J. F. Kidwell & Bro., and will be managed by J. F. Kidwell's son, Frank N. Kidwell, in company with the young man's cousin, Rudolph Ellsworth. The new firm, both members of which are about 20 years of age, will be known as Kidwell & Ellsworth.

Various Notes.

Bassett & Washburn say that the blizzard Saturday, February 1, which carried over into the following day, was the worst experienced at Hinsdale in the last three or four years. The temperature was down to 8 degrees below zero, with a high wind. C. L. Washburn went to Madison February 4, to visit his son, who is in college there.

The A. L. Randall Co. has added a Burroughs adding machine to its office equipment. They say the supply business in January was double what it was a year ago.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, is visiting Rockford and Aurora this week.

St. Mary's cemetery started growing cut flowers last fall for the wholesale market, and is sending Miss Gunterburg, in the Flower Growers' market, some especially fine Lawson carnations.

Fritz Bahr has returned from a trip to Cuba and the Isle of Pines, well pleased with his journey. He says the horticultural possibilities, especially in the line of palm growing, are great in those islands.

Joseph Foerster says he is well satisfied with his first week's business in the Flower Growers' market.

Orange blossoms are one of the specialties in the cut flower department of the E. F. Winterson Co. this week. In the retail store upstairs the spring seed display is being prepared.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. has delivered to Peter Reinberg 360 boxes of 16x18 glass, at Webers Station, which is the sidetrack at Mr. Reinberg's new country range. The glass will go into carnation houses early in the spring.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports that February 3 a carload of wild smilax, consisting of eighty-eight cases, was received and that by night all but eight cases had been sold.

The George Wittbold Co. had a large decoration at the Chicago Athletic Club this week.

The J. A. Budlong estate is preparing to build a good sized range of new houses at some new location early in the spring of 1909. The range will be given entirely to roses and for next season a number of new sorts will be tried. The Brides and Maids now being cut from grafted stock are especially good and the crop is fair and steady.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports having received a good sized order for long Beauties and fancy Richmond roses from New York city one day this week.

George Reinberg is cutting a large crop of short Beauties, something that has been scarce in this market for several months.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. reports a good crop of Killarney on at the New Castle plant, but a light crop of Maids and Brides.

C. W. McKellar says that his advices are that the heavy crop of cattleyas has passed off, along with the big crop of Beauties, and he looks for some skirmishing to get sufficient orchids as soon as the social season opens again.

The H. M. Hooker Co. is now installed in its new location at 120 to 128 West Washington street, where its facilities are greatly increased. The firm has been selling glass to greenhouse builders since 1855.

C. S. Stewart is no longer with the E. F. Winterson Co.

Zech & Mann have made arrangements for carrying a stock of three grades of rubber hose.

At E. C. Amling's it is reported that the supply of sweet peas is increasing rapidly. The demand for the long stock is excellent.

Wietor Bros. have provided for their season's requirements by potting up many thousands of the early carnation cuttings. They agree with Prof. Galloway that indoor culture in summer is the ideal way to grow carnations.

George Asmus had his grip packed to start for the carnation convention, when he was taken sick and spent the days in bed instead of at Washington. He says business is good at the Schiller establishment, running ahead of last year in January.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the quality of the Rhinebeck violets has shown much improvement in the last week or so and that the Rhinebeck growers report a large pick in prospect for Valentine's day.

J. D. Thompson was in from Joliet February 4. He says retail business is good there, his January sales having exceeded those of December.

The Floradora valentine, which was designed by Miss Anna Grace Sawyer, manager of the Pansy Garden Flower Shop, and was regarded as a successful novelty last year, has been placed on sale again this season, at the store of John Mangel. Being ingenious in design and artistic in execution, this valentine ought to be popular.

Frank Garland, at Des Plaines, is limping with rheumatism and has been in town but once since Christmas.

H. N. Bruns says retail trade is fair, there being a good quantity of funeral work and a few weddings. The wholesale call for valley has been rather light, but is improving.

Tuesday evening, February 4, the Chicago Railway Equipment Co. celebrated its fifteenth anniversary with a banquet at the rooms of the Union League Club. For this banquet J. F. Kidwell & Bro. furnished an elaborate table decoration, twelve feet in width, made entirely of boxwood and red and white carnations, and in general design resembling a wheel without a rim. The six large spokes, or radii, represented the six cities in which the company transacts business.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower business, as reported in both wholesale and retail circles, was good last week. The wholesalers say they had plenty of stock in all lines except white roses. These were much in demand and scarce. The retailers all had plenty of funeral work all through the week, but in other lines there is not anything of note going on. McKinley day used up a great many pink carnations, especially among the downtown stores.

At the wholesale houses February 3 there were plenty of American Beauties, but for all other roses there is a large demand and only few to be had. Carnations of the colored varieties are plentiful, but white is selling out clean, there being a large demand. Violets are not overplentiful and have gone up a few cents in price. Bulbous stock in all lines is enough to go around; stock of good quality. Tulips are selling fine. All greens, too, have had a good call all last week.

Various Notes.

Adolph Fehr, A. S. Halstead and Henry Emmons, of Belleville, were callers last week, buying supplies, and all report trade good. They will attend our club's carnation meeting February 13.

One of the features of the charity play at the Odeon last week was a large basket at the door, in which those who attended the entertainment dropped cut flowers on entering. The flowers were sent to the different hospitals the next day.

C. A. Kuehn received large consignments of carnations Wednesday, January 29, McKinley day. These were of extra fine quality and brought good prices and filled a large lot of advance orders.

The Riessen Floral Co., Foster, Burk and Siegel, downtown florists, report a big run on pink carnations last week, Wednesday, McKinley day. Other work, too, has been good of late. Young & Sons Co. and Ostertag Bros. were much pleased with business done last week.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, is cutting some extra fine quality of roses. These include Richmond, Ivory and Killarney. He will have his usual fine Easter lilies this year.

W. C. Smith & Co. are still receiving the greatest number of violets that come to this market and an extra good supply of carnations and bulbous stock.

Secretary Bentzen, of the Florists' Club, reports that he received a large number of replies from carnation growers that they will send their new varieties to the club's carnation meeting Thursday afternoon, February 13. As none of our local carnation growers attended the carnation meeting at Washington, they will come out in full force to see the new varieties on exhibition. As this is to be an open meeting, nonmembers are invited to attend. President Young and the trustees are making special efforts to make this the banner meeting of the club. All the special features that will come up at this meeting will be of great importance to all the members.

The death of Charles Flunker is reported in the obituary column this week.

Visitor: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Zero weather in New York! The change was a sudden one. From spring temperature to a blizzard in an hour, then from zero, in forty-eight hours, to a furious rain storm, and now close to the low record. The week begins with the prospects of continued cold and clear weather, the first real touch of winter of the entire season to date.

Roses are not plentiful. The demand is quite equal to the supply and prices are firm, with a rising tendency. Especially was this evident early this week in the No. 1 and No. 2 Maids and Brides, for which the prices realized were quite satisfactory. Every variety of rose reaching the market found ready purchasers. The best Beauties were snapped up promptly at 60 cents to 75 cents. The higher quotation seems to be top for the present. The carnation flood continues. Prices are far below the average of a year ago; 3 cents on Monday would purchase the selected stock of Enchantress. Few of the prize novelties even could realize more than $4 a hundred, and, as you saw by the record of the Washington convention, our prediction as to where the majority of the prizes would land proved correct. Every grower in this section has his favorite seedling. There is evidently no limit to the general supply. A year ago prices were fifty per cent better than now. Quality has never been surpassed. The divine flower is much in evidence.

Valley is abundant; some of the best of it holds at $3 per hundred, but the most of it sells at $2, and this is selected stock. A great deal of inferior quality reaches the market daily, for which, at times, a demand must be created and prices are unmentionable.

Orchids are abundant and at rates that make it possible for all retailers to be in the swim. No window decoration is now complete without them.

Of violets, unfortunately, the less said the better. Vast quantities of leftovers were sold at 20 cents and under during the week. The finest never went above 50 cents, and a great many thousands sold as low as 40 cents, of what the experts called first quality. Surely the old favorite has fallen upon discouraging days when one compares with even the rates of a year ago, while the $1 to $2 standard of 1906, and before, seems to have been nailed to the mast or furled for all time. Nevertheless, in size and quality the arrivals are quite up to any previous records.

Plenty of lilac, narcissi, tulips, freesia and all other harbingers of spring are arriving daily and prices for each are below the average, while complete disposal seems impossible.

To add to the general atmosphere of discontent that prevails in the wholesale district, several of the banks which the wholesalers patronize have closed their doors temporarily and so added to the annoyances of an already sufficiently distracting season. Fortunately the majority of the wholesalers are philosophers and optimistic. The consensus of opinion is that the worst is over and that from now on there will be gradual improvement until Easter, by which time all conflicting influences will have been harmonized and all doubts and fears as to business and presidential disturbances eliminated and confidence restored.

The retail florists are not complaining. Some of them say that business was never better. All look forward hopefully to a splendid Easter. Only a little over two months and the great day of all the year to floriculture will arrive. It is none too early to begin foundations for a greater Easter than we have ever experienced.

convention will be heard and some of the family of prize winning blooms exhibited. Full particulars concerning the annual dinner will be unfolded by Chairman Sheridan and an attendance of less than 100 at the banquet will be a great disappointment to the new officers and no credit to the organization. It is time there should be a demonstration of enthusiasm and harmony, as in the old days. The decorations and service will be an honor to the society and the entertainment features are to be in keeping with the club's reputation, as usual.

The Greek-American Florists' and Growers' Association held its first annual ball and reception last Friday evening, January 31. A large sum was realized for the Greek school of New York. The attendance was gratifying to President George D. Nicholas and his committee, many of the Greek wholesale and retail florists being on his staff. These men of Athens know how to make a success of everything they undertake, from outings to receptions. Over 3,000 tickets were sold and in the crowd were many of the leading wholesale and retail florists of the city.

Hitchings & Co. are at last safely housed in their new quarters on Spring street, Elizabeth, N. J., where their general offices and immense new factory are located. Never before has this firm enjoyed so good facilities for the extensive and growing business.

The Fleischman Diocletian Baths at Sixth avenue and Forty-second street open to the public this week. J. Fleischman is the president of the company and Herman Warendorff one of the officials. An immense sun bath on the roof occupies 50,000 square feet of space and is beautified by palms, blooming plants and statuary. It is the most complete and enterprising accomplishment of its kind on earth.

I. S. Hendrickson, with John Lewis Childs, who was operated upon for appendicitis, has passed through the ordeal successfully and is now rapidly recovering. Walter Sheridan, who escaped disaster by a similar route, has fully regained his health. Several of the wholesalers in New York and elsewhere are quite corpulent enough to test this medical voyage of exploration. Those who have made the trip do not, however, recommend it.

A. J. Guttman has been suffering from a bone felon on his thumb. It gave him little sleep for several nights.

Joseph Fenrich has recovered from the effects of his collision with the trolley, narrowly escaping the loss of an eye in the encounter.

J. K. Allen has had a battle with neuralgia that has made life hardly worth living.

A good many retail florists are alive to the fact that St. Valentine's day comes to town next Friday, February 14. Those who do some catchy advertising will reap the benefit. More and more the day is growing popular as a gift-giving occasion, especially with the young folks. Boxes of flowers are the popular method of salutation. The $1, $2 and $3 boxes of cut flowers sell the best. We have some Broadway florists who make a specialty of these boxes frequently during the year and they sell rapidly at all times.

The store at 41 West Twenty-eighth street, long used by Thos. Young, Jr., as a wholesale and retail center, has been leased to Charles Millang, the wholesale florist of West Twenty-ninth street, who has purchased the elaborate furnishings and will take possession immediately. The location is considered one of the most desirable in the city.

We are all proud of the success of our carnation experts, Messrs. Ward, Pierson, Cockcroft, Weber and Reimels, who won gold and bronze medals and first and second prizes too numerous to mention at the Washington carnation convention. All who were at Washington are loud in their praises of the exhibition and delighted with their reception and the uniform courtesy and care given them by their brother florists.

The dinner of the Nassau County Horticultural Society at Glen Cove January 29 was a great success. The attendance was an even fifty and from 5 p. m. until 10 p. m. the fun was fast and furious. The retiring president, Mr. McKenzie, was presented with a handsome memento of the society's respect, to which he feelingly responded. Nearly every one present did his share to add to the evening's enjoyment. The Rickards brothers were full of music and sang all their new songs and many of their old-time melodies. President Adolph Jaennecke gave the opening address. Mr. Lenker's toast was "Harmony." Vice-president W. H. Marshall, of the New York Florists' Club, spoke eloquently for that society. Mr. Scott, of Tarrytown, and Joseph Manda, of Orange, responded to toasts and Mr. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., made a hit with "The Gardener as I Have Found Him." Other speakers included Mr. MacFarlane, of Tarrytown; Mr. Burnett, the New York seedsman, and others. James

BOSTON.

The Market.

The cold wave which struck us January 29 and which, with occasional mild spells sandwiched in for variety, seems inclined to stay, has completely demoralized the trade in cut flowers. With zero temperatures and a keen wind blowing customers are lacking at the stores and the wholesale demand has suffered severely, the market being in a poorer condition than for many weeks. Roses, which hitherto have sold well, have suffered with other flowers, especially in the case of Bride and Maid. Killarney and Richmond have sold rather better than other varieties. Carnations are in heavy oversupply and many have had to be cleared at low prices. First-class flowers have made fairly satisfactory prices, but the demand has been unequal to the supply. Single violets have shortened up considerably, owing to the cold weather. These and doubles are little changed in price.

Bulbous stock is almost a glut once more. Double Von Sion, Golden Spur, princeps and ornatus are the leading narcissi, while several tulips in addition to La Reine are arriving.

Sweet peas, callas, lilies, mignonette, valley and other flowers are more than ample for the lessened calls. Trade in pot plants has suffered severely from the severe weather.

Park Street Market Exhibition.

The schedule of prizes for the Park Street market exhibition Saturday, February 29, has been issued. The show will be open from 11 to 4 o'clock, and will undoubtedly attract a fine lot of exhibits. Prizes offered are as follows:

Roses, twenty-five blooms each of American Beauty, pink, red, white and any other colors, prizes $10 and $5 in each class. A silver cup valued at $25 is offered for the best new rose, and certificates of merit will be awarded any specimens.

For fifty blooms of carnations of each color, crimson, dark pink, light pink, scarlet, white and any other color, $5 and $3 is offered. For twenty-five blooms of the same colors $3 and $2 will be awarded. For 100 blooms in one vase, not less than six varieties, a cup valued at $15 and $7.50 is offered, and for 100 blooms any new or standard variety there will be a $25 cup for first and $7.50 second.

For fifty tulips prizes are $5 and $3, and the same prizes are offered for fifty narcissi. For collection of bulbous stock, twenty-five of a variety, $12 and $8 will be given. Prizes are also listed

Various Notes.

The death of W. M. Robertson, one of the old-time florists of Boston, is reported in the obituary column this week.

Frederick L. Olmsted, Jr., delivered the lecture at Horticultural hall February 1 to an appreciative audience. His remarks were made more interesting by numerous stereopticon views, dealing with the adornment of home grounds. William Turner, of Oceanic, N. J., who lectures on vegetables for forcing February 8, will present a subject of special interest to many growers in and around Boston.

Fire at the private greenhouses of J. Stone, of the firm of Austin & Stone, of Boston, located at Wellesley, destroyed a collection of plants said to be assessed at $8,000.

W. W. Rawson & Co. showed plants of the pretty pink begonia, Gloire de Sceaux, at Horticultural hall February 2. Thomas W. Head exhibited a vase of White Perfection carnations.

Charles T. Stevens, of Plymouth, had a batch of several hundred lilies frozen during the cold wave of January 30, but by hosing with cold water and covering he managed to save them.

A number of the Washington conventionists did not return until February 3. All enjoyed their outing and the election of one of their number to the presidency added to their pleasure.

If the old adage about the ground hog holds good this year, we must prepare for six weeks more of winter. Ice dealers are pleased with the cold snap and are rapidly filling their houses. Cheap ice is something even florists can be thankful for.

At the carnation night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 18, W. R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., will be the lecturer. There promises to be a record attendance and numerous exhibits are promised.

Much sympathy is felt for Bernard McGintry, the well known salesman at the Music Hall market, in the death of one of his little twin daughters, aged 18 months.

At the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, January 28, the attendance was large and the gathering typically representative of Newport horticulturists. Mr. MacLellan treated the subject ably and exhaustively, emphasizing the importance to horticulture of intelligent attention being given continuously to the spreading of a knowledge of plant names. The speaker gave it as his opinion that it would be contrary to the best interests of horticulture to do anything that would bring the common names of plants into disuse, and urged his hearers to aid with their influence in getting the common names as well as the botanical names of plants taught in the public schools.

Coming to the question of plant registration, Mr. MacLellan pointed out what seemed to him the injustice of the collection of a fee for the privilege of registering a new variety and said that while he did not doubt the ability of the S. A. F. to conduct this matter, still he thought it of sufficient importance to be under the direct control of the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

A general discussion took place on the more prominent points brought out. Among those who took part in it were A. O. D. Taylor, president of the Natural History Society; Bruce Butterton, James McLeish and John Baumgartner.

Mr. Baumgartner spoke on the importance of a systematic warfare on the San Jose scale. Even this not being considered sufficient for the evening, after refreshments were served, the president started what turned out to be a very animated discussion on dahlias, more especially the question of whether Mrs. Charles Turner, a beautiful yellow dahlia, is really a true cactus or a decorative. Many members contended that it is a decorative, but James Robertson, who is generally conceded to be the best grower of dahlias in these parts, seemed to effectually down that contention by the statement that this dahlia, when well grown in good soil, develops into a true cactus, but when grown in poor soil and treated indifferently it deteriorates into a decorative. This statement of Mr. Robertson was fortified by a recollection by many of the members of the beautiful flowers of Mrs. Charles Turner he had exhibited.

State of Trade.

Snow covers everything, many feet deep, for a fierce storm has been raging for three days. At the beginning of last week it was bitterly cold, once going to 25 degrees below zero.

Flowers are plentiful. Tulips and daffodils are the latest arrivals, selling at 75 cents per dozen in the retail stores. Some good carnations are bringing $1 per dozen. Roses are not good, Beauties scarce. Violets, sweet peas and valley are abundant.

Business was not brisk during January. The Charity ball caused a little stir for bouquets, etc. There have been few large weddings or funerals lately, but we

Various Notes.

P. McKenna & Son's Store No. 2 has been re-arranged inside. They say they sold 3,000 carnations last week.

Miss Murray reports that business is just moving along, no worse and no better than other years. Her store looks exceedingly pretty.

Miss Cairn's window has been a mass of fine carnations and ferns, well arranged. She says she always has plenty to do.

Miss Carmichael reports trade to be rather slow. She has decided to keep her store for another year.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market conditions of last week have been bad at times and most of the stock was hard to move. Roses seem to be the only flowers for which there was any great demand. All grades of roses sold up clean. Beauties have not sold so well as might have been expected. The supply is limited and good medium ones are scarce, while the long Beauties are a little plentiful and hard to move. Gardenias are scarce and are sold as soon as they arrive, most of them being ordered ahead. Cattleyas are none too plentiful and sell well, while the demand for cypripediums is poor and they can be had in any quantity. Carnations are coming in heavily and the quality is fine, but the demand is light, except for the fancy varieties, which sell out clean from day to day. The new carnation, Toreador, which is an improvement on Prosperity, has been used extensively by Pennock Bros. in their window decorations and was much admired.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

The most beautiful as well as the most useful Fern ever offered. It is suitable both for specimen pot plants and for using as a cut frond. Well grown stock ready now. 2¼-inch, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 4-inch, $10.00 per doz.; $75.00 per 100. Specimens in pans, $2.00, $3.00 and $5.00 each.

WM. P. CRAIG, 1305 Filbert St., Philadelphia

Sweet peas are fine and can be had in almost any color. The fancy grades clean up nicely, while the shorts are plentiful and hard to move at any price. Daffodils and tulips can be had in any quantity and are good, but do not sell. Paper Whites have shortened up and are in fairly good demand. A large number of them are sold for funeral work, of which there is quite a lot. Valley and Romans are a glut on the market and can be bought cheap in large quantity. Violets, single and double, are plentiful. The fancy grades sell fairly well, while the smaller ones are hard to move. Good lilac and mignonette are in fair demand, but there is entirely too much of the poorer grade. Harrisii and callas are in good shape; the demand is also fair and they sell up close. Yellow daisies are good stock and are a little scarce. White daisies are just the reverse. Plumosus and Sprengeri are none too plentiful and the same is true of smilax. The other green stock, of which there is quite a lot, is selling poorly.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, which was held Tuesday evening, February 4, was largely attended. Edward A. Harvey read a paper on carnation culture under glass all summer, which was well thought of, it being one of the best papers ever read before the club.

A. Harvey & Sons had a fine exhibit of carnations. The varieties were Beacon, Robert Craig, Victory, White Perfection, Winsor, Lawson, Aristocrat, Lady Bountiful, and a white seedling of enormous size and fine stem which looks like a good bloomer.

Joseph Heacock Co. has a fine thing in the new pink seedling which has a color something like Rose-pink Enchantress. The flower is enormous in size.

Samuel Batchelor, gardener to C. A. Newbold, had Enchantress, white and pink, and a fine pair of white cyclamen, which were much admired.

The Strafford Flower Farm exhibited a fine lot of Enchantress, Beacon, Bountiful and Winsor.

F. H. Kramer, of Washington, had a fine vase of the new rose, Queen Beatrice. The flowers were large and a fine shade of pink, on good stems.

H. A. Dreer had a plant of Clematis indivisa, which was covered with a fine lot of blooms and was much admired.

Hatboro.

Harry Weiss & Sons have two houses, 35x300, and thirty-five feet high. They contain 35,000 carnation plants of Enchantress, Winsor, Lieut. Peary, Mrs. Lawson, White Lawson, Queen, Craig, Aristocrat and Crimson Glow. There are four benches in each house and the plants are supported by wires running the full length of the house, with strings across, which make an excellent support. Enchantress is fine and will cut quite heavily for the next three or four weeks; the other varieties are also praiseworthy, and the houses massed with buds are a sight well worth seeing. Winsor and Aristocrat are well thought of and will be grown extensively next season. The young stock is clean and healthy. The entrance to the houses is through the boiler-shed, which is on the south side and contains two boilers, about 100 horse-power. The greenhouses cover five acres of ground. The cut of this place is handled by the Leo Niessen Co.

Eugene Weiss has thirteen houses of different widths, but all are 175 feet long, except the cutting house, which is only seventy-five feet. Among the 50,000 plants are Enchantress, Lieut. Peary, Queen, Mrs. Lawson, White Lawson, Robt. Craig, Rose-pink Enchantress and Mme. Joost. The carnation houses are short-span, open between, are in excellent condition, and will cut well later on. Brides and Maids, mostly two-year-old grafted, are quite fair; while the cut is not so heavy, prospects are good for a heavy one later. The boiler-shed and vault are combined, making it very handy. This place covers three acres of ground. The two places are very close, only about eight minutes' walk to the station. The popular Samuel Lilly distributes this stock.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report the arrival of the steamers Menominee and Andalusia with shipments of new shapes in fancy Easter baskets, and Japanese air plants.

J. L. Pennock, who has been confined to his home for the last few days, is said to have typhoid fever.

The heavy wind of Saturday and Sunday did considerable damage to a great many greenhouses in and near this city.

Robt. Crawford says Joost carnation is the most profitable to grow.

The wholesale florists are well satisfied with their association, which is working well.

R. A. Stewart says Killarney is the best rose to sell and gives good satisfaction.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. is receiving a fine lot of sweet peas and single daffodils.

Alfred Burton, of Wyndmoor, is cutting a fine lot of long Beauties.

M. Rice & Co. are receiving Easter novelties on each incoming steamer. The Barcelona, eight days overdue, brought a large shipment.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving daily a choice lot of fancy carnations from H. Weiss & Sons, of Hatboro.

William Kleinheinz, of Lynwood Hall, captured the Michell and Bisset prizes at Washington last week, thus adding further to his reputation as a carnation grower. Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, was successful in securing recognition for his new pink seedling carnation, No. 100, which is described as being a shade of pink between Enchantress and Mrs. Lawson.

E. F. Lieken, of Lansdowne, was among the Philadelphians who attended the convention at Washington last week.

William P. Craig is much pleased with the interest taken by rose growers throughout the country in the new rose, Mrs. Jardine. PHIL.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Wm. M. Robertson.

William M. Robertson, one of the old-time florists of Boston and a member of the first board of directors of the Park Street flower market in that city, in 1892, died January 29, aged 65 years. The deceased, who was a Scotchman, was at one time associated with Mr. Horrigan, of Foxboro. He was proficient in athletics in earlier years and had won showy, valuable prizes at putting the shot, being, in fact, champion for a long time. He was of a genial disposition and well liked by all who knew him. Although not much seen round the markets of late years, his old-time associates heard of his passing with much regret. W. N. C.

Charles Flunker.

Charles Flunker, aged 73 years, one of the old-time florists of St. Louis, living at 3727 Tennessee avenue, died last week after a long illness. Before Mr. Flunker died he named his four pallbearers. They were Emil Schray, Conrad Bergsterman, Frank J. Fillmore and John Walther. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon, January 30,

E. P. Stannard.

E. P. Stannard died at his home in Westbrook, Conn., January 23, after several weeks' illness with rheumatism, followed by a complication which finally affected his heart. Mr. Stannard engaged in the florists' trade three years ago and business increased so that two new houses were added last year. Mr. Stannard was 52 years old and is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Mrs. Jacobine L. Baldinger.

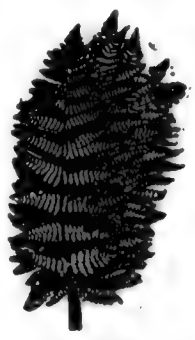
One of the few women florists of Pittsburg, Mrs. Jacobine L. Baldinger, wife of Henry Baldinger, died February 1, aged 67. Mrs. Baldinger was born in Germany and for many years resided on the south side of Pittsburg. She owned two florists' stands, one in the South Side market, and the other in the Pittsburg market. She was a member of Grace Evangelical church; also a member of the Independent Ladies' Mutual Beneficial Society and was connected with an auxiliary of the Allentown Turners. Besides her husband she is survived by four sons and two daughters.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

National Flower Show Premiums.

The following list of premiums offered for competition at the national flower show at Chicago, November 6 to 15, 1908, covers all special offers definitely in hand January 22, 1908. It totals over $1,800 in addition to the S. A. F. medals.

The thanks of the committee are tendered to these public spirited and generous firms and individuals who have responded so nobly.



The many others who intend making similar offers are urgently requested to hurry up, so that all may be included in the preliminary list now in press, as otherwise proper publicity and a good competition cannot be secured.

NO FROZEN WATER PIPES.

A system which was recently adopted at the Bell Mawr Greenhouses, at Mount Ephraim, N. J., to protect the water pipes from frost, was found to be one of the best plans for this purpose.

A home-made trap valve is first placed in the bottom of the tank, over the flush pipe. The valve is made as follows: A thick piece of rubber, about 4x6 inches, is fastened to a block about 4x4 inches and about two inches thick. This block serves two purposes—to keep the rubber flat and also to act as a weight. The 2-inch margin of the rubber, which is not covered by the block, acts as the hinge, and is fastened to the bottom of the tank. This valve is operated by a rope which extends from the block to the top of the tank, over a pulley, and then down to the bottom of the trestle. When the rope is pulled it opens the valve, and when the rope is left loose the valve closes, as the water acts as the weight and the more water in the tank the tighter it closes. Remember, a small chain is to be fastened to the block and to the floor of the tank, so that the valve can open only about two inches.

In the boiler-pit a spigot is placed on the water pipes, at the lowest point on the grounds. At night, after the valve is closed in the tank, this spigot is opened and all water is drained out, which makes it impossible for any water to freeze in the pipes.

PLANTS IN A LIVING-ROOM.

Will too much steam cause the leaves of geraniums and hydrangeas to drop when kept in a living-room during winter? C. A. P.

A dry, warm atmosphere, such as is found in the average living-room in winter, will cause the foliage on geraniums to turn brown and fall off. They prefer a cool room, not above 55 degrees at night. Your hydrangeas should have been rested in the cellar during the winter and any old foliage now remaining on them may be expected to fall off. They are better kept cool and rather dry from November to March, and at this time should lose their foliage naturally. C. W.

W. F. Dreer returned to Philadelphia from Pasadena, Cal., about a fortnight ago.

Some of the canners are reported to have more sweet corn than they need for seed and even an offering of peas is said to have been made.

Henry Nungesser & Co. issued their wholesale list of grass seeds January 27, in which it is stated, "All grass and clover seeds are higher than usual this season, and really high grade qualities are scarce."

L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, are now occupying their new warehouse on Como avenue. It gives them greatly enlarged facilities and they look forward to a banner business for 1908. The season is just opening in the northwest.

The Holland bulb salesmen are now all present or accounted for and have spread over all that part of the country east of the Twin Cities, Denver and Galveston. They say, almost to a man, that they are getting their usual number of orders, but the buyers are equally unanimous in saying the orders they have placed are not as large as in recent years.

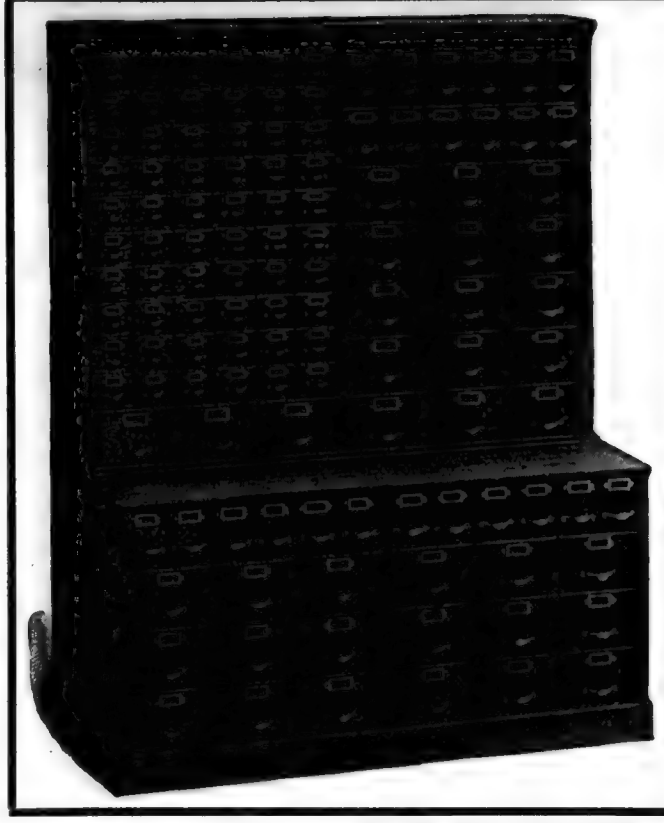
SEND the REVIEW items of interest to the seed trade.

THE seed catalogues have been coming to hand in greater number this week than at any previous time. Not all were early, but nearly all are now in the hands of the people.

C. C. MORSE & Co. report that the weather conditions in the Santa Clara valley have so far this season been very favorable, the rains coming at just about the right times.



THE large seed houses in eastern cities say January business was about equal to that of last year and in a few instances slightly greater. It was something of a disappointment, for most houses had made greater effort than ever before to get January business.

G. S. MAY, formerly with the Cox Seed Co., San Francisco, Cal., has opened a general seed store at 257 and 259 Market street, San Francisco, under the title of the May Seed Co. He opened for business about the middle of December and reports trade as excellent thus far. He will soon issue a catalogue.

THE packeting and mailing of the government free seeds is progressing slowly. The contractors, Cole & Crissey, are handicapped by inadequate facilities in the temporary wooden building erected on the grounds of the Department of Agriculture after the seed building was destroyed by fire. It is, however, expected to have the output packeted in season so that the last of the seeds will go out by the usual date.

THE seed firm of L. H. Hitchcock & Sons, Nashville, Tenn., whose warehouses were recently destroyed by fire, is ready for business again at the old location. The firm has also opened a new warehouse at 147 Second avenue, north.

THE prediction that there would eventually develop a sufficient quantity of seeds for the season's needs seems possible of fulfillment, if such a surplus list as that of the Barteldes Seed Co., issued at Lawrence, Kan., February 1, is an indication. Offers are made of round lots of such articles as Stowell's Evergreen sweet corn, Red Wethersfield onion, Southport White Globe onion and Alaska peas. Spinach is offered in thousand pound lots.

CLOVER LAW IN OHIO.

Ohio clover seed dealers are up in arms over a proposed bill in the legislature, requiring clover seed to be labeled and guaranteed either medium or mammoth. They say such legislation would be a body blow to Toledo, which is generally conceded the clover seed center of the world, especially when other states have no such regulations.

The following letter of protest from the Kelly Co., one of the leading Cleveland seed concerns, voices the sentiments of the seed dealers in that city:

It is said the committee of agriculture, to whom the bill was referred, will report favorably on the legislation and unless quick action is taken, it will no doubt be passed. Usually Ohio is one of the largest producers of clover and the Toledo Board of Trade regulates the clover seed prices of the world, while Cleveland, Cincinnati and other Ohio cities handle it in large quantities.

With this law in force no clover seed can be handled unless in the immediate vicinity where it is raised. Nobody but the grower knows whether it is medium or mammoth and he alone can guarantee it. Even the local dealer would not buy it under such conditions except on personal investigation of the growing crop or from a personal knowledge that the grower and his guarantee were responsible. The larger dealers would not dare to purchase or sell clover seed under such conditions, as such guarantees could not be traced back to their origin.

Before reaching the last purchaser, seed often passes through a dozen hands. All dealers must reclean and grade clover seed in order to sell it. Each little lot can not be sold by itself. They must mix the different lots together to make a uniform mixture, which is salable.

How could the identity of any particular lot be traced and the responsibility be placed a year later when the crop is matured? says one dealer. There is no reason for deception on the part of the large dealers. Both clovers are equally valuable and nothing is to be gained by any dealer in mixing the two varieties. In fact, unusual precautions are taken to prevent the varieties becoming mixed, but to guarantee his sales would be absolutely impossible and so extremely hazardous that no responsible dealer would do it, for various reasons. First, he does not grow it himself and must depend on the carefulness of every man who handles it from the grower to the man that sells it to him. Again, climatic and soil conditions, combined with the early or late sowing of clover, will cause such a variation in the crop that it would be difficult or impossible to differentiate them. How can we or you become responsible or guarantee a thing whose identity is so easily lost after it leaves our hands? No responsible seed dealer will take the risk.

As stated above, we exercise great care and our best judgment to have not only clover seed but all other kinds of seed true to name and that is all anybody can do. In our opinion, if the law is passed, it will prohibit the purchase and sale of clover seed in Ohio and not only the dealers, but the farmers will suffer untold injury. Everybody interested should write his representative to consider the situation well before voting for such a law.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending January 25 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Grass	154	$1,791
Rape	8	21
Other	..	6,291

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $3,484.

GLADIOLUS BULBS.

Can you tell me what is the matter with the gladiolus bulbs I enclose, and the remedy? C. H. K.

The bulbs sent are badly diseased. It is not an uncommon occurrence to find a small percentage of these at lifting time. They should never be kept and any bulbs showing the disease ought to be discarded. Keep your bulbs in a cool, dry cellar just clear of freezing. A warm storage place will greatly weaken their vitality. Plant in well manured ground and do not allow the manure to come in direct contact with the bulbs, as this will encourage the disease. In stiff soil, use some sand in planting. If inclined to sourness, dress with lime. C. W.

Vegetable Forcing.

A SUPPLY of garden herbs is an important addition to gardens in summer. In many gardens there are herbs of all kinds that are likely to be called for, and there should be some grown in every garden. Many useful herbs can be grown to be fit for use from seed sown the same season.

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

February is the month which most vegetable growers look to as the best month to sow cucumber seed for the spring crop. By the time the seed is up and the little plants potted off, the weather is much more suitable than when they are planted earlier. The plants grown from seed sown by the middle of this month often come to bearing almost as soon as plants from seed sown a month earlier, and are always stronger and more likely to produce a good, healthy and more lasting crop.

There are many reasons for this. First of all, there is the increased amount of sunlight; that is, there are usually more bright days. The sun is rapidly getting higher and has much more strength, besides rising earlier and setting later each day, and sunlight, we all know, is what the cucumber needs. A young cucumber plant will grow more in one day in March or April than in three days in December or January at the same temperature. And to be a healthy, profitable crop, cucumbers must make a rapid growth, without being checked or stunted. A poor, unhealthy lot of plants would far better be torn out and the house replanted to young plants, even when considerable time is lost, for a house which makes a poor start cannot be made to pay well.

Cucumbers can be grown through the entire winter, but it requires a most thorough and careful grower, with the best of greenhouses. They are also often made to pay when planted as late as April 1. They come to bearing long before the outdoor-grown plants and sell for much better prices than the outdoor product, even after the latter become quite plentiful.

One of the principal reasons for planting in February is that the last crop of lettuce is not marketed until about March 1, and as soon as the beds can be manured and spaded up the young cucumber plants are ready to bench.

There are many different methods of starting the young plants. Some plant the seed in the pots, filled about two-thirds full of soil, and when the plants are well up they are thinned out to one or two plants and the pots are filled with soil. For this purpose 3-inch or 4-inch pots are used, the size depending on whether one or two plants are to be left in the pot. Many growers plant the seed in boxes and transplant the plants from the seed boxes right into the greenhouse beds, where they are to grow and bear.

I prefer to sow the seed in flats of finely sifted soil, which should be light and loose and not previously used in the greenhouses. If the soil is too heavy, a little sand will loosen it up considerably, but it is best to have a pile previously prepared for this purpose. The seed should not be sown too thick; to drop the seeds about an inch apart and use more boxes is better than to crowd them too much, as they spoil very quickly after coming up if too thick. The plants are potted as soon as two days old, or when the two seed leaves are developed. If left too long, the roots get tangled and are broken in handling. They are then put in the lightest and warmest place in the houses, and where they are protected from drafts. The best temperature is 68 degrees at night and 75 to 85 degrees by day, according to the amount of sunshine.

Strong bottom heat is as necessary as it is for the propagating house. When the plants have made about three leaves they are ready to be planted out in the beds, two plants in a hill and the hills about three feet and a half apart.

From the time the seed is planted, cucumbers require the most careful attention as to temperature, ventilation and watering. This should not be left to inexperienced help. They should at no time be soaked with water until the vines are quite large. Great care should also be taken that they do not suffer for want of water at any time, or they become stunted. A little ventilation should be given each bright day, to harden the plants, but not too much, so as to blow the leaves or cool the house. Hourly attention is not too often for best results. The plants should not be watered too late to allow the foliage to dry off before night, and ventilation should be given early in the day and closed down as the sun commences to decline.

There is probably no hothouse vegetable which requires such constant attention to grow successfully as the cucumber, nor a crop which pays any better when well grown. H. G.

POOR GROWTH OF LETTUCE.

I am sending you a sample of soil and a diseased lettuce plant. Will you kindly tell me what is the matter? I have new soil in my benches and in spots the lettuce will not grow at all—just gets bunchy and curls up, while in other places in the same bench it grows to fine plants. I use the same soil in another house for carnations, and it grows fine blooms. M. B. S.

Your soil seems to be of a stiff, retentive nature, one that would require great care in the matter of watering, but if this were carefully attended to I see no reason why good letture could not be grown in it. Keep the surface of the soil well stirred, and when it becomes dry choose a bright, dry day for watering. Water thoroughly and evenly, making sure that one place is not getting more or less than another. Such a soil as yours will retain the moisture for a considerable time, so I would advise you not to water when you think the soil is dry, but wait until you see your plants beginning to suffer for want of it; then give a good watering as directed above. You will be surprised to find how little water your plants will really need in such a soil as this, especially during the dull, short days.

WM. SCOTT.

LARVAE IN CUCUMBER SOIL.

In growing hothouse cucumbers we gather stable manure during the winter and pile it up. In the following April it is worked over and then left until used the following fall. In September we fill our house with one-third of this manure and two-thirds soil—rotted sod—and this compost is thoroughly worked over in the benches. The plants are then set out. About six to eight weeks afterward the pieces of manure all over the house are full of white maggots about an eighth of an inch long. These hatch into a small, dark bluish fly or gnat. While in the larvæ stage they kill many cucumber vines.

Can any cucumber grower or anyone else give me any light as to prevention of these maggots or how to save the cucumber vines? W. & C.

I understand from your statement that the sods and manure are composted separately. In my judgment this is not as desirable as composting the soil and manure together by putting down a layer of sods about twelve inches deep, on top of this putting a layer of manure eight to ten inches deep, then sods and manure until the heap is two feet and a half or three feet deep. Make the heap about eight feet wide and any length desired. Leave it saucer-shaped on top. After it has been up for three months, begin at one end and cut it down with a mattock and re-pile it so as to thoroughly work the soil and manure together. If handled in this way, the manure becomes so thoroughly mixed with the soil that it does not offer a congenial breeding place for insects, while heaps of pure manure do. It is likely that if you sprinkle the benches with tobacco water or with dilute household ammonia you can destroy the larvæ in the soil. Care must be exercised not to use the ammonia strong enough to injure the plants. When dilute it is a good fertilizer and a very successful remedy for earthworms and larvæ of various sorts in the soils of greenhouse benches. L. C. C.

CULTURE OF CELERY.

I desire information on the following points with regard to the culture of celery in this Oregon climate: When to sow, when and how to plant, when and how to irrigate. Can it be transplanted from outside to the greenhouse in the fall, our market being the best between Thanksgiving and New Year's? Or, could it be raised in the greenhouse? G. G.

The best time and place to sow celery is outdoors, just as early as the ground can be worked in spring. In case of very cold locations a coldframe may be employed, but celery is healthier and stronger when grown without artificial heat from start to finish.

When the plants are large enough to handle they should be pricked out about two inches apart in a bed of well pulverized soil, shading being provided for a few days after the operation, so that they will not be wilted down by the sun until they have had a chance to get a fresh hold.

When the plants are from four to six inches high is the time to plant in their permanent quarters. We like planting in double rows best, as the plants are easier to handle and easier to reach when earthing up than if set, as some do, in beds of four rows. Where the soil is deep enough so that there is no danger of the roots coming in contact with poor material, we prefer to take out a trench about eight inches deep and one foot wide and set the plants in this, working a liberal dressing of well decomposed manure well into the soil before planting.

Your question as to irrigation I cannot very well answer, not knowing what facilities you may have for irrigating. Celery is not very particular how the water is applied, as long as it gets plenty of it, and if you have plenty of water convenient I would say keep it liberally supplied when the conditions of the soil necessitate its application.

Your celery will keep better outdoors than anywhere you can put it. The atmosphere of a greenhouse is uncongenial to its welfare at any stage of the game. It can be covered over where it has grown if sufficient material can be procured to make a frost-proof covering. It should not take so much to keep the frost out at the season of the year you mention, but to save covering material you could lift your plants just before danger of injury by frost, and store in a pit dug deep enough so that the tops of your celery would be about on a level with the surface of the ground when set upright in the pit. The plants can be set as close together as they will stand. The location for the pit should be such that no water will be apt to lodge in the bottom, as too much moisture would promote damping and might result in considerable loss from this cause.

From four to five feet is the most convenient width for the pit to be made. When ready for covering, good, strong pieces of wood should be laid across the pit at even distances, and on these boards can be laid lengthwise of the pit, leaving an air space between the tops of the plants and the boards. A covering of litter, old corn stalks, leaves, or whatever material is most conveniently procured, should be put on gradually, as the weather becomes colder, but openings should be left at intervals to give ventilation. On cold nights these openings can be closed, but should be opened during the day when the air is sufficiently warm to allow any condensation to escape. The covering should not be made any heavier than is necessary to prevent actual freezing inside of the pit. The nearer the atmosphere in the pit is kept to the freezing point, the better your celery will keep. Wm. Scott.

PACIFIC COAST.

Spokane, Wash.—The Lidgerwood Greenhouses, owned by George T. Crane, were destroyed by fire the morning of January 20. Mr. Crane estimates his loss at $9,000, with $2,000 insurance.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—J. P. Parker has now in bloom a white flowered form of Cattleya Trianæ that is very beautiful. The three flowers now open show some pale yellow in the lip, but there is apparently no trace of the usual carmine. The sepals are pure white and gracefully crinkled at the edges.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There is no great flurry in retail circles, though trade might be much worse. A steady demand for funeral work, with a fairly good sale on cut flowers, is the record for January. Although stock has been abundant, yet there is no great surplus, hence no slashing in prices. The good effect of a few days' bright sunshine has been manifested in a better condition of stock, and this improvement came none too soon, for the continual rain and dark weather were putting carnations to sleep, giving roses the mildew and plants a touch of the grippe. The sunshine has also blessed the violet growers, who are now picking quantities of the ladies' favorite flower.

Various Notes.

James Martin has opened a branch store in the new Rothschild building at Fourth and Washington streets. This is right in the center of the business district and should make good from the start.

R. C. Cook, familiarly known as Violet Dick, a curbstone vender, has shown enterprise by opening a small store at 107 Fourth street.

H. C. Richards is the owner of a greenhouse on Summit avenue and is growing some good carnations.

We recently had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Suzuki, of the Yokohama Nurseries, Japan, who is on a business trip to this country and England. Other visitors were: Ole Erickson, Astoria; William Tackman, The Dalles; Felix Verhoeven, Forest Grove, and Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, Stevenson, Wash.

Those who make regular weekly business calls are Charles F. Street and Sam Roake, of Clackamas, Ore. Besides supplying the local trade with violets and fine Bride, Maid and Richmond roses, Mr. Street ships to Seattle and other points and is a grower of considerable skill. Mr. Roake caters to our wants in the line of dagger ferns, Oregon grape and sphagnum moss and we use lots of them here. H. J. M.

SWEET PEAS IN CALIFORNIA.

The old-fashioned sweet pea, although one of the easiest grown of the hardy annuals, has not been a money-maker in the fullest sense of the word for several seasons. There has been an excess of this flower at the height of the season and the price has usually gone begging in consequence. There is nothing that grows more easily or can better be depended on to give its quota of blossoms than this popular flower, but at the same time there is nothing that will more quickly go out of business unless the conditions are kept favorable for a continuation of blooming. I refer especially to allowing a patch to go partially to seed and then attempting to get them into shape again to continue blooming.

The earliness at which sweet peas can be induced to bloom in this locality depends entirely on the climatic conditions. They have practically been ideal up to the present time and the growers who planted their seed early last fall may expect blooming to commence in a few weeks. We have had practically no frost so far this season, but it is not on account of frost that the young plants get stunted, as much as from an excess of moisture. We have been very fortunate in this line also, and unless poor judgment was used in the selection of a place to grow the plants, the excess of moisture should not have bothered them to any extent.

A combination of excessive moisture, several degrees of frost and a plentiful supply of hungry snails is all that is necessary to finish one's ambitions along the lines of sweet peas.

If the seed is planted now there will be no need to bother about the other conditions, but there will be no early flowering this season. This class of flowers needs an abundance of moisture, with rich, light soil, and they must be kept growing. The first requisite is to keep the flowers picked off, and the second is to give them moisture constantly. That they be trained somewhat, except for convenience, is not essential to either the quantity or quality of the blooms. If the vines are not mauled about too much, the stems will invariably grow straight and, with some varieties, they appear to last in bloom much longer when allowed to sprawl on the ground.

About four sowings of sweet peas should be made during the year and, if the other conditions are right, it will be possible to have blooms at least eight months in succession. After a wet winter, even if the plants succeed in weathering the gale, they are generally so weak that they do not last long after they commence to flower. But after such a mild winter as we are now having has passed over, the sweet peas should be in good shape to commence blooming early in March, and if judgment is used for subsequent plantings, they can be easily had until the early part of next winter. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

excess of moisture, which has dampened the ardor of the flower buying public so that there has been but little to put on the credit side of the ledger this week. The price of flowers is gradually going downward and there is no telling how far it will reach. The fact that we have had no cold weather at all this season and, in addition, the regulation stagnation of trade, have put everything in the flower line away down. There has been such a slight check in the growing conditions of flowering plants in general that we can look for an avalanche of cut flowers in the near future. Outside narcissi and daffodils are good examples, as also are violets. The latter, at no time during the season, have been at all scarce and the price realized by the growers has been twenty-five per cent less than that of last season. With narcissi the market is at present overstocked and the prices are not over half what they were last year.

Carnations are extremely plentiful and very cheap. With roses there is at the present moment no excess of supply, but from observations made in the houses of some of our largest growers, it is safe to predict that with two weeks' good weather we will have a larger crop to select from than we have had for years in the month of February. There is a shortage of good long-stemmed adiantums at present, as the wild variety is not yet plentiful enough to be depended on to fill requirements.

Various Notes.

G. L. Grant, of the REVIEW, was in town during the early part of the present week.

J. Loomis, representing the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, is in town on a short visit.

was married January 24. Miss G. Uno, also of Fruitvale, was the lucky lady.

The May Seed Co., of Market street, reports a good opening in the seed and plant line. This firm has only been started a few months in its present location.

Hutchins & James, of Elmhurst, are contemplating the erection of several new plant houses in the near future. As growers of poinsettias and fine ferns they have no superiors in this locality.

The collapsing of many large prospective orders in the big nurseries has thrown quite a lot of stock on the market that was supposed to be sold out completely. Late buyers have had a chance to make splendid bargains, as the growers seem to show quite an inclination to let stock go at much less than its catalogued value. Our season at the best will not last over eight weeks longer, and this accounts for the efforts being made by the growers to keep salable stock moving. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

E. M. McMicken, of Woodville, Tex., is endeavoring to organize a stock company to establish a nursery at Beaumont, Tex.

The Sneed Nursery and Orchard Co., of Tyler, Tex., has been incorporated, with $43,000 authorized capital stock, by C. W. Wood, J. F. Sneed and Frank Brunton.

At the J. G. Harrison & Sons nursery at Berlin, Md., there has been an outbreak of spinal meningitis among the herd of mules, five having died and fourteen being very sick at the date of this report.

A shipment of 1,086 plum trees recently received in Butte county, Cal., from a Connecticut nursery company, was consigned to the flames by the commissioner of horticulture, T. F. Stile, because he found that the roots were alive with borers.

Picea orientalis, or eastern spruce, resembles the Norway spruce, but the needles are of a darker and richer green than those of the latter. It is symmetrical and compact in habit, forming a shapely, pyramidal tree. It is a desirable variety for single specimen planting.

The bankrupt estate of Howard A. Chase, Philadelphia, late treasurer of the R. G. Chase Nursery Co., Geneva, N. Y., offers for sale 130 shares of stock in that company, the shares being now in the hands of Chester N. Farr, Jr., trustee, 415 Real Estate Trust building, Philadelphia.

Juniperus communis Hibernica is, as the last word of the name implies, the Irish juniper. It forms a slender specimen of columnar shape. The foliage is dark green. It is extensively used in formal planting and for contrast among other evergreens. It is also much in demand for cemetery work.

The report has been received from Hollister, Cal., that several hundred young peach trees, recently purchased from a Fresno nursery by William Kelly, were condemned by the newly appointed horticultural inspector, Leonard Day, as they were infected with peach blight. The officials of the state university confirmed Mr. Day's statement.

The American Nursery Co., whose incorporation was reported in the Review of January 30, has acquired all the real estate and other property of the following establishments: The F. & F. Nurseries, Springfield, N. J.; the Bloodgood Nurseries, Flushing, L. I.; Frederick W. Kelsey, New York city, and the New Jersey and Long Island nurseries. These different concerns will hereafter be conducted as branches of the company, under the same local management as heretofore, and their combined facilities, it is claimed, will be larger and more complete than those of any similar organization in the country. The officers of the company are: President, F. W. Kelsey; vice-presidents, William Flemer and Theodore Foulk; treasurer, William Flemer; secretary, P. H. Goodsell.

NEW YORK HORTICULTURISTS.

The nurserymen play an important part in the affairs of the New York Horticultural Society, one of the most active and influential of the many state organizations. At the meeting at Rochester, January 24, William C. Barry was reëlected to serve his eighteenth consecutive year. The other officers are: Vice-presidents, S. D. Willard, Geneva; J. S. Woodward, Lockport; S. W. Waddanes, Clarkson; Albert Wood, Charlton Station; secretary and treasurer, John Hall, Rochester; executive committee, C. M. Hooker, Rochester; D. K. Bell, Brighton; Dewane Bogue, Medina; I. H. Dewey, Rochester; H. S. Wiley, Cayuga.

The standing committees are:

Botany and Plant Diseases—Professor F. C. Stewart, Geneva; Dr. L. H. Bailey, Ithaca; Professor S. Fraser, C. H. Stuart, Newark; Willis T. Mann, Barker.

Chemistry—Dr. L. L. Van Slyke, Geneva; Dr. S. A. Lattimore, Rochester; Professor I. P. Roberts, Ithaca.

MAPLE AND PEACH CUTTINGS.

Can hard-wood cuttings of Norway maple and peach trees be rooted? When and how? H. B. M.

In answer to the above query, I would say that most of the maples will grow from cuttings of either soft or ripe wood. They can also be layered, budded or grafted. Hard-wood cuttings of Norway should be made at once; earlier would have been better. Cut to lengths of six inches and plant in frames. I have never thought this the best way to propagate the common sorts of maples and much prefer to grow them from seed, this being the cheapest, most practical and most successful way to propagate in quantities. It also gives you much nicer, better rooted plants and nearly all come true to type. If you wished to propagate some of the choice native varieties or the Japanese sorts, cuttings could be used, but I think the better way would be to winter work varieties of native species upon common native stocks, and the Japanese sorts on imported Acer polymorphum stocks. We have also been successful with summer budding.

Growing peach from hard-wood cuttings is not practical. It has been done, but not in a commercial way. As peach is the most difficult fruit to grow from cuttings or from grafts, and as it is perhaps the easiest to propagate by budding of all our northern fruits, it would be a loss of time and money to try to grow them commercially from cuttings.

D. W. BABCOCK.

GRAFTING EVERGREENS.

The increased demand for choice evergreens of good specimen size has given a stimulus to the practice of grafting.

There are many things necessary for consideration when the grafting of evergreens is in contemplation, and one of the most important is that the stocks be in good condition at the time grafting is to be done. Seedlings to be used for the purpose should be established in pots. They should be potted in spring and then plunged outdoors, where they should remain until late fall, when they will have to be removed to a cool greenhouse or to frames, where they can be conveniently reached when wanted for grafting on. Before starting to graft, it will be necessary to introduce the plants used as stocks into gentle heat and keep them there for a time sufficient to insure a free flow of sap, when the scions may be inserted. It will not do to lower the temperature after grafting, because a growing temperature is necessary, not only for the success of the union, but also that no check be given to the growth after it begins.

In selecting stocks for grafting any kind of tree, or, for that matter, anything else, it should be borne in mind that success is more likely if stock and scion are as closely related as the requirements will permit. M.

Tausendschon

or in English Thousand Beauties, is the sensational new Climbing Rose of the year. Every florist should have it. It is not excelled for forcing purposes and for general planting by any Climbing Rose now known, not even barring Crimson Rambler. This is the coming forcing Rose. Get your stock early. It is beautifully illustrated in ten colors and gold in Our New Guide to Rose Culture for 1908, the Leading Rose Catalogue of America. Copy free for the asking.

Strong plants of Tausendschon from 3-inch pots, 10 for $3.00; $15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Taking the general report from the retail stores, it would seem that business was a little quiet, being restricted mostly to funeral work. There was a good deal of funeral work, though, and most of the stores were kept busy with it. It is just as well that the demand was not so very heavy, for as it was there were scarcely enough flowers to fill all orders. The shortage of flowers caused a stiffening of the quotations all around, and at the present time prices are all that the grower could desire.

Various Notes.

February 1 was the coldest day of the year so far. The temperature was below zero in many localities, and the worst feature of it all, from a grower's point of view, was that the wind was blowing about forty miles an hour during the coldest period. Several of the florists report small losses from freezing, and the heaviest loser will probably be B. P. Critchell. His loss will be considerable, but cannot be estimated just yet.

George & Allan report business good, with many funeral orders.

J. T. Conger has been kept quite busy with funeral work and, besides using the output of his own houses, he has been a daily visitor in the wholesale district.

Peter Herb states that the variety which he was able to hold till so late in the season is Chadwick. Some of the stock was planted late, but the rest of it was planted at the usual time. It seemed to grow slowly and did not mature till late, and the blooms were in excellent condition when cut and used. In fact, a few dozen of them were in good condition the last of January.

L. F. Benson, of Newport, Ky., has about made up his mind to sell out his store and locate in one of the western states. Before doing so he intends to take a trip west and see what locality suits him best. His store here has always been a money-maker, but he believes that his health will be better in the western climate.

R. A. Betz has moved his wire works from the old location at 113 East Third street to a much larger and better place at 128 East Third street, where he will be much better situated for carrying on his wire design business.

B. P. Critchell is confined to his bed with a severe case of rheumatism.

Among the visitors last week was Thomas Joy, of Nashville, Tenn.

C. J. Ohmer.

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure glit-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.
Strong established pot-grown plants, $9.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

Carnation Day.

Sales this year did not compare favorably with last year's business for McKinley day. The reason was very evident, for on that occasion this year the thermometer registered the lowest temperature of the season and few people ventured out.

It would be of more benefit to the trade if people on this day would use more flowers in their homes by giving carnation parties or something of that sort. It was forcibly proven this year that the demand for boutonnieres depended entirely on the weather. What looks more incongruous, anyway, than heavy wraps and frozen flowers? Let the home parties, with their floral favors, continue and increase in popularity and the sales for Carnation day will be satisfactory and remunerative. J. L. J.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its ninth annual banquet January 30. It was one of the most successful on record, 219 being seated at the tables. President Wm. Till acted as toastmaster. Among the speakers were J. K. M. L. Farquhar and J. W. Duncan, Boston.

WASHINGTON C. H., O.—Poole & Purllant, formerly located at Bellefontaine, O., have purchased three acres of ground here, on Washington avenue, and have begun work in building a range of houses. An office, 12x44, and a greenhouse, 22x100, will be erected at once. As soon as these are completed, three additional greenhouses, each 22x100, will be constructed.

PADUCAH, KY.—C. L. Brunson & Co. presented to the police department of this city a large box of carnations, to be used in observance of McKinley day. As a consequence every member of the police and detective forces appeared January 29 with a fine carnation upon the lapel of his coat. There is an increasing interest here in the celebration of McKinley day, and more carnations were worn on that occasion this year than ever before.

"MAY"

REASONS

Why You Should Plant MAY

May is a strictly commercial variety. Business from beginning to end.

It comes into bloom early and continues uninterruptedly until the end of the season.

It is freer than any other light pink we know of.

The size of the bloom is just what you want in quantity, 2½ to 3½ inches.

The color is deeper and brighter and more even than Enchantress and holds better.

The form is well shown in illustration.

It is not so crowded in the center as Enchantress, therefore opens quicker.

The calyx never splits and stem is always strong.

The plant grows strong and upright and about as tall as Lady Bountiful.

Makes nice plants in the field and transplants easily.

We invite you to come and see our stock of it any time; you will like its habit.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown.....

DETROIT.

The Market.

There was a decided lull in business the latter part of last week, but aside from this business has been quite satisfactory for January. Stock piled up some during the lull, but not enough to bring down the prices.

Roses have been about equal to the demand. Carnations have been a little more than plentiful. A noticeable feature about the carnations was the overabundance of white. Many fine sweet peas are on the market and meet with good call.

Bulbous stock is more than enough. Nearly all the large store men grow enough of this stock for their own needs and the little that is sold at wholesale is not nearly enough to relieve the market. Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens, who is the largest wholesale grower in this locality, has decided to give up bulbous stock.

Various Notes.

Ferdinand Beyer, head gardener at the Wayne county house, is the inventor of a machine for scrubbing flower pots. Common sand is applied in such a way as to save much labor. Mr. Beyer claims much for his invention and intends to manufacture it as soon as some capital can be interested.

Breitmeyer's have the decorations for the assembly ball at the Country Club.

Schroeter's had an exceptionally heavy run on funeral work the latter part of last week, which kept the whole force working overtime.

Judging from the number of drummers who invaded this city the week beginning January 27, one would think there was a convention of florists' salesmen here. They all seemed to strike here the same day. Arnold Ringier was introducing a new microscope and gave a demonstration of its fine features to Charles Schwake which that gentleman will not soon forget.

Other visitors were: John Smith, of William J. Boas, Philadelphia, and an army of salesmen representing the Dutch bulb growers. H. S.

NEW ROSE

My Maryland

Best up-to-date commercial rose. Read what others have to say about it.

Among the many new roses of the year there is none which has impressed us more as being worthy of a thorough trial. It has been exhibited only as 294, being a seedling raised by John Cook, of Baltimore. A beautiful rose with an exquisite fragrance. In color it may be described as a soft salmon pink, which brightens up beautifully as the bud opens. We are intending to plant this rose in quantity.

A. N. PIERSON, Cromwell, Conn.

In answer to your inquiry what we think of your new rose, My Maryland, we would say that after seeing others we still believe that you have the best new rose of modern times.

ALBERT LIES, Niles Center, Ill.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

There has been a decided improvement in business this week, especially with the decorators. There was quite a number of dinners and receptions.

McKinley day helped some, but on the whole there were not so many carnations sold as last year. It was noticed, on this occasion, that a number of carnation growers did not wear the flower, though they are so much benefited by the national carnation day.

Various Notes.

Echoes from the convention sound good. Everybody seemed to have a good time. Among the last to arrive were the Bate brothers, from Cleveland. They stayed over for a day before going to Philadelphia and New York. Mr. Skidelsky was still with us on Saturday. He smiled as he patted his order book and winked.

The Gude Bros., who had such a hard time with the unknown insect pest in their fern house last fall, now have a large stock of Brianii ferns. They sold 150 pots during the convention and still have some.

F. H. Kramer booked quite a few orders for his Queen Beatrice rose.

President Roosevelt was much pleased with the fine jars of carnations presented to him by the Carnation Society. After the reception he again thanked the officers of the local club. On the following night, at a dinner for the judges of the supreme court, Mrs. Roosevelt gave orders that no other flowers except the carnations presented to the president were to be used on the tables and in the rooms. Mr. Oliver, the White House decorator, arranged them with splendid effect. Mrs. Ward was used on the table.

At the dinner recently given by Secretary Bonaparte to the president, 500 Killarney roses were used. The centerpiece was made to represent a huge cosmos flower, with a tall vase in the center. This was of Killarney roses, mignonette and white lilac. Z. D. Blackistone had a decoration.

J. A. Phillips, with his young son, is visiting his home in Toledo, O. Mrs. Phillips reports business very good.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade is still heavy; there is no let-up to the funeral work. Some extra large orders have been handled, which used up loads of stock. Roses are doing fine, especially Maids, which are just the right color, and when they come that way they are hard to beat. Carnations are coming much better and there are not quite so many splits as there were at last writing. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily now, but there has been no glut on anything so far this season and it does not seem likely there will be for some time to come.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, January 28. After a short business meeting the members all adjourned to the bowling alleys, where they had a good time for a couple of hours. The high scores were made by McKellar, Seibert, Currie, Blum and Munk.

Robert Schenck reports business good for a beginner.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is installing a cistern for catching water from the range of houses and also one for manure water, which will be pumped out with a steam pump, through the watering pipes.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business heavy for the last two weeks and stock doing finely.

Underwood Bros. report plenty of funeral work lately.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting some fine carnations and finds ready sale for them.

A. Rosnosky, of H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor on his way west. J. M.

New Kensington, Pa.—J. Walter Rhea has opened a flower store at 882 Fifth avenue. He was formerly with the McRae-Jenkinson Co.

Fargo, N. D.—Winthrop B. Shotwell has purchased the interest of John L. Graver, of the firm of Shotwell & Graver, and will continue the business in company with A. T. Shotwell, a former member of the firm. Hereafter the firm will be known as the Shotwell Floral Co.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—J. F. Nellist, who has a hothouse in which he has been growing lettuce and other vegetables for the market, recently made a start also in the floral branch of the business and is preparing to extend that department in the spring. Mr. Nellist lately completed a geological map of Michigan.

NOVELTIES

I offer to the trade my two Moonvines, grown from cuttings, as they always do better than those grown from seed for blooming. One variety is the blue Moonvine, called Learii, or Heavenly Blue; a very choice variety to plant with the white Moonvine. The other is a seedling I grew two years ago. It came into bloom quite small. I tested it for two years and found it to be a thrifty grower and an abundant bloomer, of the largest size and pure white. I named it Midnight Beauty. September 1, 1907, I planted one plant in one end of a house 24 feet wide and 14 feet high, and up to December 19, 1907, it covered the entire end of the greenhouse and almost hid an 8-foot Ficus that stood there. December 19, when I cut it up for cuttings, the entire vine was a mass of buds. Two weeks before I cut it up for cuttings it was a mass of bloom. Cuttings are now ready of both varieties.

I offer to the trade my new Coleus, Banner of Japan. With two years' test it proved all right. It retains its colors, which are remarkably neat and beautiful. Also fifteen other named varieties of Coleus, including all best sorts. For prices watch the Review, or write, stating how many you need.

I will introduce to the trade my new seedling Heliotrope, Blue Jay; a pretty new Heliotrope that is very dwarf, short, almost round-leaved, very dark green, free bloomer and fragrant; color dark blue with large white eye. I think it the finest thing ever offered in Heliotropes. Plants scarce this season. I have seven other named varieties; the best grown. For prices watch the Review, or write to me.

I shall have to offer by February 15 thirty-five named varieties of Verbenas, selected from two of the leading Verbena growers in America. These varieties I find to be the best selling varieties about Greater Pittsburg. For prices watch the Review or write, stating how many you need.

Ten thousand Geraniums from 2¼-inch pots—H. L. Hartman, S. A. Nutt and Marvel. This latter variety is nearly the same as S. A. Nutt, but it has larger individual flowers and a larger truss. The color is the same, except that the lower half of each floret is shaded with a purple and maroon cast; very attractive. For prices watch the Review, or write.

In my experience in the florists' business since 1876 I have not found any varieties in this class of plants to be so pleasing in all respects as the following:

H. L. HARTMAN, best Geranium.
AMERICAN FAVORITE, Best Petunia.
VIOLET-KING, Best Lantana.
MIDNIGHT BEAUTY, Best Moonvine.
BANNER OF JAPAN, Best Coleus.
BLUE JAY, Best Heliotrope.

HAMMOND'S GRAPE DUST

MILDEW ON ROSES, CARNATIONS, ETC.

Now, in regards to your "Grape Dust," I must say that when I first heard of it I had but little faith in it, because I had tried all the remedies for Mildew I had ever heard of, but they were of little value. It seems that my location favors Mildew especially. When other Florists are but little troubled, my houses are generally well covered with the Mildew, so when I sent for the first keg of "Grape Dust" my Roses were almost worthless, but since using the "Grape Dust" my Roses are the "Picture of Health." There is not a vestige of Mildew to be seen on my place, and my Roses fetch double the price; besides, I have saved a month of firing, which I used to be compelled to do to kill Mildew. Yours respectfully,

To Hammond's Slug Shot Works. F. J. A. Schaefer, Florist, Newburgh, N. Y.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting in Good Templars' hall, Friday evening, January 31, with President Angus in the chair and a large attendance of members. William W. Weaver was elected an active member and one new nomination was received.

Several communications were read from friends regretting their inability to be present at our last annual dinner. An invitation was also read from the New Jersey Floricultural Society, requesting members to attend its annual smoker, February 7, 1908.

As it was carnation night, and as Treasurer J. T. Lawrie had kindly offered two prizes for the best eighteen blooms, three varieties, six of each, a fine display of flowers was in evidence. The first prize was awarded to Samuel Untermyer, W. H. Waite gardener, Yonkers, N. Y., with the varieties Winsor, Enchantress and White Enchantress. The second prize went to George Legg, J. Elliott gardener, Tarrytown, N. Y., with White Enchantress, Miss H. M. Gould and Mrs. M. A. Patten. F. R. Pierson Co. had, for display only, a very fine lot, which were awarded honorable mention; the varieties were White Perfection, Red Chief, Victory, Melody, Beacon, Winsor, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress and Lawson. Honorable mention was awarded to Scott Bros., Elmsford Nurseries, for vases of Beacon and Miss H. M. Gould; also a cultural certificate to Mr. Waite for a very fine vase of Mignonette May's Giant.

Quite a lengthy discussion on carnations followed, with special reference to cuttings, methods of striking, temperature, growing ready for the field or indoor culture, benching, etc. All listened with pleasure to the interesting remarks made by Wm. Scott, F. R. Pierson, D. MacFarlane and J. Woodcock.

The most entertaining feature of the evening was the brief account of visits made by F. R. Pierson to several growers in different parts of the country; also his attendance at the convention of the American Carnation Society at Washington, with its great exhibition, great banquet, reception, etc.

We adjourned at a late hour and all conceded that we had spent a very agreeable evening. L. H. M.

I like the Review best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—Ludwig Zimmer, St. Louis, Mo.

State of Trade.

Almost without exception local florists report a satisfactory month for January. Business was better than fair and collections were exceptionally good, all conditions considered. What quietness there was is attributable entirely to the extremely cold weather rather than to any condition of the financial world.

The one disappointment that was experienced by every dealer was the lack of demand for carnations on McKinley's day. While there was a slight increase, it was nothing compared with a year ago, and dealers are beginning to ask the question, "Will McKinley day ever be generally recognized?" However, some of the more optimistic attribute the lack of business in carnations on this day to the fact that it was a raw, cold day.

The first really cold weather of the winter season was experienced late in January and from the way that February started out it is likely that this will be a quiet month. The first two days of the month saw the temperature down to zero for the first time of the season. Not only that, but the ground hog saw his shadow, so it seems certain that cold weather will rule trade during this month.

However, there is not much worry because of this condition, which is to be expected, and florists generally are spending their time in preparation for the spring trade.

Various Notes.

F. J. Farney, representing A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, spent two days in the city last week. A number of local florists looked over his line at the Jefferson hotel.

Harry Heinl cut a splendid lot of white lilacs February 3. His lilacs turned out better than ever this season.

A. Ringier, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, called on a number of local dealers last week.

J. Sackett, of Fostoria, O., and Mrs. B. Orland, of Clyde, were trade visitors in the city February 1.

Mr. Feniger, of Feniger & Spanner, conducting the Youngstown Floral Co., is spending a few days at his home in Cleveland. He will return the latter part of the week.

George Heinl is still visiting his brother at South Bend, Ind.

F. M. Peck, who opened a store on Summit street a few weeks ago, reports a good business in his new place.

I. N. Keeler, of the Bay Shore, brought in a fine lot of green peas February 3.

The Youngstown Floral Co. is having a good demand for violets, which are selling at 25 cents per bunch.

H. L. S.

SWEET PEAS.

In growing sweet peas for market, long stems are of great importance. Good bunching and good packing are other important items. In cutting sweet peas care should be taken that none that are far advanced are taken. One or two flowers that are too far advanced, if included in a bunch, may spoil the sale of a whole box. I have seen various samples received to sell on commission where many of the blooms have been far past their best. It pays to take a little trouble when cutting or bunching. In the case of those with three flowers on a stem, the top one should be only half expanded when cut, and they will keep better for the next day's trade if cut early in the morning, the stems dipped into water, and packed and shut up in a close box. When cut in the afternoon, after a hot, sunny morning, they wither quickly, and it is difficult to revive them. Always see that the empty boxes are kept in a cool place and are moist when used for packing; hot, dry boxes will cause the flowers to wither quickly, says the Horticultural Advertiser.

We enclose money order for $1 for another year of the Review. We cannot do without it; it is the standard of excellence.—Frank Bros., Beardstown, Ill.

I could not do without the Review if I would and I would not if I could. The help derived from your paper is worth many times the price paid.—A. R. Watkins, Gaithersburg, Ind.

Greenhouse Heating.

THIS is the season of the year at which greenhouse owners who are using steam for heating, if they depend on gravity to return condensation, make up their minds to put in a steam trap before another season. The Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, says more steam traps were sold to florists in 1907 than in any previous year, while the prospect for 1908 is for another considerable increase.

POSITION OF EXPANSION TANK.

I thank you for your reply to my question, printed in the REVIEW of January 16, regarding piping, and would like to ask whether the proposed branches should be 2-inch, the same as the flow pipe, or smaller. What is the object of raising the expansion tank so high? If it were raised above the roof of the boiler-shed, it would have to be protected and a heating pipe carried up to it, to prevent freezing. It would also be inconvenient to fill, and the water gauge would be out of sight. E. C. B.

The branches in each case should be the same size as the main flow, which in this case is 2-inch. If you cut a hole eighteen inches square through the roof of the boiler-room and carry the expansion tank on a trestle so as to place it twelve or fifteen feet above the high point in the system, you will thus make the boiler more efficient by increasing the temperature to which the water can be heated. The expansion tank will not freeze if housed in by double boarding and tar paper. The depth of water in the barrel or tank used for the expansion tank can be indicated by placing a float in the tank and attaching a weighted cord to it so as to act as an indicator. A pipe can be carried over the top of the barrel to serve as a means of filling it. L. C. C.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The market last week was only fair, the brand of weather we have been getting being partly responsible. It was bad most of the week, and Saturday, when most of the dealers hoped to clean up, was the worst of all, with snow and rain all the morning and wind, snow and zero for the afternoon and evening. So there was considerable left over.

Stock of all kinds is very plentiful and cheap, especially Paper Whites, tulips and freesias. Lilies are now quite plentiful.

Various Notes.

The delegation to the carnation convention returned Friday morning, January 31. They reported having had a fine time and a good convention. Every one was satisfied, especially the committee which worked for the convention for 1909. A tie vote was cast for the two cities, Pittsburg and Indianapolis, each receiving 83 votes. At an opportune time the Pittsburg delegation withdrew and moved that a unanimous vote be cast in favor of Indianapolis. Many promises of delegates from Indianapolis, Chicago and other western cities were given to our delegation to support us at the convention for 1910 and select Pittsburg as the meeting place.

The following men stopped over to visit Fred Burki at the office of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.: Nick Zweifel, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. S. Wilson, Western Springs, Ill.; A. Poehlmann, Chicago, Ill.; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind. While they struck the worst weather of the year, they made the most of it and saw all that was to be seen.

Others who stopped here on their way home were: C. P. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va.; W. R. Maebius, Lock No. 4, Pa.; I. S. Crall, Monongahela, Pa.

Joseph Jones was smiling all day and told me in confidence toward evening that it was another girl.

Henry Baldinger, one of the oldest gardeners in this vicinity, has the sympathy of his host of friends in the loss of his wife. Mrs. Baldinger was in the best of health when her daughters left home Saturday morning, and before they could open their stands in the markets messengers were there to inform them of the death of their mother. Hoo-Hoo.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States district court January 27 against Lincoln Neff. The claims of the three petitioning creditors amount to $4,100.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

As Applied to the Retail Florist.

A close student of modern business methods cannot fail to be impressed with the wonderfully important position occupied by publicity in present day merchandising.

Publicity, in its modern and more familiar sense, is but another word for advertising.

It is a synonym for business-getting print.

Of all modern forces in sales-making, advertising is the most important and the most potent.

Advertising is as old as the hills.

Its great modern force is the result of careful study of the factors which make for its development and best success.

Advertising has become a business in itself, a specialty—a profession.

The growth of the advertising business in all its ramifications has been stupendous.

No farther back than 1884 Harper's Magazine carried only about twelve pages of general advertising in a single issue, and the makers of Pears' soap, like other big advertisers, thought it necessary to change copy only two or three times a year.

But a mighty development began about 1891, and the old commonplace efforts gave way to high art and sensible business English.

Manufacturers of staples soon found that, instead of selling the entire product of a factory to jobbers at a close margin of profit, they could acquire fortunes by advertising under a trade-mark name and then compelling the dealer to come to them and pay prices that not only settled for the advertising, but left an enormous profit besides.

Extent of Modern Advertising.

Over a billion dollars is annually spent in advertising in this country, with a steady increase each year.

Manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, everywhere, in all lines of business, are recognizing the real worth and importance of advertising as a trade winner, applying its force and receiving large returns. Its effect is manifold and manifest.

For instance, in the western metropolis, Chicago, there are two great mail order houses, leaders in this branch of business. One of them in the year 1904 did a business of more than $50,000,000, the other a volume of more than $40,000,000, and not a single salesman on the road for either house.

There was absolutely nothing contributing to this gigantic total of $90,000,000 but advertising in mail order journals, in magazines and newspapers.

So vast and intricate have the details of American advertising become that great houses known as advertising agencies have within a quarter of a century come into being, and they now take rank among the most important modern economic movements.

One of these firms, during the few years of its history, has placed over $150,000,000 for clients, who were counseled and advised by this agency in the purchase of space and the display of copy.

When we get a glimpse of these tremendous organizations, these combined forces, all engaged in applying the idea of publicity in the commercial world, it becomes clear that it is a subject deserving the serious and careful study of every business man who seeks the largest measure of success.

Old-fashioned Methods.

During the last few years the retail florists' trade has undergone a complete revolution, including almost every phase of the business.

Competition is decidedly keen.

And yet, in the face of these facts, most florists continue to advertise in the same manner as they did five years ago—running a small card in the newspapers the year round without a change.

Such advertising, if it can be so called, certainly can never meet the demands of modern merchandising, which are exacting to a degree.

It is a noteworthy fact that the retail florists' trade has been unusually slow in recognizing the great value of judicious advertising as a business builder. This backwardness is undoubtedly due to the fact that florists themselves feel unequal to the task of preparing effective copy.

Advertising of some sort is as indispensable to the success of any retail florist's business as a typewriter or a telephone. You may get along without them, to be sure, but how much better can you do with them!

Today the question does not stand, "Shall we advertise?" but "How shall we advertise?"

Advertising is not necessarily a science, governed by certain fixed laws, which if religiously followed will yield pre-calculated results.

Neither is it a game of chance.

It is essentially an art and, like all good art, is founded upon scientific principles, which are mostly psychological, having reference to the mental operations of the average mind under varying circumstances.

Therefore, while certain results from advertising may always be obtained, the greatest possible results can only be derived from the exercise of good judgment, backed up by experience in the preparation of copy, and by a thorough knowledge of human nature in all its varied phases, a knowledge which must be more or less instinctive—intuitive.

Advertising is an appeal for business.

It is salesmanship where the printed page is used instead of oral solicitation; its purpose is to persuade—to create business.

Compel Attention.

In salesmanship the whole secret is to persuade the prospective customer that an article is desirable and worthy of acquisition. The same is true with advertising. The approach should be carefully planned and the uninterested should be compelled to take notice.

Inertia and indifference are common traits; hence the endeavor should be to overcome these tendencies in the first instance.

The majority of people "read as they run," and unless they are given a complete thought in the first line, the advertisement will probably not be read.

The initial attack must be a success.

Once having gained the attention, any amount of terse, strongly written matter may be interposed.

Successful advertising is applied psychology, and is an appeal to the senses, the emotions and the intellect.

In advertising a food delicacy, the appeal is made to the sense of taste until the mouth fairly waters from the luscious flavor; when a perfume is advertised the sense of smell is appealed to, until the reader actually smells the subtle fragrance.

In floral advertising the reader's attention should first be secured, as in general advertising.

This is most effectively accomplished by using attractive illustrations and striking catch lines.

Shun the Commonplace.

Aim to get away from the commonplace.

Instead of using the old, stereotyped card, running in the newspapers with others of competing firms, use this space to tell the people something about your up-to-date business methods, the superior quality of your goods, etc., and display it attractively.

Tell your story in a plain, straightforward manner, using as few words as possible.

Numerous subjects can be treated and presented in many ingenious ways.

Talk about the appropriateness of flowers for different occasions—for weddings, birthdays, social events, funerals, table and home decoration.

Tell about your seeds, bulbs, plants, etc.—how they are all carefully selected, and that you are prepared to fill all orders satisfactorily and with promptness. Prices commensurate with the quality of the goods offered, etc.

Floral advertising should be seasonable.

The reader must be persuaded that the firm is one of excellent and established reputation, handling merchandise of one class only, and that the best; that the business has been built up by honest, fair dealing and a determination to be up-to-date.

Even an advertisement of small dimensions, if prepared along the lines cited above and changed weekly, will work wonders for any retailer.

There is a certain kind of copy, containing a certain class of illustrations and made up of a certain line of selling talk, which fits in with the sale of your product, and this is the kind for which you must search and which you must find before you succeed.

The time, effort and money expended to this end will be returned with a very handsome profit.

The specimen advertisement here shown, as used by Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky., affords a good example of what constitutes up-to-date advertising.

It is worthy of careful study.

TWO FINE PHLOXES.

A few years ago the F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y., sent out two new phloxes, one of which was F. G. Von Laasburg, a fine white, and the other was Crepuscule. It is a large white with a large purplish center, somewhat on the style of Richard Wallace, only with a much larger flower. The plants are dwarf and the flower heads are large and pyramidal. Altogether it is one of the finest phloxes.

Now, how does it happen that while F. G. Von Laasburg is quite generally catalogued, the other variety does not appear in any catalogue I have seen except F. R. Pierson's? At any rate, I have never seen it in any other list. I know this, that a solid bed of the two phloxes makes a sight worth going far to see. Please stir this up a little and make it public, so that a good thing like this may not remain any longer in obscurity.

FLORICULTURAL EDUCATION.

A Beginner's Experience.

Reading T. A. Kempton's letter and the replies to it has tempted me to relate my experience. I am a young woman of 25, a high school graduate with one year in college. Mother and I are left alone on the old farm and she is no longer young. The land is rented, but we have the house and the two or three acres of rich land which surround it, situated in the midst of a small town, only a short distance from excellent shipping facilities. For the last three summers I have grown flowers for the wholesale market, with fair success. But the long winters bring in nothing.

I have $300 saved up and last winter I decided to use it toward building a small hothouse, suitable for raising violets. This saving meant much to me and I wished to feel reasonably sure of success before taking any risk. I had never seen a violet house or a violet growing, excepting wild ones. After sending for books on violet culture and reading them, I was more conscious than ever of the great deal that I did not know and the woeful briefness of the writers on the subject.

What I needed was a little experience. So I sought diligently for some successful grower who could use my services—and I'm not lazy—for a month or two during the winter, asking only for my board and perhaps my traveling expenses one way, and that I be allowed to learn as much as possible of the method of growing, manner of packing, etc., more by observation than by actual teaching. No one seemed to desire such an exchange, and yet I do not think it unfair. I certainly did not ask for charity.

No, I did not build the hothouse. It is yet ahead in the mysterious "someday" of my dreams, but if it ever does materialize and I can grow real live violets, I think I shall be the happiest girl on earth, if not the wealthiest.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

Dedicated to C. H. Totty.

Flower of the garden island of earth,
Will you whisper your secret to me?
Tell me the goddess that gave you birth,
Where you gathered the graces I see,
Where garnered your treasure of lustrous gold,
How distilled your deep crimson dye,
For the wealth of the world your buds enfold
And the sunset glow of the sky.

REFRAIN:
Warm are my lips, Chrysanthemum,
Bright shine my eyes whene'er you come.
Firm on my heart thy throne, my queen;
Pride of my life, thou art supreme.

The Artist that paints the evening skies
Used his colors your blossoms to grace;
Their shining splendor enchants my eyes
While I worship the beauty I trace.
The wild north wind has breathed on thee,
For thy petals are flakes of snow.
Oh, pure are the flowers that shine on me;
Can men wonder I love them so?

REFRAIN:
Warm are my lips, Chrysanthemum,
Bright shine my eyes whene'er you come.
Firm on my heart thy throne, my queen;
Pride of my life, thou art supreme.

Thy radiant hues embrace all the light
Of the rainbow archway above;
The angels must gather enthralled by the sight
Of the Queen of the Eden of Love.
With passionate fondness I gather thee up,
Fill my arms with the best thou dost give;
I am satisfied now, thou fillest my cup
To the brim, and for thee will I live.

REFRAIN:
And on my eyes and lips shall come
Thy witching light, Chrysanthemum.
Filled is my heart with thee, my queen.
Till life shall end, thou art supreme.

—Magee Pratt.

PROPAGATION FOR EXHIBITION.

It is none too soon to begin propagating for the coming season. While there is ample time yet for many kinds that are good, free growers, unless one wants to increase the stock considerably, still there are some dwarf, slow growing kinds that must have early propagation, if the finest flowers are needed. Among them we would include the following: Beatrice May, Pres. Loubet, Mary Ann Pockett, Merza, Lady Hopetoun, Nellie Pockett, Cheltoni and May Seddon. All exhibitors know that these varieties do not show their true character unless they have a long season of growth. The difference in the flower of a Nellie Pockett, for instance, that has been well grown and flowered from an August bud, and the shallow, flat flowers as seen in the wholesale market, is so great that I have heard men deny that they were both flowers of the same variety.

I have had good flowers of Beatrice May from plants rooted in May or early June, but the stem would be so short—twelve inches—that the flowers could not be staged advantageously.

Loubet last year was, generally speaking, very poor, and I am convinced that it was due to late propagation and the plants not having time to ripen their wood properly. If Loubet can be grown big one year it can be grown big another year, if conditions are reasonably similar.

I have noticed, also, that varieties that are delicate in constitution, such as the old Guy Hamilton or Mrs. D. V. West, if they are rooted early and kept pinched close, make a much stronger growth when they are finally permitted to come away, the reason being that the plant has been busy forming roots and gathering strength.

In trimming the cuttings, do not be afraid to cut off the most of the leaves and trim the remainder closely, because they are not needed on the cutting and only retard its rooting by wilting and lying over the sand, and one cannot put nearly so many cuttings in a given space if they are not well trimmed, to allow the air to circulate between the rows.

Years ago we used to hear a great fuss being made about rooting chrysanthemums without bottom heat, but I venture to say that growers in all the northern latitudes now use some bottom heat; not an excess, of course, but enough to keep the cuttings dry at night and the sand at an average of 60 degrees. So treated, there is practically no loss, and by using the warm end of the bench for slow rooting kinds, like Montigny, the whole batch can be taken out together.

Just as soon as the cutting begins to push out roots, or when the roots are an inch long, is the time to pot it up. Stock is often greatly injured by being left too long in the sand and making long roots and a spindly top. Such stock is practically ruined at the starting of its career and never makes the dwarf, short-jointed plant that is the joy of the expert's heart. C. H. TOTTY.

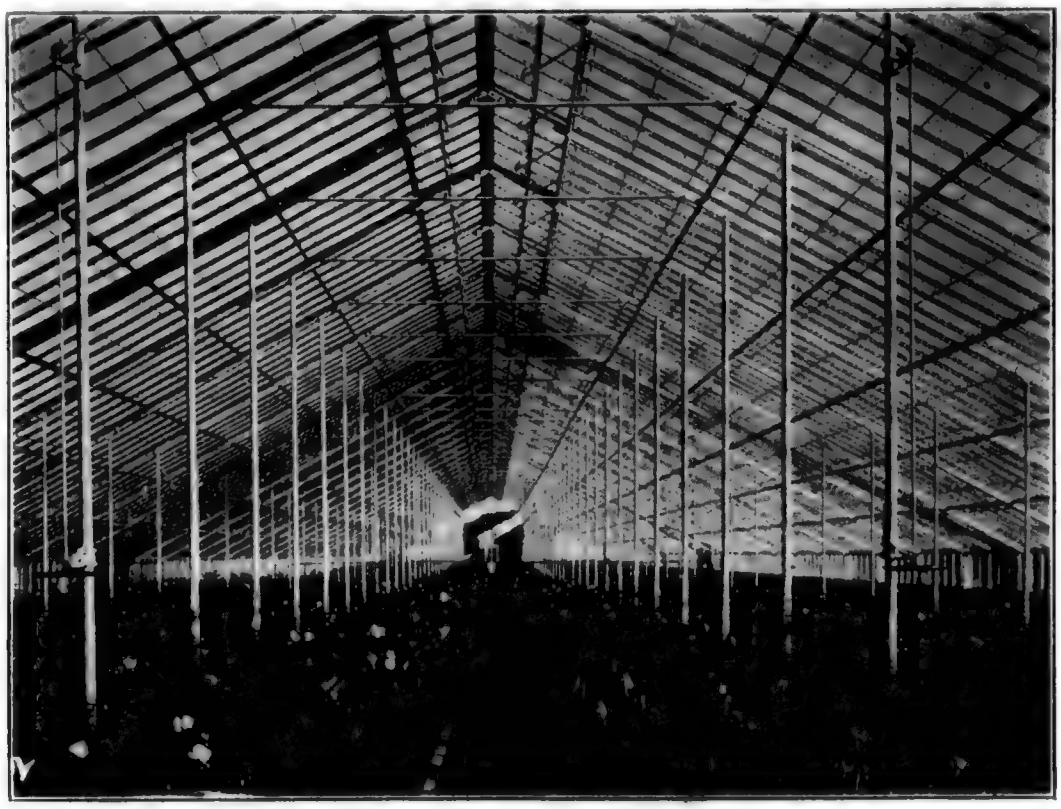
IN CANADA.

In an article on horticultural conditions in Canada, mostly devoted to an account of the fruit interests, W. T. Macoun, of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, concludes as follows:

"The development of floriculture in Canada has been rapid. Notwithstanding the severer winters than those to the south of us, the plant and cut flower trade has developed wonderfully, the increase in the value of trade being 400 per cent during the last ten years. It has been estimated that the amount of capital invested in greenhouse equipment, stock, etc., is $5,000,000, with an annual value of trade transacted of $2,000,000. This is but a beginning, as Canadians love flowers.

"At the beginning of the twentieth century Canada has about 6,000,000 population, or, approximately, as great as the United States had at the beginning of the nineteenth century. It has been said that the nineteenth century was for the United States what the twentieth century is for Canada. We believe that this is true in regard to horticulture, as in other matters."

GRAFTING AND BENCHING.



We should like to know what results have been attained by some of the leading rose growers who have grown both grafted and own-root stock for forcing, and also whether solid stages or benches would bring the best results. We should also like to know whether benches raised only six inches above the floor of the greenhouse, just so there would be a circulation of air under the benches, would have any advantage over solid beds. Will two-year-old stock produce good results on benches that are only six inches in depth, without changing soil or plants? G. & S.

The principal object to be attained in using grafted stock is to secure better root action in those varieties which are naturally weak on their own roots or which, through a long period of forcing, have become deteriorated in vitality.

In the Manetti, a rose of Italian origin, are combined the qualities of vigor and robustness, with fine fibrous roots, which continue in activity during the entire season, a most essential requisite for the everblooming varieties. Another very material qualification possessed by this stock is its immunity from the ravages of eel worms. From inquiries made during the past few years I have not heard of one authentic case of eel worms infesting plants grafted on this stock. Where this pest is prevalent it would certainly appear from latest evidence to be the safest course to graft all suitable varieties, such as Bride, Bridesmaid, Richmond and Beauty, on this stock.

By securing increased root action during the period from propagating time until October, we are able to produce a much larger and stronger plant, which will certainly give a bigger cut of blooms. If this root action can be sustained during the winter months, the plants will be able to assimilate a larger quantity of food and, logically, they should still be able to give a larger cut.

Where the soil is of a poor quality, requiring an extra amount of feeding matter added, grafting is a distinct advantage, but where the soil is heavy and of a richer character the advantages are not quite so apparent.

I have for years grown grafted stock of Bride and Bridesmaid alongside these varieties on their own roots, in both light and heavy soils, and kept a record of the results of each from October 1 till May 30. These records show that grafted stock grown on poor soil was more productive and the blooms of better quality than were those on their own roots in the same class of soil, though in both respects they fell behind those same varieties on their own roots where planted in the richer soil.

The grafted stock planted in strong, fibrous loam certainly made astonishing growth, being nearly twice the size of those on their own roots. The first cut was of about the same quantity per plant, but the quality of the bud was inferior. During the winter months the quality improved, particularly in length and wiriness of stem, but frequently—much more frequently than with those on their own roots—the buds were off color. Different conditions of soil, water and climate have a modifying effect which can only be determined by experiment.

The question of the most suitable kind of bench has been freely discussed in these columns, some preferring raised benches and others the solid bench. For first-year stock we have always had best results from raised benches, but where we have transplanted these into solid benches for a second year's work the results have been satisfactory. Benches raised just high enough to let the air pass under them freely are suitable for any class of rose, and particularly suitable for Beauty growing. In raised benches, where stock had to be carried over a second year, we always found the ordinary 5-inch bench deep enough.

This querist would be benefited by studying some work on grafted stock in which the advantages and disadvantages are set forth. A. Montgomery, Jr., published just such a work, which covers the whole field in a clear and concise manner. This work is for sale at the office of the Review. Ribes.

NICKERSON PRIZES FOR ROSES.

It will be remembered by those who take an active interest in roses that last year W. E. Nickerson, an enthusiastic rosarian at Boston, Mass., presented three silver cups to the National Rose Society of Great Britain, to be awarded to the raisers of the best hybrid perpetual, the best hybrid tea, and the best tea-scented variety introduced within a prescribed period. The award of these cups was entrusted to a specially appointed committee, and in the result the raisers of Frau Karl Druschki, Mme. Jules Gravereaux, and Dean Hole, were adjudged the winners. As these roses are of German, French and Irish origin, no one could well suggest that in the making of their awards the members of the committee were influenced by insular prejudice. Their selection has been questioned by some, but this has been largely due to the fact that the time limit has been overlooked. Mr. Nickerson was so well satisfied with the results that this year he has placed twelve cups at the disposal of the English society for honoring the best dwarf and climbing roses, without any stipulation as to the year of introduction. He suggests that four cups should be awarded for bush roses, four for climbers blooming in trusses, and four for climbers with flowers not in trusses, the cups in each group to be awarded to the best red, the best pink, the best white, and the best yellow variety.

A JERSEY ROSE HOUSE.

The accompanying illustrations show the rose house erected last spring by Stockton & Howe, at Princeton, N. J. The house is 54x317, of iron-frame construction and modern in every detail. Stockton & Howe are well pleased with it and it has been visited this season by many growers studying various styles of construction.

The roof is supported by four lines of pipes, with six lines of angle-iron purlins on each side. There is only one set of cross ties, that being attached to the iron rafters just above the point where the roof is supported by the two inner rows of pipes. There is continuous ventilation on each side of the ridge, the sashes being operated by the self-locking worm and gear type of machine. The worm rod extends down the columns at the sides, universal connections being used for the offsets in the worm rod. The ventilation is arranged in fifty-foot lengths, which has proved satisfactory, much more so, it is said, than where operated in long lengths, as by this means it is possible to have better control over the heat of the house.

There has been practically no breakage of glass this winter and the house has proven to be easily maintained at the desired temperature, the large body of air contained being a great assistance in maintaining an even temperature. There are eight raised benches in the house, which was built by John A. Payne, of Jersey City, who also supplied the plant for heating with hot water, which works satisfactorily in spite of the great length of the runs.

scholars from the farm homes in the township, including about twenty-five square miles, are gathered up every day by the school wagons and brought to the institution. Frank Banning, who is well known to the trade, is one of the prime movers and writes as follows with regard to the school:

"I am engaged in building up a library for our new Centralized Farm School, principally along agricultural and horticultural lines, such things as will encourage the farmers to improve their homes and make their surroundings more attractive for their families; also in teaching the management of farm work with more system and order. The school is doing a great work in interesting our boys and girls in the wonderful beauty, pleasures and possibilities of country life; it is doing much to keep them on the farm. In acting as librarian, I am doing this work at my own expense, with what help I can get here at home and from those of my friends in the trade. The school is doing much good work in the direction of giving special horticultural education, as well as general knowledge, to the rising generation in this vicinity, and if we had more such institutions working along the same lines, it would be greatly to the interests of horticulture."

THE READERS' CORNER.

Ten Years of Expansion.

I saw by the cover of last week's REVIEW that my subscription expires with this week's issue. I could not possibly give up the REVIEW, so enclose $1 for the year's subscription.

The other day, in looking over some of the early issues of the REVIEW, I came across the first special number, which was the Annual Carnation Number of February 24, 1898, containing thirty-six pages—a good and large issue at that time. The paper certainly has been expanding since then, with its double that number of pages in nearly every issue and its recent specials of 116 and 120 pages. Such a growth surely must be very encouraging to the promoters.

I wish you a Happy and Prosperous New Year, with a 100-page issue every week. JOHN BEIMFORD.

A Standard Bunch of Green.

I would like to inquire, through the REVIEW, what constitutes a commercial bunch of Asparagus plumosus or A. Sprengeri. At present, as the writer understands it, each grower makes his own bunch and, of course, no two bunches of the same size. When we speak of a 4-inch flower-pot we have a standard size all over the United States and know just what it means. Why not make the asparagus the same way? Make a bunch weigh so much and have that weight a standard, the same as the flower-pots. Would not this make it better for both the grower and the retail florist? Could not the S. A. F. act on this, to the advantage of all concerned? H.

Warwick, R. I.

English Carnation Growers.

I enclose you international post-office order for 10 shillings ($2.50), my subscription to the REVIEW for 1908. I should not like to be without it for three times $2.50. I congratulate you upon a fine paper.

I met J. R. Fotheringham, of the F. R. Pierson Co., at the Winter Flowering Carnation Society's show, London, in December, and he told me he was much pleased with our show and that the quality of bloom was about equal to that of the best American flowers. This was very encouraging to our growers, as, unless one had been fortunate enough to see your blooms in America, we had really nothing to go upon to form opinions as to whether we were progressing or not.

There is no doubt that we get some fine blooms here now, and I must say that the best come from Guernsey, owing to the brighter and sunnier weather there, and the special attention given by the growers to the culture of the plants.

There are many new varieties in the hands of the growers on this side, and I would advise your specialists to go in for Marmion and Mikado. The former is the forerunner of a new race of carnations, being a hybrid between a Malmaison and tree (Prosperity, I believe). It is a pink with a white edge and measures 4 to 5 inches across the blooms, upon exceptionally stout and strong stalks. Mikado is a self-colored plum or purple, and a great favorite here with the ladies. It is a money maker.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas which are wanted for Easter should now have little flower heads peeping in the end of the shoots. If they are thus far advanced, they will be in flower in time. Give them a night temperature of 55 degrees until the heads are well developed. It is easy to remove them to a slightly cooler house if they later require retarding. Do not allow aphis to get any foothold on the plants, or the pest will do great damage. If you attend to the weekly fumigation, insects will not trouble you. Hydrangeas are thirsty subjects and require a lot of water. A severe root dryness will cause loss of foliage, which should be guarded against. You can feed liberally as soon as the flower heads appear, alternating liquid stimulants with a surfacing of some well concentrated chemical fertilizer. It is a little early yet to start your plants for Memorial day, but it would be well to overhaul them. Top-dress where this will suffice. Repot where necessary, and place in a cool house until you can spare room in a warmer division for them. If you have forgotten to put in any cuttings, there is still time to do so. Select them from plants which are not flowering freely and which would not, therefore, be very salable.

Bouvardias.

The flowering season for bouvardias is ended and, if stock for another season is wanted, root cuttings should be placed in a warm propagating bench at once. Use the thicker portions of roots and cut these a fourth to half an inch long. Keep well watered and in two or three weeks some of the little shoots will appear. Wait until they are making young roots before you lift and pot them. Bouvardia Humboldtii corymbiflora prop-agates better from soft-wood cuttings than the other varieties, but is also easily increased from portions of roots.

Gardenias.

Gardenias benched in early summer will be yielding a nice crop of flowers now, if soil and other conditions are right. If there is some bottom heat, all the better. The plants seem to appreciate some warmth at the roots in winter, and where it can be afforded there is less likelihood of the soil becoming stagnant, with consequent yellowing of the foliage. The soil must not be kept too moist, or many flower buds will drop. Let the compost dry out tolerably well and then soak thoroughly. It will be better to guard against liquid foods at this season, but some soot or nitrate of soda, the latter in weak doses, may be given to darken the foliage. Use a sprayer on the plants once in four or five days, to keep the foliage clean and mealy bug in check.

Plants in pots do well in some plunging material, and if they can get a little bottom heat, all the better. Cuttings will root freely now in a warm propagating bed. Keep them well watered until rooted.

Jerusalem Cherries.

Jerusalem cherries, or Solanum Capsicastrum, to use the botanical name, are useful and inexpensively grown berried subjects for early winter and Christmas trade. If you want a lot of fine, bushy plants, sow the seed now in pans or flats. Mice are fond of it; therefore, if you have any around, keep a cat in the house or they will surely make short work of your seeds. The proper treatment for these solanums is to pot off when large enough to handle. Gradually harden off and plant outdoors about the second week in May, in nursery rows, allowing eighteen inches between the plants and two to three feet between the rows.

Petunias.

If you carried over any old plants of double petunias, you can probably get some nice cuttings from these now, which will root freely in a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and can be grown along into nice little plants for early summer sales. Petunias, both double and single, make excellent pot plants and it is rather surprising to find them so little grown for this purpose. They are perhaps the most persistent flowering of all garden annuals, and in addition to their value for bedding purposes and pot plants, are invaluable for window and piazza boxes and vases. It is a trifle early to make a sowing of these for use about Memorial day, as once started they grow very fast. The end of February is a seasonable date to get in a good batch of seed. There are now some fine strains of petunias. The ruffled Californians have mammoth flowers and a wide range of colors. Double seed is offered, but can only be expected to produce occasional plants carrying double flowers. Propagation by cuttings is necessary to perpetuate these.

Coleus and Alternanthera.

While heavy firing is the rule and there is an ample supply of bottom heat is the time to work up a good stock of coleus and alternanthera. Get rid of the old mealy bug decorated plants. You can get all the future cuttings you are likely to need from your young plants, which will soon furnish plenty of tops. While there is a diminished use for these colored-leaf subjects, they are of such easy culture as bedding plants that it is always well to carry a stock of them. The alternanthera is a necessity if you have any carpet bedding to do.

Fred Burki.

(The New President of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club.)

Geraniums.

Do not allow your little bedding geraniums to become too much potbound. Give them a shift into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots and spread them out a little. Continue to put in cuttings from any old plants you carried over. It will not be long before you can get a nice lot of tops from your little plants. Insert these singly in 2-inch pots, containing sandy loam. In a sand bed many will rot off. In pots you should not lose over five per cent if you care for their wants religiously.

Bougainvillea Sanderiana.

There has been a fair demand for Bougainvillea Sanderiana in the large markets for a few years. While the color is not exactly an Easter one, it has been found that it sells well at that holiday. Plants which were well ripened by exposure to sunshine last fall, and which have been kept cool and rather dry during the winter, may now be started in a warm, moist house. Avoid much root disturbance; a top dressing ought to suffice. Syringe freely, but do not overwater until the plants break freely. A night temperature of 60 degrees will suffice. Bougainvilleas, if kept dry while in bloom, have surprising lasting properties. They are best propagated in April or May, from half ripened wood, although fully matured shoots can also be used for the same purpose.

Salvia Splendens.

Many growers continue to carry over stock plants of Salvia splendens. These plants take up room which might be utilized more profitably. We have always failed to see any particular advantage in rooting cuttings of this salvia. The plants are less vigorous than seedlings. They may bloom a little earlier, but that is no special advantage, as the value of S. splendens lies in its fall-flowering properties. It is much too early to sow seeds yet, unless they are wanted two to three feet high at bedding-out time. The end of March will give plants big enough for the most fastidious. Where the cutting method of propagation is preferred, it would be well to insert a batch in the sand. Tops can be taken from these later.

Easter Shrubs.

While it is still a little early to start forcing any Easter shrubs, it would be well to have all potted up where this operation has been neglected and have them ready to house at any time. This applies to Azalea mollis, Staphylea Colchica, lilacs, prunus, pyrus, rhododendrons, cratægus and others of the general line of forcing shrubs. Genistas started now in a cool house will come along in season, as will Azalea Indica. If the latter promises to be late, it will be easy to do a little forcing near Easter.

Dutch Hyacinths.

There is no special advantage in forcing pots and pans of Dutch hyacinths into flower very early. They always sell better toward spring. Of course, if you want these for Easter, it is much too early to house them, but probably you may have a retail trade calling for a few pans each week. In this case, as the shoots should now be well advanced and the plants well rooted, bring a few into heat weekly. If they are not sprouted three inches, better place them in the dark a few days to draw them up a little. This may also be effected by inverting a small flower pot over the shoot, with the hole stopped up. Use care, in watering, not to pour it indiscriminately over the shoots, or it may cause the buds or the tender spike to decay. Hyacinths are better grown without hard forcing; 48 to 50 degrees at night will give stocky plants, while 60 to 65 degrees will produce spindling ones.

Hybrid Perpetual Roses.

To be seasonable for Easter, hybrid perpetual roses should now be breaking freely in a cool house. It is unwise to start them in over 45 degrees at night. Later, as the growth develops, 10 degrees more may be given. Guard against cold drafts, which would quickly give mildew a footing. Do not syringe overhead except on bright days and when you are sure the foliage will be quite dry before sunset. It is too late now to start hybrid perpetual or rambler roses and have them in flower for Easter.

FICUS ELASTICA.

If you have a number of large but somewhat ungainly rubber plants, which will furnish good cuttings, the present is a good time to increase your stock. While rubber plants may be rooted in a brisk bottom heat in a mixture of sand and chopped sphagnum, a better way to secure good plants is by the ringing process. This, in brief, consists of making a circular or slanting cut between a couple of eyes, about halfway through the shoot. The cut is to be kept open with a piece of charcoal or wood. Then tie a handful of moss around this incision. Bind it firmly and keep constantly moist. When roots are being pushed through the moss it is time to sever the tops and pot them. A warm, moist atmosphere will assist root formation and is also necessary for the young plants until they become established.

PANDANUS VEITCHII.

Pandanus Veitchii is one of the very best decorative plants and never seems to be in oversupply. In spite of predictions that the new P. Sanderi would displace it, the more recent introduction has failed to catch on, to use a popular phrase, as well as the older variety. While firing is heavy and a good, steady bottom heat is at command, is an ideal time to root as many of the side shoots or suckers as can be obtained. Many of the lower ones will be found to have a fragment of root attached. These will speedily grow into salable plants. Give the propagating bed a good soaking of water at least once a day. If your sand is rather coarse, two waterings may be needed.

Spanish iris will now require some liquid manure once a week. Do not try too hard forcing on it. Fifty degrees at night is high enough for safety. Gladiolus The Bride succeeds under similar conditions. Keep it well up to the light.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Selection of Cuttings.

During the month of February the most favorable conditions for propagation obtain; therefore no effort should be spared to get as large batches as possible of the leading sorts you intend growing. This does not mean, however, that the cutting bench should be overcrowded with cuttings, taken indiscriminately.

In caring for a batch of plants from benching to the present time, one cannot have failed to notice certain points of superiority which some have over others. Keep an eye on those which became established quickly without appreciable loss of foliage, also those which early gave long, stout stems, and from their number choose those possessing vigor, sturdy habit and desirable blooming qualities, from which to select cuttings for next year's stock.

Of course, under this method it is not possible to increase one's stock as rapidly as when cuttings are taken promiscuously, but it is shortsighted policy to sacrifice quality for quantity. When a grower has but a few plants of a variety very much desired, the disposition is to overpropagate—a practice which has worked an injustice to more than one sterling variety.

High Pressure Propagation.

Remember, we cannot get all there is in a variety during one season. It is better to have bought not less than 250 plants or to wait another year, but this is a subject to be treated more freely in advice as to purchasing new sorts. Meanwhile steer clear of high pressure propagation.

Some growers claim to take no cuttings from plants on which splits have appeared, but as the bursting of calyxes is not a constitutional disease, I can see no ground for making this an invariable rule. It is true that certain varieties are more inclined to split than others, and if weather conditions are such at propagating time that this trouble appears in spite of proper treatment, I would not hesitate to employ cuttings from these plants, provided, of course, that they had under normal conditions given good blooms. The statement that some particular sort "never bursts its calyx" must be taken with a grain of salt.

While, as before stated, it is desirable to propagate in large batches, it is not good policy to include undersized cuttings. Better allow them to remain on the parent plant another week. It may be thought that small deficiencies in size, health and general make-up will be outgrown in the field, but at housing time the difference will usually be even more apparent. GEO. S. OSBORN.

RYE SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

I have a piece of ground with rye. I think of plowing this under when it gets four to six inches high, which will be about April 1 to 10 with us. Then I would add some well rotted manure and about a month later plant out my young carnations for the summer. Will this be suitable preparation, or will the rye plowed under in the spring be injurious to the carnations in causing stem-rot? R. E. G.

I would be a little afraid to plant on the ground that stands in rye now on account of the danger of stem-rot, unless the rye is well rotted before you plant and that could hardly be expected one month after it is turned under. If you can possibly plant on other ground, I would advise you to do so this year, and, to get this ground in still better shape for the following year, sow it down in red clover or cowpeas this spring and turn them under too, leaving the ground rough and fully exposed to the weather next winter. There should be no danger from stem-rot or from rust by that time and the soil should be in splendid mechanical condition. A. F. J. B.

THE EL PASO CARNATION CO.

The El Paso Carnation Co., of El Paso, Ill., is now in its second season. Three houses, each 30x100, were built in 1906, and in 1907 four were constructed, two of them 30x100 and the other two 12x66. The houses are six feet out of the ground, on 2-inch iron posts in three feet of concrete. One house is in roses and smilax. Two houses are in carnations, including two benches of Lawson, two benches of Bountiful, two of Queen, two of Enchantress, one of red varieties and one of assorted varieties, such as White Perfection, Aristocrat and Daybreak Lawson. Two large houses are in lettuce and will next season be used for carnations also. The two smaller houses, or lean-to's, are for ferns and propagating.

Steam is furnished by two forty horsepower boilers. The work-room is 14x93, with a concrete floor. All walks are macadamized with fine crushed stone. The coal is unloaded from cars into the bins.

A fine business is done in funeral work and cut flowers. Part of the flowers go to Chicago and the rest are used for the local trade or shipped to various towns. The establishment is strictly up-to-date in equipment and in methods of doing business, and visiting florists say that the plant is one of the most complete of its size they ever inspected. The quality of the stock is fine and, with a doubled carnation capacity next season, there will be about 14,000 carnation plants in the benches, including Lawson-Enchantress, Enchantress, White Perfection, Victory, Pink Lawson and Aristocrat. In roses the varieties grown are Killarney, Richmond, Perle, Bride, Maid and Chatenay. have a big stock of bedding plants and are anticipating a bumper season.

We are in the carnation belt, and what is needed most in our valley is a carnation with the color of Joost but with better habits; not a fancy, but a good general purpose pink. We have no doubt there are a number of seedlings of this scarce color grown by the originators that would fill this long-felt want, if introduced. Roney Bros.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

Would soil out of new land be suitable for carnations? I have solid benches in my greenhouse. They are on the ground. F. J.

You do not say whether your soil is heavy or light; I presume the latter. If mixed with rotted manure, with some bone meal added in the early spring, it should grow good carnations. If it has some fiber to it to give it body, it will be preferable to soil lacking it. I have seen carnations grown well in sandy soil, meadow muck and a retentive clayey loam, and no doubt your soil is not one of the poorest types. C. W.

EISELE'S NEW CANNAS.

At the Jamestown Exposition last season W. G. Eisele, of West End, N. J., exhibited a seedling canna, a cross between Queen Charlotte and Italia, bright crimson in color, with a wide, irregular border of yellow. The flowers resemble a Queen Charlotte in the orchid-flowering class. The variety was given a diploma and a gold medal.

Mr. Eisele also has another new canna, stock of which he is distributing in the trade this season. It is named Neil Campbell and is deep orange yellow. The flowers are of good size and said to be freely produced. It belongs in the purple-leaved section and Mr. Eisele considers it a variety of special merit because of the combination of color in flower and foliage.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Charles Foreman.

Charles Foreman, of Louisiana, Mo., was killed in the early morning of February 8 by the falling of a chimney during the burning of his greenhouses. At the same time his brother, George Foreman, was severely injured and seems likely to lose the sight of both eyes if he recovers. Several members of the local fire department were also hurt.

Mr. Foreman's establishment was at 221 North Ninth street and the fire appears to have originated from a defect in the boiler-room, for the structure was in flames when the fire was discovered. The greenhouses were pretty much destroyed.

Charles R. Wagner.

Charles R. Wagner died at his home in Portsmouth, O., February 2, at an advanced age. He had been ill for a long time and his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Wagner was born in Germany. He had made flowers his life's study and was the pioneer of the florists' business in Portsmouth. At one time he conducted a greenhouse in Tracy park. The beautiful display of flowers around the soldiers' monument in Greenlawn is a testimony to his skill. He was a widower, but is survived by two sons and one daughter.

Wm. J. Landers.

Telegraphic reports from Santa Barbara, Cal., tell of the death of Wm. J. Landers, of San Leandro, Cal. Mr. Landers was one of the owners of the California Nursery Co., at Niles, Cal., and for years had been prominently connected with many large Pacific coast enterprises. He is survived by a widow and four children. G.

J. B. Heiss.

The trade at Dayton, O., turned out to a man February 3 for the funeral of J. B. Heiss, who dropped dead January 31. The Dayton Florists' Club sent a large cross and many of its members sent personal tokens of sympathy.

Mr. Heiss was 51 years of age, coming to this country from Frankfort, Germany, about twenty-five years ago. For many years he was widely known as a grower of palms for the wholesale trade, but the local demand at Dayton developed so fast that he found it profitable to turn his glass into stock for retailing. When the Society of American Florists was to be entertained at Dayton, the trade there turned to Mr. Heiss for leadership and he became the first president of the Dayton Florists' Club. It was largely due to his indefatigable energy that the Dayton convention went on record as one of the most successful in the history of the society.

Numa R. Cook.

Numa Reid Cook, who had lately been employed by the Green Floral & Nursery Co., at Dallas, Tex., died at the home of his sister, Mrs. G. S. Boren, at Pomona, N. C., January 20, 1908.

The Range From Which Peter Reinberg, Chicago, Cut His Famous January Crop of Beauties.—James Novak, Grower.

Mr. Cook was born June 25, 1878, at Friendship, N. C. After attending the public schools, he took a course at the A. & M. College, Raleigh, N. C., and then entered the employment of the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., of Pomona, N. C., where he had his first experience in the growing of cut flowers. He afterward held positions with florists in Pawtucket, R. I.; Norfolk, Va.; Chester, Pa.; Norwalk, Conn.; Lewiston, Me., and finally with the Green Floral & Nursery Co., as already stated. Mr. Cook was a young man of honor and ability and was much loved by his people at home and by his friends in the trade.

GLADIOLUS TACONIC.

The accompanying illustration is of a variety of gladiolus which we have named Taconic, the stock of which has been grown and increased in our fields during the last few years, under field No. 605, and by this number only is known to many florists, several seedsmen and many other visitors to Meadowvale Farm, who have particularly noticed and admired this variety. The description is as follows: Bright, lively pink, flecked and striped with shades of the same color, the petals lightening to the faintest blush in the throat. The markings on the lower petals are deep crimson, running into a thin strip of pale lemon yellow. Plant vigorous and flowers large, ten to twelve being in bloom at the same time.

Under ordinary garden cultivation it attains a height of from four and a half to five feet. It is one of the most beautiful and artistic of any variety of the same color which it has been my pleasure to see. ARTHUR COWEE.

WHY NOT A GLADIOLUS SOCIETY?

Referring to the article in the REVIEW of January 23, page 10, regarding gladioli with ruffled or fluted petals, permit me to say, that neither this trait nor that of the flowers being uniformly distributed around the spike is new to Meadowvale Farm. I have noticed the ruffled or fluted flower in many of Groff's hybrids, but never considered them of sufficient importance to call them novelties. The petals of the old variety, Eugene Scribe, are more or less fluted, as well as some seedlings from this variety.

The saucer-shaped flower, with all of the petals of about the same proportions, may be seen in my fields by thousands, almost from the beginning to the end of the blooming season, measuring anywhere from three to six inches in diameter. Spikes with dark colored flowers on one side and light colored on the other appear in our fields every season, but these I consider freaks. I have also a variety which develops all of the bloom in a bunch at the top of the spike. This variety, however, is of weak constitution and it is therefore impossible to increase the stock.

About the only thing in the gladiolus line which we do not grow here is the "ever-blooming" and the "sweet-scented" varieties. Has any one yet produced either of the above?

Would it not be a good plan to form a gladiolus society, having for its aim the further popularization of this already well known flower (?), the elimination of a lot of worthless named varieties and the perfecting of a plan whereby the same variety would not be sold under different names, in different or the same localities? In fact, there are many important points which could be taken up by such an organization and adjusted to the mutual interest of growers, seedsmen and consumers. The rose, carnation, dahlia and chrysanthemum growers have their societies; why not the gladiolus growers as well, Brother Gladiolus Specialists? ARTHUR COWEE.

TAB ON THE TELEGRAMS.

Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, has introduced a bill in the senate to amend the Interstate Commerce Act so as to require that the telegraph companies shall cause to appear upon the addressee's copy of every telegram, "the name of the place where such telegram originated, the month, day of the month, and the hour and minute of the day on which it was accepted for transmission, and there shall also appear plainly and accurately upon every copy of such telegram the month, day of the month, and hour and minute of the day on which it was received for delivery; and after every such telegram shall have been delivered there shall be plainly and accurately noted upon every copy of every such telegram filed in the office where it has been received for delivery the month, the day of the month, the hour and minute of the day such message was delivered. The original of every such telegram shall be kept on file for six years after its acceptance for transmission in the office where it shall originate, and a copy of such telegram shall be kept on file for six years in the office where it shall be received for delivery. In each office telegrams received for transmission and copies of telegrams received for delivery shall be separately filed in chronological order and shall be separately indexed so as to show the name of the sender of each telegram and the name of the person to whom the telegram was addressed."

Florists are large users of the telegraph and the frequent delay in delivery is the cause of much vexation and money loss. Write your senator and congressman urging the passage of Senator La Follette's bill.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

THERE is an active demand for young stock of the Killarney rose.

THE Illinois State Fair will be held at Springfield September 25 to October 2, 1908.

COLLECT your bills; then you'll be able to pay what you owe and everybody will be happy.

OUT in the grain states they say business was never better and the florists are all looking for the biggest spring trade ever known.

W. A. MANDA, South Orange, N. J., wants the national flower show guarantors to chip in to provide a "Guarantors' Sweepstakes Prize," to go to the exhibitor who scores the largest number of points.

WILLIAM F. KASTING, Buffalo, chairman of the committee of fifty on national flower show, has called a meeting of the committee at Chicago during the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Rose Society, March 25 to 27.

THE propagators for the trade report an excellent demand for cuttings of both Victory and Beacon carnations, but little call for stock of Robert Craig, the other scarlet that came out in the same year as Victory. White Perfection and White Enchantress also are in demand.

AN EYE FOR BUSINESS.

"An I for business is the thing;
The crowd
Will patronize the men who sing
Out loud."

DAHLIA SPORT.

I have a sport of Dahlia Souvenir de Gustav Douzon in which the flower is of the same style as the original, but is white with a faint trace of red in the throat of each petal.

I would like to know if it is common for this variety to throw flowers of this kind in other localities.

This flower caused a sensation at the Indianapolis dahlia show last season, attracting more attention than any other flower in the show. By selecting I have secured about ninety per cent true from roots, and in time hope to entirely eliminate the red flowers. I am also growing seed from this sport in the hope of securing something good.

E. T. BARNES.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondents of the REVIEW are instructed to use the wires of the Postal Telegraph Co., whenever possible, and advertisers and others are requested to do so when telegraphing to the REVIEW.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Special Premium Offers.

The following supplementary list of special premium offers has been received:

John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., offer $25 first, $15 second, for best fifty blooms La Detroit rose.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., offers $25 cash, premium not yet specified.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., offers $12 first, $8 second, $5 third, for best fifty blooms Winona carnation.

Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo., offers $50 for best six plants Cibotium Schiedei, not over 10-inch pots.

John Young, New York, offers $50 cash, premium not yet specified.

W. N. RUDD,
Chairman Premium Committee.

Premium List.

The premium list for the national flower show is now in press and will soon be ready for mailing. Many changes have been made in the list originally published in the trade papers and it has been largely increased.

It is believed that the complete list carries the largest amount in premiums, medals, cups and trophies ever offered at any floricultural exhibition at any time. Suggestions for premiums have been made, with a revision of all or parts of the list, by about 100 individuals and firms, and it is hoped that in the form in which it will appear all classes of exhibitors will be found to be amply provided for.

It should be noted that the suggestions made to the committee, if all had been carried out, would have required over five times the large sum of money which was available. This condition, of course, made it necessary to strike out many desirable suggestions. All suggestions, however, were given equal consideration on their merit, without regard to the names of the persons making them.

Copies of the list may be obtained on application to J. H. Burdett, Secretary, 1411 First National Bank building, Chicago.

W. N. RUDD,
Chairman Premium Committee.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—H. A. Fisher, who has been conducting a retail store here for a year or more, has opened a second store at Battle Creek.

FARGO, N. D.—Plans are being prepared for three greenhouses, each 20x60, to be erected at the agricultural college during the summer. One of the houses will be used for laboratory and propagating purposes and another for experimental purposes.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The feature of the market is the unprecedented weakness in the carnation department. Never within the memory of the oldest wholesaler have carnations of such fine quality found so weak a market in February. The supply is the heaviest of the season, practically all growers having come in crop at once, and the quality is superlatively fine. Taking the market as a whole, no better carnations ever were offered than are now to be had in quantity. While some small lots of selected stock are bringing fair prices, it is impossible to clean up through the ordinary channels and thousand-lot sales are made to the stores which hold special sales, the price being made in accordance with the buyer's ability to handle stock, rather than in accordance with the quality or usual value. Of course, there is an attempt to hold the best stock back for a little extra price, but February 11 $20 bought 1,000 of the best carnations in this market, and $50 bought 5,000 of good stock. The following day was a little better and the wholesalers hope the worst is over.

Up to February 11 the rose market was fairly strong, in contrast to the carnation market. There are no large crops of Beauties and prices are firm, but other roses are now abundant and there is some splendid stock to be had in all varieties, at concessions on last week's prices. There continues to be some extra call for white for funeral work, but Bride now is equal to all demands. It will ease up the call for Easter lilies, it recently having been impossible to find lilies for all late orders.

Bulb stock is in little better shape than carnations. The counters are full of tulips, daffodils and Paper Whites, and valley actually goes to waste. Freesia also is abundant. All these are sold at prices less than was asked last year. The violets met with slow sale up to February 12, but just before Valentine's day there was a slight appreciation in value because of the many orders for large quantities booked for delivery Valentine's day. The quality is hardly up to standard for this season of the year.

E. E. Pieser predicts that ferns will be higher in price this spring and poorer in quality than usual in the last months of the season. The market for greens has been excellent all through the season to date.

Institute for Rose Show.

The Florists' Club's committee charged with the arrangements for the approaching meeting of the American Rose Society has closed an arrangement with the Art Institute, whereby the exhibition will be held in Blackstone hall at the Art Institute. This is the hall once used for a November flower show. It is 60x208 feet and thirty-four feet high.

It will be cleared of all save the larger pieces of statuary and will make an ideal exhibition room. The business meetings of the society will be held in the beautiful little theater known as Fullerton hall, in the Art Institute.

The dates for the meeting are March 25 to 27. Wednesday is a free day at the Art Institute, but on Thursday and Friday 25 cents admission is charged. For the purposes of the rose show an evening admission of 50 cents will be charged.

It is planned that the Florists' Club shall give a banquet to the out-of-town members of the American Rose Society one evening during the convention.

Various Notes.

The market generally overlooked the fact that Wednesday, February 12, is a legal holiday, with only one mail delivery. Right now is a good time to call attention to the fact that there will be only one delivery of mail February 22, which is Washington's birthday, and those whose orders are to be shipped that night should use the telegraph.

The A. L. Randall Co. says that so many of its customers have asked to be supplied with glass that they contemplate making glass a regular feature of the business in the future.

Scheiden & Schoos have been using shredded cattle manure at their Evanston greenhouses for the last two years. They think it is better than any other procurable fertilizer.

W. L. Palinsky says the cut flower trade is all right, but that plant business is a little slow.

John J. Kruchten is receiving some of the finest Paper Whites ever seen in this market, but he says the retailers stand and look at them a long while before they can make up their minds to pay 3 cents for them.

Louis Coatsworth spent Sunday at New Castle. He says the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. will soon have the heaviest crop of roses in its history.

The Atlas block, where so many wholesalers center, is being painted and the priming coat was said to be specially fitting to the condition of the carnation market. It was bright yellow.

The Kennicott Bros. received the first of the annual crop of Klehm's Novelty tulip February 7. The stock is as good as ever, although bulb forcers in general report much dissatisfaction with the quality of tulips this year. Some of the largest growers say they have experienced a greater loss than ever before through bad bulbs having been delivered.

N. J. Wietor says that his firm is well pleased with the Winsor carnation. It having been grown under glass all summer at their place, they got an early cut and good stems. They will drop Robert Craig next year, making Victory their dependence for red. At this place no white carnation ever has been able to displace White Cloud as a money maker.

John Sinner says that the principal call is for white carnations and says the fact that the buyers will not take colors, even when white is not available, goes to show that about all the retailers are doing is funeral work.

G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., fell on the ice Sunday evening and was confined to his home.

L. Baumann & Co. report collections slow. This is specially important to them, because in 1907 they paid duty of approximately $40,000, which is cash before the goods are taken from the customs house.

C. M. Dickinson went home Saturday evening to spend several days on the sick list.

George Reinberg started a lot of Easter lilies in his orchid house and had a fine crop last week.

Bassett & Washburn say that Lincoln's birthday, February 12, brought a fine call for red roses, for dinner celebrations, etc.

John Poehlmann says he looks for the tremendously heavy crop of carnations to pass off with practically all growers within two or three weeks, and to be followed by another comparative shortage. C. N. Thomas, of Randall's, agrees with him.

Leonard Kill says that at Peter Reinberg's there is no complaint of dull business, although they are not making the new record they had hoped to establish. Mr. Kill thinks that, considering the state of general trade in Chicago, the florists may congratulate themselves that flowers are no longer a luxury, but a prime necessity.

The Florists' Club will meet at Handel hall tonight, February 13.

At E. C. Amling's they say sweet peas are selling as well as anything.

At Winterson's John Degnan is deep in the work of getting out a spring catalogue.

A. H. Budlong says that one house at the J. A. Budlong establishment will be planted to Killarney rose this spring.

The current week of last year was one of the best of the season. It does not promise to make a favorable comparison, but the wholesalers hope to make it up in March.

Mrs. E. H. Hunt has returned from a visit of four weeks at Akron and Cleveland.

Zech & Mann say that business was excellent last week, with the single exception of Wednesday.

Vaughan & Sperry reported February 10 that they had more advance orders booked for violets for Valentine's day than they had at Christmas. Practically all the retailers are putting forth extra efforts for Valentine's day business.

H. A. Fisher, well known in this market, who has had a flower store at Kalamazoo for a year or more, opened a second store at Battle Creek last week.

C. W. McKellar is handling Florida asparagus in quantity.

At Evanston, R. F. Gloede is building another greenhouse.

Among the callers this week were: A. F. Fitzgerald, of the Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit; H. V. Hunkel, of Holton & Hunkel, Milwaukee; Henry Wenberg, Batavia, Ill.; Andrew Peterson, Hoopeston, Ill.; S. E. Lawrence, Arrowsmith, Ill.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Michigan was in the hands of a heavy blizzard nearly all of last week and Detroit had its share of the snow. The suburban lines were all tied up for a time and the steam roads were more or less behind time. Out-of-town shipments were naturally delayed in many cases, inconveniencing some of the florists considerably.

Much is expected of Valentine's day. Some of the more wide-awake florists have most appropriate window decorations.

The Junior hop at Ann Arbor created a big demand for violets and orchids last week, and it was necessary to do some figuring to make both ends meet for Valentine's day.

Roses are hardly equal to the demand. Carnations, especially the lighter shades, are too plentiful and many are being disposed of at slaughter-sale prices. Bulbous stock is quite plentiful; in fact, too much so. Considerable southern smilax is being used for decorating.

Various Notes.

About the only flower store that is not open Sundays is Murray T. Patterson's. He is well pleased with business up to date for 1908. January business was ahead of last year.

W. B. Brown had the decorations at Ann Arbor for the "J" hop. This is the society event of the season at the lively college town. Mr. Brown has been doing this job for a number of years.

J. F. Sullivan is a stranger in the city. He has been confined to his home since the first of the year. Although not sick in bed, he feels weak as the result of a general breakdown in health.

The building at 233 Woodward avenue will in all probability be torn down about the first of the month. This means that Mrs. A. P. Cox, who bought out George Leadley some time ago, will be compelled to move again. The lawsuit between Mrs. Cox and Mr. Leadley is still unsettled. The case is now in the hands of Judge

Murphy, who is taking his time about rendering a decision.

B. Schroeter sent out a letter to his many undertaker customers the first of the year, the substance of which was as follows: "We are obliged to make a slight advance in the charge for the rental of palms. For the balance of the cold weather our price for renting palms will be as follows: Per dozen, $7.50; per half dozen, $4. We will not deliver less than $4 worth of plants." In doing this Mr. Schroeter raised the price just fifty per cent. In looking over his books for January and the first part of February he finds he still has the same number of undertakers, with seemingly just as many funerals as before. If all the other florists would follow suit, the renting of palms could be put on a paying basis.

Charles Warncke slipped on the sidewalk in front of the office of the Detroit Lumber Co., February 4, and broke his leg at the ankle. In falling he tried to save himself and in doing so wrenched his back. As it was late in the day, when few people were about, he lay exposed to the cold for some time. He is suffering much pain from both the fall and exposure.

Mr. Scribner is again back in harness, but he still feels none too well.

February 5 was the date of the club's regular meeting, but only a few members showed up, so the meeting was not called to order.

Work has been commenced on a new building for the Lohrman Seed Co. at the intersection of Randolph street and Gratiot avenue. This is but a few steps from the firm's present location.

Frank Danzer, Breitmeyer's decorator and window trimmer, met with a sad accident that will lay him up for some time. He slipped on a stone step in front of the Palms apartments and in falling broke his collar bone in two places.

E. Ferrand & Sons are sending in some fine white lilac for the local market. This lilac is forced at their nursery in Oakland county.

Israel Rosnosky, of Henry F. Michell Co., has passed through this city. He reports business as being far ahead of last year. H. S.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade does not seem to get much life into it, although in comparison with those in other lines of business florists do not seem to be getting much the worst of it.

The unusual number of deaths has kept the funeral work going so that the dullness is not so noticeable and stock is being used up. However, you will find everyone is looking for something cheap.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting February 4, in the store of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. It was the most enthusiastic meeting ever held by the club. Over 100 members were present. It was a competitive exhibition and the display would have done credit to a real flower show. The club is now getting in shape for something of this kind next season.

It was election night, but there was only one nomination for each office. Mr. Jones called the new president, Fred Burki, to the chair, and after a few modest and well chosen remarks Mr. Burki took charge of the business of the club. Several new members were elected and about twenty new names were proposed.

The committee, T. P. Langhans and Charles Crall, who looked after the interests of the club at Washington, gave a report of their trip and told how near they came to being surprised by a bluff. They only hoped to get the convention for 1910 and almost secured it for 1909, but were glad of an opportunity to do the western boys a good turn and help to make the vote unanimous for Indianapolis. They now feel that 1910 is almost assured to Pittsburg. This report was received with great enthusiasm, and if only a part of this enthusiasm can be worked up at the time of the convention, visitors to this city will be more than repaid for their visit. Already some of the members have outlines of entertainment sketched out that look good to me. Knowing that the officers of the club will look after business, they are arranging the social matters.

The subject was carnations, and the following list of exhibits, all up-to-date show grade, will prove the interest taken. Among the commercial exhibitors were:

John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., Imperial, Pink Imperial, John E. Haines.

J. L. Wyland, De Haven, Pa., fifty each of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection, Pink Lawson.

Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa., fifty each of Lady Bountiful, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection, Pink Lawson, Winsor, Beacon.

S. B. Hatch, De Haven, Pa., fifty each of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection.

F. H. Westhoff, De Haven, Pa., fifty each of Robert Craig, Enchantress, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Fred Burki, Aristocrat, Pink Lawson.

Albert Lorch, De Haven, Pa., fifty each of White Lawson, Pink Lawson, Winsor.

South View Floral Co., Carrick, Pa., Harlowarden, Melody, Enchantress, Dorothy, White Lawson, Bountiful, Pink Lawson, Glendale.

Finleyville Floral Co., Finleyville, Pa., Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Winsor, White Perfection, Hannah Hobart, Aristocrat, Robert Craig, Beacon.

Among the private gardeners who exhibited were: Mr. Jenkinson, gardener for Mr. Peacock; Charles Madson, gardener for R. H. Boggs; James Hutchinson, gardener for Dr. Schaffer, and H. L. Price, gardener for Mrs. J. B. Laughlin.

While the judges, John Murchie and Walter Breitenstein, went to work, other business was taken up. The private gardeners' committee presented a provisional schedule for the monthly exhibitions, which was laid over for future consideration.

The committee was notified to secure a suitable meeting place, as the club has outgrown the old hall.

Mr. Smith, grower for A. Lorch, gave a talk on fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas.

Mr. Murchie and Mr. Breitenstein, judges, then handed in the following decisions:

Dark pink carnation—Albert Lorch first, with Pink Lawson; F. H. Westhoff second, with Aristocrat.

Light pink—Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. first, with Enchantress; J. L. Wyland second, with Enchantress.

White—F. H. Westhoff first, with White Enchantress; S. B. Hatch second, with White Perfection.

Red—F. H. Westhoff first, with Craig; Finleyville Floral Co. second, with Beacon.

Pink—Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. first, with Winsor; J. L. Wyland second, with Rose-pink Enchantress.

Among private gardeners, Mr. Jenkinson, gardener for Mr. Peacock, won first, with twenty-five Enchantress; Charles Madsen, gardener for R. H. Boggs, second, with twenty-five assorted carnations.

While there was a great deal of enthusiasm, all were satisfied with the decision.

Various Notes.

H. L. Blind & Bros. have purchased a property, 75x200 feet, fronting on Centre avenue, E. E., opposite Christ church. Here they are erecting a store and a large greenhouse for decorative stock and expect to be open for business April 1. They will close their south side store about that time, and by moving out into the better residence neighborhood they expect to make a bid for more of the east end trade. The firm is only five years old, but pushing rapidly to the front.

Breitenstein & Flemm are following the example of many of the other business men of this city and will change their location about May 1. As they have not closed their new lease, they have not announced the location.

The extremely cold weather has caused losses to several of the florists. One firm had a load of palms frozen. Another had a load and a wagon burned up, the wagon catching fire from the oil stove used for heating. HOO-HOO.

I AM sold out of gladiolus bulbs. The little advertisement in the REVIEW was a good investment.—FRANK KLOTZ, Bowling Green, Ohio.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There has been a decided falling off in the movement of all kinds of flowers. Roses are short in supply and were the only stock that was not sold at a sacrifice. Carnations, bulbous stock, sweet peas, valley, and Romans all went slowly, having to be forced on the buyers. Violets, which have sold up clean in this market up to this time, took a turn for the worse, it being impossible to move them all, even at reduced prices.

Carnation Show.

The carnation show at the Florists' Club was in every way a great success. Some fine shipments were received from outside exhibitors, among which was a fine vase of Afterglow from R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati. The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, showed fine vases of Aristocrat and Andrew Carnegie, all arriving in good condition. Heepe's Sons, of Akron, O., and The Lanborn Floral Co., of Alliance, both staged tables of fine stock. The judges were W. Stade, John Kelly and George Bate. They made the following report:

The Lanborn Floral Co. shows a fine table of carnations, consisting of Enchantress, White Perfection, The Belle, Harlowarden and Lady Bountiful; its White Perfection being the finest white carnation on exhibition, for which it is given a certificate of merit.

Charles Bartels shows a table of carnations worthy of special mention, his Lawson being the finest of this variety on exhibition. The light pink sport of Lawson is well worthy of close attention. Mr. Bartels is given a certificate of merit on his vase of Enchantress, which are especially fine.

R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, receives a certificate of merit on his vase of Afterglow, being the finest vase of carnations staged of any color.

Carl Hagenburger shows a vase of lilac, also a bunch of Princess of Wales violets that show the highest of culture.

The Chicago Carnation Co. shows vases of Andrew Carnegie and Aristocrat that receive special mention for their fine culture.

The vase of Brides and Maids shown by Isaac Kennedy are the finest roses seen in these parts and he is given a certificate of merit on his new sport of Bride.

Heepe's Sons, of Akron, show a table of mixed carnations and receive special mention for the highest of culture.

J. Merkle & Son show a fine table of carnations. Those worthy of mention are White Perfection, White Enchantress and a vase of Beacon, for which they are given a certificate of merit.

Roman Wasko exhibited a bunch of Princess of Wales violets that show the best of culture, for which he is awarded a certificate of merit.

The F. R. Williams Co. staged a table of fine carnations, consisting of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Robert Craig and Beacon. A certificate of merit is awarded them on a vase of sport of Enchantress which shows a marked improvement in color over the parent.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Lincoln Brown has been doing some fine wedding decorations of late. One at the Colonial Club February 19 is expected to be a beautiful affair, consisting of lilies and Beauties.

F. R. Williams has been confined to the house for a week with the grippe.

Lars Anderson, of Rocky River, has been sending in a fine cut of Enchantress.

The Ohio Cut Flower Co. is sending in some good Brides and Maids, which are used at its new retail store in the Majestic theater.

Smith & Fetters have had some beautiful window displays of spring flowers in fancy baskets during the last week, which are sure to stop the passer-by.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business is fairly good, but not what one would call brisk; still there is a demand for nearly all the stock that comes in. Quite a lot of shipping orders are received at the wholesale houses. There has been a decided scarcity of roses in all grades, though of Beauties the supply is enough.

Work for the society folks is not any too plentiful, as only small affairs are going on. The retailers are making some preparation for St. Valentine's day and large advance orders are in for violets. At the different wholesale markets February 10, we found carnations plentiful, but roses of all kinds scarce, with white in great demand. There are plenty of violets. Everything in the bulb stock line is abundant. Tulips and Von Sions sell well. There are plenty of Romans

Various Notes.

J. P. Metzler, who was with H. C. Zimmer at Denver, Colo., is in the city. Mr. Metzler was for the last few weeks employed by the Foster Floral Co.

Superintendent George Ostertag, of the local park department, has the entire grounds of the City Hall park covered with tea waste, which he gets from a local chemical company in large lots. This, he says, makes a great fertilizer for the lawn and makes a better appearance than manure.

John R. Steinecke, of Old Orchard, is sending to Smith & Co. some extra good Enchantress carnations, also other varieties of good quality.

There are a great many grippe victims among our local trade, both in retail and wholesale circles. In fact, there are so many that space will hardly permit me to mention all their names. As yet, though, no serious cases have been reported.

George Hecht, brother of C. D. Hecht, will build two new greenhouses this summer at his place in Clayton, Mo.

It has been reported that a great deal of greenhouse building will be done in and around Kirkwood this summer. All the local growers there have done well this season with carnations, violets and sweet peas. None of the growers there has as yet taken to growing roses.

Among our local carnation growers who should make excellent showing at the club's carnation exhibition this week are: John Steidle, Pierre Schneider, William Winter, F. W. Ude, Hugo Gross, John Steinecke, W. J. Pilcher, A. Jablonsky, J. W. Dunford and F. J. Fillmore. All are cutting high grade stock in all varieties.

It is reported that quite a delegation of local florists from here will visit Springfield, Ill., next Tuesday, February 18, to attend the third annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association..

Emil Schray was made happy February 7, when the stork made its appearance at his home and left him a daughter. Congratulations are now in order among Mr. and Mrs. Schray's large circle of friends in the trade.

Mr. Hibbert, of the Hibbert Floral Co., of De Soto, Mo., was a caller February 8, buying stock for orders he had booked for this week.

The spring flower show, which is to be given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society next month, promises to be as large an affair as it was last year. The location has as yet not been announced, and it has been reported that the executive committee has decided to charge admission this year. Last year the admission was free and the attendance was large.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The continuation of severe weather has played havoc with the cut flower business, which is in a worse condition than for years at this season. The low temperature has prevented the street fakers plying their vocation. These people handle a large quantity of flowers and their absence as buyers is appreciably felt. The cold weather has affected the output of roses and these are selling better than other flowers. Brides and Maids are going well and Beauties are realizing good prices. Richmond, Killarney, Chatenay and Wellesley are also selling tolerably well. Of carnations it must be said that the glut is one of the worst ever seen during the winter season, and prices have come down with a dull thud, a good many flowers being sold as low as $10 per thousand, but even at the low prices the demand is unequal to the supply.

Violets are only selling moderately well. Severely cold weather always hurts the sale of these. Bulbous stock is in heavy oversupply. Best quality sweet peas are selling well, but there is but a limited call for second grades. There is a good supply of Harrisii and speciosum lilies, with a poor demand. Freesia is selling poorly, as is lily of the valley. Other flowers are meeting with a slow sale, but it is hoped the congestion of business will be short-lived.

A. H. Hews & Co.

A. H. Hews & Co., of Cambridge, Mass., the world's largest makers of flower pots, are now running their plant to its full capacity, after a partial curtailment last month, due to heavy additions made to meet the increasing demands for their goods. Two new boilers, kilns, dynamo and special machinery for preparing clay have been installed, until today their output has been heavily increased.

The firm has maintained a large warehouse in Long Island City, but has now opened a similar branch in Chicago to facilitate the handling of the growing western business.

Messrs. Hews & Co. have constantly in mind the welfare and pleasure of their employees and have provided for them a recreation room, 25x35, with pool and billiard tables, various games and reading matter.

The outlook for a prosperous year is bright and, from heavy advance orders received, indications are that the plant will be run to its full capacity to fill orders from all parts of the country.

Various Notes.

Owing to all the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society being rented for the week during which the regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was to be held, a postponement of carnation night to February 25 has been found necessary. In addition to W. R. Pierson, there will be quite a number of others from a distance who will participate in the discussion, including F. R. Pierson and H. A. Jahn.

William Turner, of Oceanic, N. J., who was the lecturer before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society February 8, gave an eminently practical talk on greenhouse vegetables, lettuce, radishes, beans, tomatoes, cucumbers and rhubarb being principally dealt with. Among those taking part in the resultant discussion were: W. W. Rawson, George D. Moore, J. W. Duncan, James Wheeler, Wilfrid Wheeler and others.

Among additional special premiums to be offered at the Park street market exhibition February 29, will be a cup valued at $25, from A. C. Zvolanek, for two vases containing 200 spikes each of Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer sweet peas; $25 from James Wheeler for the best new violet, and $6 and $4 from F. R. Pierson Co. for twenty-five Winsor carnations. The show of carnations will, it is believed, be equal to that seen in Washington at the convention, a good many from a distance being promised.

ton delegation after the late Washington convention, the carnations at Cottage Gardens seemed to hold first place. The big house of Beacon almost dazzled them.

Fire in the establishment of George H. Arnold, Braintree, on the evening of February 4, destroyed three greenhouses containing vegetables and flowers. Damage estimated at $5,000.

William Sim is well pleased with advance orders for his new violet, Boston. His sweet peas are now of very fine quality. Of violets he anticipates a heavy crop for Easter, having some 500 sashes in coldframes, as well as his large ridge and furrow house, which he hopes to be able to retard until the middle of April.

F. J. Dolansky is starting to send in his usual crop of sweet peas, which are again of excellent quality.

Peirce Bros. are bringing in large quantities of Lilium speciosum. Their longiflorums for Easter are looking extremely well.

Duncan Finlayson is among those who are making themselves proficient at the game of curling on Jamaica pond.

Waban Conservatories will add 300 feet to their big Beauty house the coming season, which will make its dimensions 40x1000.

Welch Bros. are handling some Beauty and Richmond roses of exceptional excellence at present. Trade with them is very good, considering weather and other conditions.

E. Sutermeister is bringing in some nice pots and pans of the pretty Tritonia crocata to the market.

E. Holmes, of the Montrose Greenhouses, is bringing in some extra fine Bride, Bridesmaid and other roses to the Park Street market.

Thomas Pegler is handling excellent lots of pansies for W. C. Ward, whose success with those under glass is well known.

Windows which are always attractively arranged with high grade flowers are those of Penn, at 43 Bromfield street. The violets here are noted for their splendid quality.

We are pleased to report J. F. Free, of the Park Street market, as recovering nicely from his recent accident.

A local concern is doing a considerable business in selling violet plants by magazine advertising. A recent advertisement reads as follows: "A fortune in violets. Write for our free booklet and learn how florists are making up to $10,000 a year and over, growing violets for market. You can make big money at home all winter by growing them indoors in pots and boxes and outside in a coldbed. In big demand. Work for everybody (both sexes). A few of our plants in small beds pay big." A perusal of a booklet issued makes interesting reading. We are informed that with the exception of a limited number of large florists, violets are not raised to any extent, also that the supply has never equaled the demand, nor is it likely to for many years. "Each plant will produce 100 blooms per season, the average price of which is $1 per hundred wholesale. Corsage bouquets and those thrown at actresses frequently cost $15 to $25. Florists figure on $1 as the season's income from each plant. This, of course, is but one season's profits. Next year your plants will bear again and the new crowns formed last season will begin to bud and blossom, giving you approximately twenty to thirty times as many blossoms as you had the year previous." Much more similarly exhilarating cultural information will be found in the booklet, which is worth the careful perusal of violet specialists. Violets handled are of "the Special Coronet brand, both single and double, and cost only $13.75 per hundred by express."

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions in the cut flower market are decidedly disappointing, the supply exceeding the demand. White roses and Asparagus plumosus are more sought after than anything else on the list. Forget-me-not has made its appearance just in time for St. Valentine's day, but there is hardly enough to give the buyers much opportunity to show their appreciation of this dainty flower, so appropriate for the season.

The supply of bulbous flowers is large, daffodils, tulips, freesia all being at their best. Romans and Paper Whites can still be had in quantity, but they are on the wane. The variety of orchids has been reinforced by pink lælias, a pretty addition.

The general effect of the present depression in the market is felt most by the poorer grades of flowers, which, excepting when useful for funeral work, can only be sold at greatly reduced prices. A word must be said of the fine quality of sweet peas and violets now coming into the city. The former have stem, color and fragrance sufficient to recommend them to the most fastidious buyers, while the cream of the violets, both in singles and doubles, would be hard to excel.

Valley is entirely too plentiful. The long and short grades of American Beauties are in good supply, the medium grade being difficult to obtain, as is usual until the spring crop comes in. Tea roses are a trifle lower in price than a week ago, the poorer grades in colors averaging lower prices than Bride. Carnations of fancy grade find a fair market, the select and ordinary grades being the laggards. Enchantress is the most popular variety today, quantity considered.

Artistic Arrangements.

The most striking novelty seen here in a long time is the window decoration at the "Sign of the Rose," the tasteful English shop of Charles Henry Fox. The decoration is a Valentine's day dinner-table. The table is close to the window, so as to be in full view from the street. The most impressive feature is the transfer of the usual centerpiece arrangement from the middle of the table to one end, the idea being that the view of the guests will not be impeded by the flowers and foliage, and the place often so difficult to fill opposite the hostess is occupied by the flowers. This idea will recommend itself especially where there is only one member of the family present. In the present arrangement the end opposite the hostess is occupied by a figure of Cupid, poised ready to throw his dart. Behind him are the wounded hearts, represented by Richmond roses, tastefully arranged with graceful adiantum fronds. Beside each guest's plate is a little heart-shaped favor filled with violets, while larger favors of the same shape, also filled with violets, occupy the center of the table. The idea is fully completed with silver, glass and china.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

The most beautiful as well as the most useful Fern ever offered. It is suitable both for specimen pot plants and for using as a cut frond. Well grown stock ready now. 2¼-inch, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 4-inch, $10.00 per doz.; $75.00 per 100. Specimens in pans, $2.00, $3.00 and $5.00 each.

Thornhedge Nurseries.

The Thornhedge Nurseries, established ten or twelve years ago on thirty-three acres of ground about three-quarters of a mile from Newton Square, Delaware county, Pa., have grown to a marvelous extent. The nurseries now cover over 400 acres, including some of the most beautiful country near Media. It is not the general beauty of the nurseries that will especially interest florists, but that portion devoted to trees, shrubbery and outdoor flowers. The feature that most impresses the visitor at Thornhedge is the definite aim toward specimen shrubs of a size not easily obtained in other nurseries. The Colorado blue spruce, for instance, is grown on and shifted as required until perfect specimens of large size are produced. Every offer, no matter how tempting, is refused for medium sized or small plants. A number of retinosporas and other evergreens are also specialized. Another feature of the nurseries is the flowering shrubbery, almost every variety known to the decorator being grown in quantity, more or less. Dogwood, spiræas, deutzias, long-stemmed summer asters, cosmos, etc., are found here in great abundance. Some idea of the extent of the Thornhedge Nurseries may be conceived by the fact that it produces 1,000 bushels of wheat, the master mind of the place believing that nothing is more disastrous than unproductive energy on a farm.

Various Notes.

The shop windows this week are full of suggestions for St. Valentine's day, many of them most beautiful. Hampers, heart-shaped boxes and dainty baskets, all tastefully filled, adorn the show-window.

A grower was taken ill one cold night recently, with no one near on whom he could call for assistance in taking care of the boiler that heated his greenhouses. His wife finally secured the aid of a neighbor, who ran for the doctor and then sat up all night firing the boiler. The true neighborliness of this deed should not be in the least marred by the fact that the neighbor is a dealer in coal.

The senior member of the firm of Collins & Roberts, of Boston, was in town this week. Mr. Collins, who formerly represented Whipple & Co., of the Parker House, has many friends in this city.

The junior partner of William J. Baker has called my attention to some exceedingly fine sweet peas, pink and white, now coming into their wholesale commission house.

George Auegle pointed out some fine heliotrope with long stems on the tables of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. a few days ago. This really exquisite flower has lost many friends owing to its trickiness. For some unknown reason it will not always last, even when perfectly fresh. Certain conditions suit it, while other conditions cause it to wilt easily.

The Florex Gardens are greatly pleased with the success of their new carnation houses. Winsor, White Perfection and Beacon have done exceptionally well with them.

John C. Gracey says that business in both his uptown stores has been excellent since New Year's.

The Leo Niessen Co. has a pretty flower in pink lælia.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was a cold one in the New York wholesale cut flower market in more than one sense of that cheerless word. Zero weather was on tap, and the business was chilled to its marrow-bones. "Not in twenty-two years have such conditions prevailed," says one of the authorities who has seen the ups and downs of the wholesale trade here for nearly a quarter of a century.

The present week opens with milder weather, but, except as to roses, with a clogged condition of the wheels and congestion at every turn. Especially is this noticeable in the carnation section; never so many reaching the market as now, never the wonderfully attractive variety and, as to quality, perfection. Thousands of the finest were sold February 10 as low as 2 cents, and in large lots even this low figure was sometimes cut in two. The street merchants are much in evidence and, with the milder weather, there is hope of a distribution of the immense shipments.

From now until Lent, society, that part of it that has not gone to Florida, will excel itself in elaborate dinners and decorations and the retailers will keep the ball rolling. There must be improvement from now until Easter, because one cannot get farther than the bottom of anything.

Roses hold up well, at any rate. Why, with everything else below zero? Because they are like hens' teeth, mighty scarce. Beauties stay around 75 cents for the selected and Maid, and the other roses up at 10 cents to 12 cents. Maybe they, too, will drop, for the crop is coming fast and doubtless there will soon be enough and to spare.

Of violets, what can one say that is true and at the same time encouraging to the patient and persistent grower? I give it up. Thousands of specials were as low as 40 cents a hundred all last week and the leftovers were simply left, and that's the end of it. Now that the cold wave has passed and humanity can get out of doors without freezing to death, the surplus will go to the foreign dispensers and something, at any rate, will be obtainable for stock that last week could not be moved at any price. These conditions are abnormal. There will be nothing to compare with them for a generation to come. As one philosophic wholesaler said, "We must just grin and bear it."

Lilies are down, as is all bulbous stock. There are no exceptions, no favorites. The counters are simply loaded with narcissi, tulips and valley. Think of superb valley selling at $2 a hundred! It's a shame. Look at last year's record and quotations at this date. They tell the story better than I can, or worse, rather, for values were then on a pedestal 100 per cent higher than now.

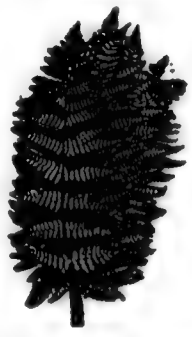
"It's a long lane that has no turning." We will soon come to the parting of the ways. Rivers can't flow up hill all the time, and don't forget that Easter is in sight and it is time now to begin to lay plans for its certain and profitable development.

Club Meeting.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held Monday evening, February 10, President Weathered in the chair. Notwithstanding the opening of the meeting promptly at 7:30, the interest did not flag to the close, some time after 11 o'clock. The attendance numbered seventy-five. The committee appointed to confer with the Horticultural Society of New York, with a view to furthering the mutual interests of the two societies, especially as to the holding of public flower exhibitions, reported through Chairman O'Mara that it had been decided, after a careful review of the situation, that it would not be for the best interests of the club to accept the Horticultural Society's proposition. The committee suggested that it would be better that the club members become active instead of associate members of the Horticultural Society and strongly urged the wisdom of earnest coöperation. W. A. Manda made a strong plea in behalf of amalgamation, enumerating many advantages of union, the small amount of cash required, the certainty of a center for the holding of exhibitions and the prospect of a national flower show in New York in 1909. Mr. Jaenecke took the opposite view. The committee's report was finally adopted, Mr. Sheridan moving its continuance.

Mr. O'Mara announced the certainty of a fall show, the Museum of Natural History furnishing the hall, and the Horticultural Society to ask the aid of the Florists' Club in carrying the exhibition to a popular and successful conclusion.

Mr. Sheridan gave a glowing account of the progress made in behalf of the annual dinner of the club at the St. Denis, Saturday, February 29, urging the loyalty of its members, and was ably seconded by Robert Schultz, another member of the dinner committee.



Resolutions on the deaths of Mrs. A. M. Henshaw and Victor S. Dorval were read and accepted.

Messrs. Canning, Sperling and Barnes were elected to membership and the resignation of Charles Plumb was accepted.

The appointment of a committee on transportation was arranged, the intention being to give the president of the S. A. F. a good send-off and a special train for the August convention at Niagara Falls.

Mr. Burnham was appointed a member of the committee on awards in place of Alfred Zeller, who resigned.

W. A. Manda moved the granting of one gold, two silver-gilt, five silver and five bronze medals by the club for the national flower show at Chicago. Discussion was participated in by Messrs. Hallock, Sheridan, Totty, Traendly, O'Mara and others. It was finally decided that the club offer a silver trophy, value $100, for three special palms, of distinct species, not less than ten feet in height, the by-laws being temporarily suspended to admit of an immediate vote on the proposition. It was carried unanimously and the secretary instructed to telegraph the same to Chairman Rudd, of the committee on premium list.

The exhibits were excellent and numerous. A vase of Princess of Wales violets from T. G. Mense, of Glen Cove, L. I., received a cultural certificate.

The new violet, Boston, from Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., received a certificate of merit.

A vase of white carnation, Lloyd, from H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, Mass., arrived in bad condition and a further exhibit was requested.

The Wa-no-ka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., showed the dark crimson carnation, Wa-no-ka, which secured eighty-five points and was awarded a preliminary certificate.

C. H. Totty showed a large pink seedling chrysanthemum from W. E. Hamilton, of Belfast, Me., which received the thanks of the club, and W. A. Manda, his new pink carnation, to which seventy-three and a half points was awarded.

John T. Withers gave his illustrated lecture on "The Value of the Shade Tree and Its Care," a most practical, instructive and interesting address, which held the close attention of his audience for an hour. A long discussion followed.

A Visit to the Oranges.

George Smith and Hale's seem to enjoy a monopoly almost of the bon ton cut flower retail trade of the Oranges, with conservatory facilities and all the luxurious addenda of up-to-date city stores. The large development of high-class trade among the suburban millionaires is not to be wondered at. Mr. Smith's seed department promises to become a most valuable adjunct to his growing trade, a business that has developed with wonderful rapidity since he left the ranks of the gardening fraternity. His popularity among his old confreres does not wane and he was chosen by the Horticultural Society to make the presentation of the silver cups to the year's successful exhibitors at the banquet. The smoker was, as usual, a success. Many visitors were there and all voted the evening the best of the society's annual demonstrations. President MacRorie was in the chair and kept the crowd as good-humored as himself. Professional entertainers from New York, the songs of the Rickards brothers, the eloquence of W. A. Manda, Marshall, Burnett and other New Yorkers, the fine address of Thomas Grey, of Boston, the music and recitations of local talent and the classic oratory of the big four, Messrs. Herrington, Duckham, Totty and Schultz, of Madison, all combined to complete a night of rare enjoyment.

The floral display was superb. A vase of Aristocrat, Lady Bountiful and Enchantress grown by William Reid could not be excelled. Max Schneider staged some grand Purity, narcissi and hyacinths. Peter Duff was in evidence with splendid stock of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora and W. A. Manda showed his Asparagus elongatus and a pink seedling carnation that he thinks will be heard from. John Hayes exhibited a fine vase of carnations, including the popular new varieties, and Alfred Larson staged a quantity of Princess of Wales violets. All the exhibits received either certificates, commendation or votes of thanks. The supply of luxuries for the inner man was up to the high standard of Jersey banquets and the only dissatisfied Jerseymen are the ones who did not attend.

By the by, Mr. Duckham, since his return from the Rocky Mountains, is bowling an average, so Mr. Totty says, of 250 and still the New York florists have no official club to represent them at the S. A. F. convention.

Down at West Orange the new residence of Joseph A. Manda, orchid expert, approaches completion. Two immense greenhouses are filled with a splendid assortment of orchids and a grand variety of the best of the new carnations, Enchantress especially being well grown here.

Various Notes.

Alex. McConnell's big store in the arcade, Fifth avenue and Forty-seventh street, is an epitome of spring, even during the zero weather, from his own greenhouses at New Rochelle, including forsythia and other shrubs in full bloom and perfect condition, with splendid specimens of azaleas, palms, etc.

Herman Warendorff's store, Fifty-ninth street and Madison avenue, was deluged with water February 10, a fire in the building's upper story causing considerable damage. Notwithstanding, business was announced at night to be going on as usual.

A second inquiry at the Rosery, on Thirty-fourth street, discloses the interesting fact that the actual number of orchids used in the Vanderbilt wedding decoration was 7,000, of which about 3,000 came from Twenty-eighth street and about 4,000 from a private establishment.

At Little Silver, James Dean, the rose grower, has a fine modern plant of 50,000 square feet where some 25,000 Brides and Maids do duty, Traendly & Schenck handling the entire output of the range.

The Lenox Horticultural Society will hold its annual dinner Saturday evening, February 15.

Some retail florists believe in branches, and have them; others think well of concentration. Thomas Young, Jr., has decided the latter plan is the better, and is now located at 500 Fifth avenue, corner of Forty-second street.

Millang Bros. have leased the store at 41 Twenty-eighth street, formerly occupied by Mr. Young, where Charles and August Millang will conduct a strictly wholesale cut flower business.

The Canal street market will be revived this spring and the usual canvas protection provided. Possibly the wholesale plant association may decide, after May 1, to make its headquarters at this locality, with a view to a larger center than the present headquarters on West Twenty-seventh street this fall.

John Young, the popular secretary of the New York Florists' Club, had the misfortune to break his left arm February 9, the result of a fall on the icy pavement. Fortunately his writing arm is uninjured and a few weeks will end his inconveniences.

James McManus finds the shipping demand for orchids fully up to the season's expectations, though values are far below normal and the supply indicates an extensive addition to the orchid growers of this vicinity. Fortunately the orchids' popularity is no longer confined to the largest cities and no swell wedding in a country village around here is complete without them.

A good many of the fraternity, especially in the wholesale section, are ill with grippe or severe colds and a vote on New York as a winter resort now would be lost by a large majority.

MERGER AT GRAND RAPIDS.

F. M. Strong, E. E. Taylor, Frank Cook and S. J. Perry have consolidated their greenhouse interests under a corporate title of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co. Individually they control quite an expanse of greenhouses south of Grand Rapids, Mich., in which they have been large producers of lettuce and other vegetables. The merger is for the purpose of reducing the cost and that the industry may be carried on to better advantage, especially as to the handling of the output. It is intended the work shall be carried on upon a more extensive scale and the program calls for additional greenhouses. To provide for these $165,000 of preferred stock bearing eight per cent cumulative dividends is being marketed.

A WASH FOR GRAPE VINES.

Please let me know what the best wash is for grape vines. I want something in liquid form, which I can wash over the whole vine without injuring the buds. Please write a little about grape forcing.

J. R. D.

Numerous washes are employed for this purpose, with more or less success, but it is hard to find a wash that will thoroughly clean your vines with one application, especially if they are infested with mealy bug, which is the most common and most persistent pest to which they are subject. The old English preparation, Gishart's Compound, is often employed with good results where the insects are not very numerous. Directions for use are given on the package.

Where the vines are badly infested, however, something stronger is necessary to insure any degree of success in eradicating the pest. The most effective preparation that we have tried for badly infested vines is made by taking one pail, ordinary size, of fresh lime, slaking it with water and, after it has cooled somewhat, adding two pounds of sulphur and one-half pound of nux vomica. The whole is thoroughly mixed and sufficient water added to make about two pailfuls of the mixture, of the consistency of paint, so that it can be readily applied with a paint brush. The addition of a handful of lampblack will help to darken the mixture and relieve the whitewashed look which the vines would otherwise have. Besides, if any insects are left they can more readily be seen on the dark surface than they would be if the surface were left white. This mixture can be painted over the buds without injury, and we find it advantageous to give the vines two coats, as, no matter how carefully the application may be made, there are usually some little spots left after the first application. These can be readily seen after the material has dried on the vines, and running over the second time makes sure that every part is covered. It is hardly possible to eradicate the pest in one season, but we have seen badly infested houses entirely free after this mixture had been used for two seasons in succession, when the work was thoroughly done and the woodwork of the house either washed or painted, so that none would be left lurking around in the crevices. To make sure, it is also necessary to remove about two inches of the surface soil from the floor of the house and replace with fresh material.

I will write an article on grape forcing in the near future. WM. SCOTT.

FORCING CHICORY.

Chicory is of very easy culture. Seed sown in spring will produce strong roots for forcing the succeeding winter. In forcing it we use a dark, warm cellar. Anyone desiring to force it, who has not a cellar from which light can be excluded, should pack the roots in boxes of sand and earth and invert a box over the one containing the roots. In a warm, dark cellar, the roots can be planted in earth on the floor or on a raised bench. After cutting the first crop the roots are usually thrown away and more housed. A second crop of smaller shoots will be produced if the roots are left in. There is a very fair call for chicory in winter, and all the high class fruit and vegetable firms carry it. W.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

Wm. F. Dreer, of Philadelphia, passed through Chicago February 9, en route to Santa Barbara, Cal.

Some of the mail order houses that put Red Wethersfield onion at $1.35 in their catalogues are sorry for it now.

Sweet corn is being offered freely at present and the offers include most of the standard and supposedly very scarce varieties.

At several points the shortage of some of the standard varieties of lettuce is causing more anxiety than the scarcity of onion seed.

The seedsmen who do a retail or catalogue business express themselves as fairly well satisfied with all stocks save late varieties of sweet corn.

The Lohrman Seed Co., of Detroit, Mich., has completed its plans for a new store, to cost $4,000. Building operations will begin at once.

Market gardeners, it is reported, are buying seeds more freely than usual this season. This is a good sign; it indicates prosperity for the seedsmen.

The A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, which does a large business in cut flowers and florists' supplies, is figuring on handling special strains of florists' flower seeds next season.

The season in the seed trade usually is counted as really opening February 10. This year the early catalogues brought some extra business in the first part of January, but the rush now will soon be on in earnest.

Seed of the Holland cabbage is said to be quite scarce. It has been reported that the Racine and other Wisconsin cabbage growers will cut their acreage of Holland cabbage the coming season, owing to the scarcity of seed. This report is, however, thought to be premature, as there is likely to be seed enough to go around.

Red clover seed at $21 per hundred pounds makes the farmer think the seedsmen are robbers. When he sees it offered at $14.50 to $16.50 in the catalogues and is asked $19 to $21, he cannot understand what sort of a proposition he is up against, but when he has some seed to sell his brain works easier and he rides smoothly on the rise of the market.

At recent trade sales in London large quantities of Japanese lily bulbs were offered at auction. It was only in a few instances that prices were run up high. Though there was a lively competition among some of the buyers of large quantities, it was evident that the auctioneers were in the hands of the buyers, and many lots were sold at low prices. Those who bought for retail trade ran the prices up for the extra large bulbs. It is easy to estimate the size of bulbs, by the numbers there are in the cases, and in almost all instances the fewer bulbs there were in a case the higher the prices went. Lilium auratum was in demand.

The demand for seed sweet corn is steady, and the supply in most cases just enough to keep things interesting.

Kentia seeds in the London horticultural auction rooms recently have sold in quantity as low as $1.44 per thousand seeds.

The California seed travelers report bookings of fairly good business, even though their prices are uniformly high and, in the opinion of the purchasing end of the trade, altogether out of line.

The fourth annual convention of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association was held at Ottawa February 4 and 5. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, James W. Robertson, MacDonald College, St. Anne, Que.; secretary-treasurer, L. H. Newman, Ottawa.

John C. Leonard.
(In charge of Pea and Bean growing branch for the Leonard Seed Co.)

Some of the European horticultural papers are printing letters from American correspondents that greatly exaggerate the seed shortages in this country and tend to convey the idea that it is not at all a question of price, but of supply at any price, with the seed trade in this country. Except for a very limited number of items, the facts justify no such statements.

Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, have a new strain of Lilium longiflorum giganteum which they will introduce to the trade under the name of Wardarai, the name Arai being that of the grower of the bulbs in Japan.

J. J. Grullemans & Sons, well-known Holland bulb growers, say: "We never recommend double daffodils for earliest forcing. Henry Irving and obvallaris, the latter especially, if imported from Guernsey, may be looked upon as the earliest of all—although we must admit that French grown Trumpet Major are still better for very early forcing. It is not, however, advisable when trying to place our goods, to recommend French grown bulbs."

THE CANNERS' CONVENTION.

The seed trade was well represented at the annual convention of the canners, held at Cincinnati, February 3 to 8. The firms that had from one to three or four men each on the ground were:

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.
Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.

W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich.
N. B. Keeney & Son, Le Roy, N. Y.
J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati.
J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati.

The headquarters was the Sinton hotel, the exhibits of machinery and supplies, including seeds, being in the south wing of Music hall, a large building occupying almost an entire square. The machinery display, as usual, was large and of much interest, not only to those interested in purchasing, but the general public. The seedsmen were much in evidence, a number of firms having nice displays. Almost the first thing that caught one's eye as he entered the door was the brilliantly lighted booth of Leonard Seed Co., in charge of John C. Leonard. The booth was tastefully done in red, with a crape paper roof in pea green. The samples were exhibited on shelves around three sides of the booth, in dark green boxes, the shelves being trimmed in crape paper of the same shade. The samples shown were peas and beans of many varieties, as well as canners' varieties of corn, tomato and cucumber. The red walls were almost completely covered with green pea vines of 1908 crop, shipped in from Florida specially for this display. The vines represented the main varieties used by canners and were an optical demonstration of the purity of the seed pea display on the shelves beneath. The green vines and pods of the Leonard's Potlatch attracted much attention and comment from the canners and other seedsmen. The seed corn was displayed on the ear on a table in the center of the booth.

Among other seed houses which had booths were Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., which had its usual attractive display of samples of peas, etc. The Everett B. Clark Co. had a well arranged booth, showing peas and corn, as did S. D. Woodruff & Sons. Rogers Bros. exhibited for the first time at any of these conventions, showing samples of the main canners' varieties. Hogg & Lytle also were new exhibitors, having a tasteful booth and displaying canners' varieties of peas in bushel bags. Livingston Seed Co. showed its line of canners' seed specialties. D. M. Ferry & Co. had a desk, but no display of samples this year. It is the rule that those who wish to sell at these conventions must be members of the Machinery and Supply Association, as it is called. Not a great deal of business was booked by the seedsmen, according to reports, but the friendly feeling that exists between the canning and seed trades was again demonstrated, and much business is expected to follow.

One subject which occupied much attention in the convention was that of an equable contract which shall protect the interests of both buyer and seller. The canners have the same troubles the seed trade does over pro rata deliveries on contracts. When a reputable business man contracts to furnish a certain quantity of a certain commodity, his business ethics make him desirous of performing his contract to the letter. Yet, in this matter of canned goods, the packer contends, with apparently sound logic, that he cannot be expected to pack more than the weather, the crop conditions and similar circumstances will permit. Wherefore he has become accustomed to frankly state the case to the buyer and then deliver whatever he reasonably and conveniently can.

This is, of course, when the obstacles are purely of the natural sort. But it

TWO NEW VARIETIES FOR 1908.

Vick's Imperial Sunrise

A novelty of extraordinary merit. Seedling from Vick's Daybreak, but distinct in form of flower, each petal being perfectly quilled. Color, delicate pink. Plant a robust grower, upright branches, each crowned with magnificent double flowers, three to five inches in diameter. Type securely fixed. Sure to be a winner. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each.

Vick's Early Branching

Developed from Vick's Late Branching. Flowers of this new variety can be placed on the market ten days ahead of Late Branching sorts. Plants have few branches, which are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of large, perfectly double flowers. Long stems. Two colors, White and Rose. Packet, 25c; two packets or more, 20c each. For prices in quantity see our "Aster Book for Florists."

is the easiest thing imaginable, on the part of both buyer and seller, to find some plausible excuse to crawl out of unfortunate bargains. If goods bought at one price in the spring are worth twenty per cent more in the fall when the time for delivery arrives, the packer is prone to desire to hold what stock he has for spot sales and slide out of his obligation to deliver by this or that excuse. When the conditions have changed so as to make the price lower at time of delivery than when the orders were sold, the jobber is prone to look for a similar loophole. Of course, with business men of fine grain, an agreement is an agreement and flimsy excuse is not tolerated. Unfortunately, the business world is not made up of strong men, or men of fine sensibilities. At least, the canners admit it, if the seedsmen will not.

The National Association of Wholesale Grocers suggested a form of contract which would hold both sides down to at least seventy-five per cent deliveries and make the offending party responsible to the other for the shortage, but this proposition has its manifest weaknesses and the committee to which the matter of a uniform contract was referred was unable to offer a proposition which would accomplish the desired ends.

The 1909 meeting of the canning interests will be held at Chicago.

ONION SETS.

The onion-set situation seems to satisfy nearly every one. It could not be better from the standpoint of the grower who is fortunate enough to have a few hundred bushels yet to sell. To the dealer who purchased awhile ago at reasonable figures, it looks just as good. The brokers at the different onion-set centers, who at this time of the year are usually full of business and have numerous large lots to offer, may not be so well satisfied, inasmuch as any trading that they engineer must be done at the full market price, the stock disposed of coming from the regular sources of supply. There is enough scarcity to insure a steady market and an increasing price from now on. The Louisville supply is said to be practically exhausted. At other important points the available quantity of sets is many thousand bushels less than in February, 1907. Add to this the fact that all early shipments were made on a pro rata basis, which

A SIOUX CITY CONTROVERSY.

Upon the allegation that the Sioux City Bird and Seed Store, of which L. G. Wertz is the proprietor, has been infringing upon its trade name, the Sioux City Seed and Nursery Co. at Sioux City, Ia., January 31 secured from Judge Hutchinson a temporary writ of injunction restraining Wertz from using his business title. The plaintiff also demands damages in the sum of $1,000.

The Sioux City Seed and Nursery Co. claims that Wertz has unlawfully and fraudulently used its trade name in a manner calculated to injure and interfere with its business. The company avers that its line is known as "Sioux City seeds" and as such has gained a wide reputation; that through the alleged similarity of names on several occasions customers of the plaintiff have been misled, and a loss of trade has resulted. It is stated that Wertz has been using the name for a long time; that he has had no seed business of importance, and that since he adopted the name he has made no efforts to establish the same.

ONION SEED.

In commenting on the letter of Charles P. Braslan, which recently appeared in the Review, in which Mr. Braslan disclaimed for the California growers any object in growing onions in Colorado other than securing a stock of onion bulbs after the season for planting seed in California had passed, W. Van Fleet, in the Rural New-Yorker, says:

"In accepting this assurance we venture to predict benefit from a continuance of the plan of growing onion bulbs in climates where the seasonal changes are sufficiently well marked, even if the actual commercial seeds are afterwards grown in the sunlit valleys of California, where absence of rain and low atmospheric humidity favor easy harvest and abundant crops. ties most in demand were developed in comparatively high latitudes in Europe and America, where the short summer is followed by a long, cold, resting season, thus inducing the plant to form a capacious and shapely bulb for the storage of the energy needed to start effective growth during the cool weather of the following spring. Deprive the onion plant of its accustomed climatic changes, and deterioration, from the gardener's view, soon becomes apparent, and will naturally progress at an increasing rate. The large, watery onions of the Prize-taker or Mediterranean group were bred in a milder climate, where the seasonal changes are less sharply defined. Their resting season is short, greatly lessening their keeping quality. The best seeds of the Mediterranean varieties are now grown in Teneriffe, off the coast of Africa, and they may be expected to succeed as well under California conditions."

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club, held Monday, February 10, brought out an attendance of sixteen members. The coming convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association was the one topic discussed and all hoped for a record-breaking attendance. The various committees which have charge of the flower show and trade exhibit are working hard to make this a successful exhibition, and from the list of exhibits promised, they will not be disappointed. This will be a good opportunity for western florists to see the novelties and prize-winners of the Washington carnation show, as they will practically all be here, in addition to novelties in roses and other stock. Boiler and florists' supply men will be large exhibitors at this show, as a dozen or more have reserved space in the hall.

Springfield is easily reached by all railroads and inter-urban lines and this should help to bring out a good crowd. The local club will give a banquet to the visitors Tuesday evening, February 18, at 9 o'clock, at the St. Nicholas hotel. Prominent men of this and neighboring states are on the program to respond to toasts and the club will do its best to give everyone an enjoyable evening.

State Association Program.

The program for the business session of the association, Tuesday, February 18, is as follows:

Introductory Remarks, by Antrim C. Brown, President Springfield Florists' Club.
Address of Welcome, Hon. Roy R. Reece, Mayor of Springfield.
Response, Phil J. Foley, Chicago.
President's Address, Albert T. Hey, Springfield.
Report of secretary, A. C. Beal, Urbana.
Report of treasurer, G. A. Kuhl, Pekin.
Address, by E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.
Report of Secretary Advisory Committee Illinois State Florists' Experiment Station, W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park.
Address, "Floricultural Interests at the University of Illinois," E. Davenport, Dean Illinois State University.

The program for the second session, Wednesday morning, is as follows:

"Summer Bedding," by Prof. H. C. Irish, Missouri Botanical Gardens, St. Louis, Mo.
"Our Experiment Stations and What We Have Done," Prof. A. C. Beal, University of Illinois.
Unfinished Business.
New Business.
Election of Officers.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

State of Trade.

Business is going quietly, with plenty of stock to go around. In fact, every day finds stock left over, especially bulbous stuff, which has not moved nearly so well or commanded the prices of other years. Roses move fairly well at $8, $10 and $12 per hundred for the best, but with cheaper grades most in demand. Violets fetch 60 cents. Carnations go at from $2.50 to $4 for good stuff, the poorer grades of course going for less, but, now the days are lengthening, we hope stock will improve and business move along a little faster.

The Trade Organizes.

The Rochester florists met February 3 and adopted a new scale of prices for bedding stock and also formed an organization to be known as the Commercial Florists' Association of Rochester. The officers elected were: President, Fred H. Vick; vice-president, F. J. Keller; secretary-treasurer, George B. Hart. The meeting was well attended and all seemed enthusiastic as to the future of the association. At the next meeting it is proposed to have on exhibition some of the new carnations, which will be discussed as to their merits and which will no doubt lead to some new things being seen here in that line. H. B. S.

PACIFIC COAST.

Seattle, Wash.—The Alki Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $1,800. The incorporators are H. R. Anderson, J. R. Justice and E. O. Larson.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been a fair amount of business during the last week, which has been one of the stormiest up to this time. It has rained almost continuously for the last two weeks and some people are beginning to wonder when it will stop.

The excess of dark weather has kept the output of flowers by the growers down to a great extent, for had we an excess of bright sunshine the retailers would have been swamped with stock. This may sound strange for the middle of winter, but when it is taken into consideration that the thermometer has not been lower than 40 degrees outside at any time during the month of January, with the exception of three nights, it is easy to see that inside or outside stock has received little or no check and we have had growing weather practically all winter. The continued dark weather we are having at this time, which, although not cold, has the effect of shortening the supply, is the first set-back this season.

The supply of bulbous stock is heavy at present. The early varieties of yellow daffodils net the growers about 75 cents per hundred, and 50 cents is paid for the white narcissi. Violets are a drug at 75 cents per dozen bunches. Fruit blossoms have made their appearance, but, owing to the continued rainy weather, are not very good. Acacia mollissima, Pyrus Japonica, pussy willow branches, blue gum flowers and branches and wild currant are being used very extensively at this time for cheap decorations, and their lasting qualities make them much sought for by shopkeepers who make an effort to keep up window displays.

Various Notes.

H. Dehm, the well-known nurseryman and landscape gardener of Eureka, Cal., is in town on a short visit. Mr. Dehm is looking up various lines of stock in this neighborhood and reports everything satisfactory up in his section of the country.

August Lacroix, one of San Francisco's pioneer nurserymen, against whom a charge of incompetency to handle his property was brought by his wife, has been declared sane by the superior court. Mr. Lacroix for many years has been proprietor of the Presidio Nurseries.

The death of Wm. J. Landers, one of the owners of the California Nursery Co., of Niles, Cal., is reported in this week's obituary column. G.

THE MILD CALIFORNIA WINTER.

The mild, open winter through which we are just passing, has been unusual for its practically having caused no setback to stock where a few weeks, at least, of freezing weather are usually expected. Outside roses of such varieties as Duchess de Brabant, Safrano and Papa Gontier are at this writing in full bloom and quantities of the flowers are being sold by the street hucksters. On the inside stock the effect has also been marked, and roses are now fully as much advanced as they usually are April 1. The greenhouse men have had to do but little firing this season, and were it not for the absence of sunshine, the pickings would be phenomenal. All of this speaks for a heavy cutting in the near future. The effect on inside carnations has been practically the same. At no time since the changing of the stock last fall has there been any scarcity of stock, and the retailers have had no trouble whatever to keep their vases filled with anything called for.

This is quite the reverse of what we have usually witnessed at this season, and while in one way it benefited the retailers, on the other hand it has kept the prices down a shade lower than heretofore. Low prices usually do not bespeak successful times, nor does a plenitude of stock make it easier to dispose of. The condition that the trade is in at the present time is, of course, only a reflex from other industrial conditions, and the fact that it has been possible to procure flowers at a fair price may be to the benefit of both the growers and the retailers under the circumstances.

From the standpoint of the plantsmen the season thus far, owing to the excess of moisture, has not been up to expectations. It must be borne in mind that when there is an excess of moisture and no cold weather, deciduous stock takes but a short resting spell and, before we know it, leaves and blossoms begin to proclaim that spring has arrived. As an example, the writer cut quantities of almond blossoms, all in full bloom, during the third week in January. This is not an isolated instance, but can be used as a criterion for everything else in the neighborhood of San Francisco.

Heliotropes, fuchsias and geraniums are in full bloom all over town, and achyranthes, salvias and lobelias look almost as bright as they have at any time since last fall.

There are only two features to be feared in the category of the plant grower, and these are continued spring rains until it is practically too late to transplant and replant, and sudden and complete stoppage of rain, followed by dry winds, which in a few days dry up the surface of the ground completely, start the buds to expand and the leaves to grow, and in a jiffy the season is over until the following winter. G.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Henry J. Osterhoudt, gardener to W. P. Clyde, of New Hamburg, N. Y. showed me, among many choice things, a fine strain of Primula obconica gigantea. Some blooms measured two inches and an eighth across. It is of a beautiful rose tint, and has large trusses borne on long stems. He says Holmes' Supreme is one of the finest tomatoes yet introduced, for forcing. Among a choice, but not large, collection of orchids I noticed some fine pieces of Cypripedium Leeanum. The new mignonette, Majesty, is well grown; spikes measuring two feet often occur. In carnations, Winsor does well in this heavy soil. White Perfection is considered superior to White Enchantress, both with regard to form and floriferousness. All stock seems to be in excellent condition. A splendid water supply is obtained from an artesian well 268 feet deep. Mr. Osterhoudt installed a full nest of Heller's seed drawers, in which to keep the seed needed from time to time to sow on this big estate.

David Harrison, gardener to G. H. Hoyt, of Staatsburg, N. Y., says he had big success in growing the new cosmos, Lady Lenox, last season, by taking the plants, which were grown in 6-inch pots, and plunging them outside, pinching the plants well back. It bloomed freely and could be cut in great bunches with stems four feet long. He will grow some in 8-inch pots and feed the plants, feeling assured it will pay. This method should be generally tried, as this variety will be grown extensively this season and doubtless will prove a failure if sown outside late. It is worthy of careful culture and will prove to be the best of its kind for cutting. Mr. Harrison has a white one which may have come in the seed. He thinks it a worthy companion to the pink and will save the seed.

James Blair, gardener to D. Ogden Mills, at Staatsburg, has a house of Beauties of which he may well be proud. Daily cuts of this accompany Killarney to grace the tables of the city home of Mr. Mills.

J. L. Loose, of Alexandria, Va., is very successful with the Cardinal rose and considers it as profitable to grow in winter as in summer. It is perfectly hardy, having a good constitution. It has fine foliage, well carried up to the bud. It is easily propagated, fragrant and of a pleasing, decided crimson or cardinal color. He has grown it with Richmond and, although he has been very successful with the latter, he will grow Cardinal in its place. He is of the opinion that whoever gives it a thorough trial will find it a profitable rose. In carnations 40,000 are struck, half being planted inside, the balance left to flower in the field. Owing to late frosts, this can be done to advantage. I noted White Perfection and Lieut. Peary planted in the same bench. The former was away ahead in every respect. W.

MINAVILLE, N. Y.—R. S. Ernest has just completed a house which has 2,500 square feet of roof surface. This makes his total glass area about 10,000 square feet, all of which is devoted to the growing of curly lettuce.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—William Dittmann and his son started February 6 on an extended trip through Florida and Cuba, and they have recorded the resolution to "catch all the big fish in the lakes."

ALBION, MICH.—M. & S. L. Dysinger opened a branch flower store last December at 312 Main street. They are also planning to add flower and vegetable seeds to their stock in the near future. Last year's business was the best they have ever had—one-third better than that of the year before.

OXFORD, O.—The cold weather, accompanied by the strong wind, Saturday night, February 1, caused considerable loss at the greenhouses operated by Herman Schmidt and Bert Cramer. Although the boilers were fired to their full capacity, it was impossible to keep some of the houses above the freezing point. About 7,800 chrysanthemums, which had just been potted, all the carnations in one house and all the sweet peas in another, were frozen.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

PETER YOUNGERS, of Geneva, has been elected treasurer of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society to serve his twenty-second consecutive term.

THE Orroville Nursery Co., of Orroville, Wash., has been incorporated with $1,500 capital stock, by David W. F. Reed, James F. Irving and John R. Fraser.

ABIES CONCOLOR, or white fir, is a hardy tree from the western states. It grows rapidly and attains the specimen stage in a remarkably short time. The needles of this fir are dark green and very effective.

THE Palisades Nurseries, Sparkhill, N. Y., have been incorporated with $15,000 authorized capital stock. The directors named are Angus McGillivary and John M. Stevens, of Palisades, and James Cochran, of New York city.

THE Grand View Nursery and Orchard Co., of Des Moines, Ia, will erect a new office building, 24x50 feet, at the packing grounds. The mail order business to date this season is reported to be better than it was in the same period last season.

NURSERYMEN, who have relied upon their banks for assistance to keep large forces of agents on the road during the winter, were cramped during the last three months, but now find money easier; however, many of the nurseries that sell through agents say that a large part of the business, lost by whatever reason, will not be regained this season.

THE officers of the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association, elected at the recent convention at Nashville, are: President, Frank McCord, of Nashville; vice-president for West Tennessee, H. A. Byrns, of Silvia; vice-president for Middle Tennessee, E. W. Chattin, of Winchester; vice-president for East Tennessee, E. S. Dougherty, of Knoxville; secretary-treasurer, G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville.

REAPPRAISEMENTS.

The following reappraisements of nursery stock imported through the port of New York were announced February 8:

APPLE STOCKS.—From Chas. Detriche, Sr., Angers; exported Dec. 28, 1907; entered at New York. File No. 47801. Invoice No. 11468. Findings of Hay, G. A.: Apple stocks, 1 yr. seedling and 1 yr. tree, 7-12; entered at 21.50, advanced to 22.50 francs per 1000. Add case.

NURSERY STOCK.—From Pierre Sebire & Son, Ussy, exported Dec. 23, 1907; entered at New York. File No. 47870. Invoice No. 10143. Findings of Hay, G. ASTILBE DAVIDII.

A visit to Little Silver, N. J., last week found John T. Lovett and his office force over head and ears in the completion of a new catalogue. Mr. Lovett has some 45,000 square feet of glass devoted exclusively to the cultivation of herbaceous stock, of which he has over 1,000 varieties. Phlox, hollyhocks, peonies and iris are his specialties. The Astilbe Davidii is in his opinion the best novelty for florists in his entire collection. Its long, graceful pink panicles will make it especially valuable for cutting. It remains in flower for many weeks and is absolutely hardy. To give an idea of the magnitude to which the business of supplying hardy ornamental nursery stock has grown, over 200 acres at this place are devoted to this class of stock. For one item, Mr. Lovett carries a quarter of a million plants of California privet. In addition to all this, there is a fruit farm where 8,000 peaches are in bearing, 2,500 apples, 2,000 cherry trees and over twenty acres of pears. Add to this the 3,000 hens, all of one variety, the White Leghorn, and you have some conception of the business enterprise of this old-time nurseryman of over thirty years' experience.

The outlook for the nursery business this spring is most encouraging. One single order for an extensive planting in April amounts to over $20,000.

Close to the station Mr. Lovett has purchased ten acres of land, whereon he

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

Strong Plants on own roots, from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per doz.; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $1125.00; 10,000 for $2125.00.

NAME OF HEDGE PLANT.

We are sending you by this mail, under separate wrapper, a cutting from a hedge plant, which we discovered in a row of California privet. This plant is evergreen and grows as rankly as the privet. We shall greatly appreciate it if you will advise us of the botanical name of this plant. G. S.

The plant is Euonymus radicans, one of the best of evergreens for hedges, also splendid as a climber.

PLANTING TREES AND SHRUBS.

Trees and shrubs, when planted judiciously either in groups or borders or in both, constitute the most effective means of a permanent beautifying of grounds, but if at first the work is not done with taste and with a thorough knowledge of what the ultimate effect will be, the results will not only be unsatisfactory as regards the planting itself, but the grounds will, until the trouble is remedied, be a constant reminder of inefficiency and a continued regret and eyesore. It is, then, surely of the greatest possible importance that the work should be done properly when undertaken.

The number of trees and shrubs planted should always be in fair proportion to the extent of the grounds to be planted. It is quite common to see very small places overplanted, which is perhaps to be avoided fully as much as the extreme in the other direction. No matter how beautiful or interesting large numbers of trees and shrubs may be as objects in themselves, it is a mistake to plant them in such numbers that every vista is curtailed or closed. Trees or shrubs should not be planted aimlessly all over the grounds, because, if they are, the result will be a patchy appearance.

In planting, attention should be directed to the aid the trees and shrubs planted will give to the landscape, making it appear more favorable, instead of contracting its effects. M.

"MAY"

REASONS

Why You Should Plant MAY

May is a strictly commercial variety. Business from beginning to end.

It comes into bloom early and continues uninterruptedly until the end of the season.

It is freer than any other light pink we know of.

The size of the bloom is just what you want in quantity, 2½ to 3½ inches.

The color is deeper and brighter and more even than Enchantress and holds better.

The form is well shown in illustration.

It is not so crowded in the center as Enchantress, therefore opens quicker.

The calyx never splits and stem is always strong.

The plant grows strong and upright and about as tall as Lady Bountiful.

Makes nice plants in the field and transplants easily.

We invite you to come and see our stock of it any time; you will like its habit.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

Winsor and White Enchantress

Strong Rooted Cuttings, Now Ready for Delivery

WINSOR has proved to be the finest carnation in the light pink class. We sold a large quantity of it last year, but there will be a much larger sale for it this year. At the English Carnation Show held in December, it was the winner in the light pink class. It is doing well everywhere, and will supplant everything in that color.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS will occupy the same position among white carnations that Enchantress does among flesh pinks. It has all the good qualities of the common Enchantress—long stem, earliness, large size, freedom, etc. In our opinion, it is by far the best white carnation ever introduced.

We have a splendid stock of both Winsor and White Enchantress ready for immediate delivery, and will guarantee perfect satisfaction with the cuttings supplied. Do not wait, because the demand for these varieties is bound to be enormous. Order early, while we can promise immediate delivery, and secure gilt-edged stock. We have a large stock of both of these varieties, and all our cuttings are heel cuttings, taken from flowering stems. On account of the quantity that we are growing, we are not obliged to over-propagate, and our stock is in the most perfect and healthy condition.

Strong rooted cuttings from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
Extra strong transplanted cuttings from soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Articles of incorporation of the Minge Floral Co. were filed February 6, with authority to issue $20,000 of capital stock, of which amount the incorporators, Miss Maria Minge, Windham Lyon and W. M. Bailey, all of Mobile, have subscribed and paid in for 8,300 shares of a par value of $8,300. The officers of the company are: President, Maria Minge; secretary and treasurer, Windham Lyon; manager, W. M. Bailey. The new company has purchased twenty acres of land and has also contracted for 25,000 roses to be grown on for them, to be planted in the first range of houses, which will consist of ten houses 200 feet long. Orders are in at the factory for a battery of sixty horse-power boilers. The plant will be modern in every respect.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The last week showed no improvement in the cut flower market. Trade has been dull, even funeral work having fallen off. A good supply of carnations is now coming in; they retail at 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen. Roses bring $2 per dozen. There is a fair demand for violets; they sell at $1 per hundred retail. Bulbous stuff is plentiful; 60 cents per dozen retail is the price asked. Sweet peas bring $1.50 per hundred retail. Freesias are still coming into the market. These are fine for funeral work.

Various Notes.

S. S. Peckham's carnations are looking fine. He is busy shipping rooted cuttings.

The cold wave has struck us, and as a consequence the coal pile is rapidly decreasing, but growers cannot complain, as we have had fine growing weather up to now.

R. H. Woodhouse will have a big lot of geraniums for the spring trade. His Easter lilies are looking fine and healthy.

Current Comment.

During the last week we have been having our first real taste of winter. The temperature has been around the zero mark, with plenty of ice and snow. In spite of it all, trade has held up fairly well. All kinds of bulb stock are arriving in quantities and of good quality.

At the last monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association several new members were enrolled in anticipation of the carnation convention next year. It is hoped that the society will have many new members added to it this year. All those making their living at the business ought to belong to either their state or national society.

The members of the State Florists' Association will visit the Richmond florists February 19. A large party is desired and a good time is assured, as anybody knows who has ever been at Richmond.

George Wiegand is making an extensive trip through the west and southwest, on his way to Los Angeles. He expects to be away six or eight weeks. In the meantime Homer is "it."

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

That good, old-fashioned winter weather you hear our grandfathers talk about has been holding the fort in Washington ever since the Carnation Society left us. It has shortened up the cut considerably, but there is enough stock to go around. Violets and orchids have been scarce. White and lavender lilac is plentiful, especially the white.

George Cooke reports a busy week. Z. D. Blackistone has been running a sale of cheap baskets of cut flowers and carnations at 50 cents a dozen, and with funeral work, this has kept him busy. George Shaffer reports business good. We found John Robinson with more orders than flowers. Mr. Pfister has some attractive windows.

J. H. Small & Sons last week had the largest individual order ever booked by the firm in Washington. It was for the Townsend ball. Over 1,000 cattleyas, with hundreds of sprays of white lilac, were used on the tables. The whole house was decorated with azaleas, lilac, Japanese cherries, and flowering almond plants.

The Gude Bros. Co. has had a busy week, with dinners and luncheons and a heavy demand for funeral work.

W. W. Kimmell reports a decided improvement in his business.

Joseph Harty, who was located in the Ebbitt House, sold all his stock and fixtures at auction last week.

The Florists' Club had an interesting meeting February 4. Officers for the coming year were nominated. The candidates for president are Z. D. Blackistone and F. H. Kramer. O. O.

HOOPESTON, ILL.

A. Peterson, who has been in business here for about seven years, and has at present about 30,000 square feet of glass, has entered into partnership with another experienced florist, S. E. Lawrence, of Arrowsmith, Ill. The new firm will be known as Peterson & Lawrence, and will engage in business here on a greatly enlarged scale. Mr. Peterson owns ten acres of land just outside of the city limits, and on this tract of ground the firm will immediately erect three houses, each 27x250, to be used exclusively for carnations. Two more houses, for roses, will be built in the near future. The office and store will remain at Mr. Peterson's present address.

NEW ROSE

My Maryland

Best up-to-date commercial rose. Read what others have to say about it.

Among the many new roses of the year there is none which has impressed us more as being worthy of a thorough trial. It has been exhibited only as 294, being a seedling raised by John Cook, of Baltimore. A beautiful rose with an exquisite fragrance. In color it may be described as a soft salmon pink, which brightens up beautifully as the bud opens. We are intending to plant this rose in quantity.

A. N. PIERSON, Cromwell, Conn.

In answer to your inquiry what we think of your new rose, My Maryland, we would say that after seeing others we still believe that you have the best new rose of modern times.

ALBERT LIES, Niles Center, Ill.

GALESBURG, ILL.

I. L. Pillsbury has applied for a patent on a method of mending carnation calyxes, which he has employed for some time. He calls it Pillsbury's Carnation Staple, which accurately describes it. It is a staple of fine green wire, the split calyx being gathered together, making the parts lap a trifle, when the staple is set with one leg on each side of the split and pushed home. The shape of the staple causes it to remain in its place when pushed to the head.

ORANGE, N. J.

The Floricultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held February 7 and took the form of a reception by the new president, Malcolm MacRorie, of members and friends. Among those present, prominent in the trade, were C. McTaggert, of Thorburn's; Thomas Grey, of Boston; J. B. Kidd, seed appraiser of the port of New York; William Duckham, Arthur Herrington, C. H. Totty, J. Austin Shaw, W. A. Manda and the Rickards brothers, with representatives from Madison and Tarrytown. Musical and dramatic recitations, addresses and sleight-of-hand tricks, with the usual refreshments, detained the gathering until a late hour.

The presentation of four silver cups won in the monthly competitive shows during the last year was made, with appropriate remarks by George Smith.

Letters from H. Weber, John E. Haines, Chicago Carnation Co. and F. R. Pierson, in connection with the forthcoming carnation night in March, were read.

Floral decorations from neighboring estates filled the tables. J. B. D.

AUGUSTA, GA.

One of the oldest citizens of Augusta, Ga., died recently; the late James R. Randal, author of "Maryland! My Maryland!" For the funeral the Southern Confederate Memorial Association, with headquarters at New Orleans, telegraphed an order to Balk's Nursery for an appropriate offering. Henry W. T. Balk made a pillow, employing the Confederate colors. The pillow was thirty-six inches wide and edged with bronze galax. The cross upon it was of white carnations and covered with double violets. The red ground was of red carnations and there were thirteen lilies, representing the stars.

I like the Review best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—Ludwig Zimmer, St. Louis, Mo.

BALTIMORE.

State of Business.

This has been a season of ups and downs. Last summer trade in Baltimore was better than it ever had been before at that time of year, and it continued so up to late autumn, when the general upheaval in business conditions shut down the flower buying, the same as everything else. At Christmas a fine business was done, as good as ever before with most retailers, and making a new record for some. Early in January business was fair, but it has run down in the last few weeks and things are quiet now. There is an occasional good decoration handled by the leading stores, and now and then a spurt of funeral work helps out. We have had some unusually cold days, which did not stimulate business.

There has been an abundant supply of stock in all lines except roses. When the weather was favorable to the street salesmen they found supplies more or less at their own prices, either here or in other nearby markets, but in spite of this competition prices are fairly well maintained.

Various Notes.

There has been a steady succession of visitors, many of them making a special trip to Baltimore to see John Cook's new rose, My Maryland, the fame of which has spread far and wide. Practically every visitor has endorsed Mr. Cook's opinion that it is the best thing he has ever sent out. The success which Cardinal has made this season with the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Chicago, has brought Mr. Cook many inquiries for stock of this variety, which he sent out several years ago. Peter Henderson & Co., of New York, will disseminate another of Mr. Cook's new red roses this year, a garden variety.

J. J. Perry says the business of the Baltimore Florists' Exchange is showing a steady yearly increase and that he hopes to develop for Baltimore a shipping trade such as gives stability to the markets in other cities. An increasing number of out-of-town buyers already look to Baltimore for their supplies.

Samuel Feast & Sons say that, up to the middle of January, the business for the last six months was just about the same total as in the same period of the year before and they hope to see things again going at the normal rate before long.

M. Thau is no longer in charge of the Fernery greenhouses. C. M. Ackerman, who is the spokesman for the owners of this concern, says that if it had not been for the financial disturbance last fall they would have opened at least two stores in addition to the one on North Charles street and says it is still planned to do so.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Severely cold weather has prevailed over Buffalo and vicinity for the last week, but fortunately we have also had heavy snows, which helped keep the houses warm. The thermometer registered 12 degrees below zero, and in some of the smaller towns east of here it registered 25 degrees below. As a result, heavy wrapping had to be done. Bulb stock is now a drug on the market and moves very slowly. In fact, all stock is too plentiful, and unless trade improves in other lines besides funeral work, it will be a poor month.

A Bowling Party.

Through the efforts of two or three of the younger florists, a bowling and sleigh ride party was arranged for the evening of February 7. The party was arranged for the benefit of the younger element and was well attended. For some reason the sleigh ride was omitted, but that did not in any way detract from the entertainment of the evening. About four of the members of the original club were in attendance, the rest of the large gathering being new material.

A nice supper was disposed of, after which we had remarks from whoever wished to speak. Mr. Adams acted as chairman and gave his views as to installing new members and starting action in the old club. We also had remarks from several other members. The meeting was a great success and started the spirit which we hope will continue throughout. Several names of applicants were received and a special meeting was called for February 14, to install them. We hope to see a lot of new faces at the meeting.

After the dinner we all adjourned to the bowling alleys and a fine time followed. Mr. Slattery and Mr. Adams were chosen captains for the two sides and, after the smoke cleared away, Slattery was the victor by a small number. Carl Risch and Joe Beau carried off the high honors.

Various Notes.

L. H. Neubeck has been showing some fine lilacs the last two weeks.

Two large balls the last fortnight were the only social events to create any demand for flowers.

Mr. Zirkman and Mr. Knickman were visitors last week. R. A. S.

STARTING CANNAS.

Please let me know how canna bulbs are started, whether exposed to the light or under the benches. Is February the right time to start them for spring stock? R. H. L.

It is rather too early to start your canna roots. Let them remain where they are until the middle of March; then divide them with a heavy, sharp knife, leaving a single eye to a division. Place them on a bench over heating pipes, first laying a coating of moss on the bottom. Lay the roots quite close together; then shake a quantity of sphagnum moss over them, just enough to fill the blank spaces and cover the eyes. Give a soaking of water and give no more except light surface sprinklings until root and growth action starts. A temperature of 60 degrees at night is suitable. They will start in a cooler house, but much more slowly. When the divided plants are rooting nicely, pot into 3-inch or 4-inch pots, according to their size. The moss lifts nicely and there is little danger of breaking the roots. Be careful not to overwater after potting. When the pots are full of active roots, there is little danger of this occurring. C. State of Trade.

A good increase in trade was noticeable during the last week, while the present week began with brisk business and it is expected that the special call for valentine decorations will make the week an excellent one.

From the first part of last week the demand for carnations began to increase. The Youngstown Floral Co. disposed of 7,000 during the week. George Bayer has been devoting his entire time to carnations lately.

There has also been a good run on roses, while the call for violets was greater than ever before last week. The increase in business is encouraging, especially to the new dealers that have opened retail stores in the city.

Various Notes.

Toledo florists are again trying to outdo themselves on window displays, and the valentine window decorations at the local retail stores are beautiful as the result. The decorator at the new retail store of George Heinl began work February 10 and many stopped to admire the display during the day. The decorations are appropriate for Valentine's day and violets are the principal flowers used.

The Schoen Floral Co. also has a number of artistic novelties displayed for the valentine trade. Every retailer in the city has secured a stock of novelties for the occasion, and from the way orders are coming in now the business for Valentine's day will greatly exceed that of last year.

H. F. Breckle, on Sylvania avenue, is having trouble with lettuce and is experimenting with the hope of ascertaining the cause. He believes the heavy frost of the last few weeks is partly responsible for the failure of the crop. Mr. Breckle is growing a good supply of bedding plants.

Joseph Heinl, of Jacksonville, Ill., arrived February 10, to spend several days with his brother, Harry Heinl.

William Feniger, of the Youngstown Floral Co., returned to Toledo February 8, after spending a pleasant week at his home in Cleveland.

George Heinl is having a good run on his early supply of spring flowers.

Greenhouse Heating.

GAS FOR FUEL.

One of your subscribers desires to know whether trials with gas heating have ever been made in the east or anywhere else, and what the results were. I mean, of course, gas employed in place of coal, or any other kind of fuel. I would also like to know whether gas would be injurious to the plants, if the door were left open from the boiler-room into the propagating house, as I am accustomed to do now, with a coal fire.

E. F.

I do not now recall any work which could be called experimentation in the use of gas for greenhouse heating. On the contrary, I know that gas has been used as a substitute for coal in heating greenhouses. For fifteen years, at least, the greenhouses of the West Virginia Experiment Station have been heated by the use of gas as a substitute for coal. It is convenient, reliable and requires no night fireman when equipped with automatic regulators. Unless gas escapes from the pipes into the houses, it can do no injury to the plants. There is less danger of gas escaping into the houses from good gas burners than from a coal fire. In fact, I have used an open gas fire to heat a current of air in a flue which discharged directly into the greenhouse, with no ill effects to the plants. This, of course, means that there was perfect combustion in the burner, which is easily secured if a good mixer is used on the burner. The blue flame of the Bunsen burner is what you should aim to secure in a gas heater. L. C. C.

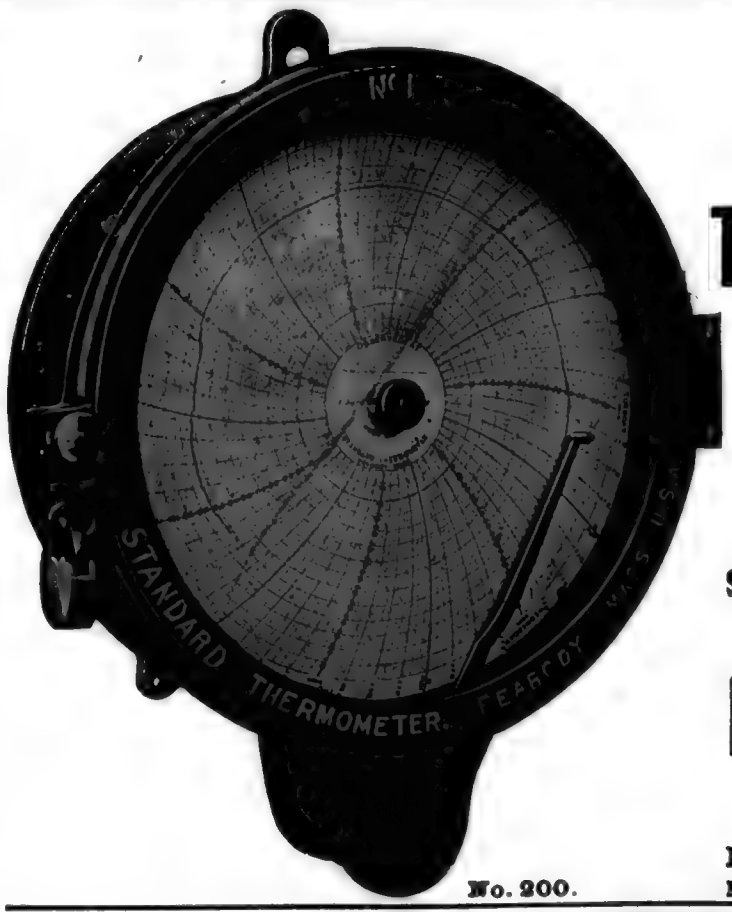
TYPE OF BOILER.

I am in the market for a steam boiler to heat my plant and wish to be economical in fuel. I am at a loss to know what boiler to put in, as there are so many on the market, so I wish some practical person, who knows by experience, would kindly answer the following questions: What size of steam boiler do I need to heat 20,000 square feet of glass exposure, or 3,670 square feet of wall exposure, or 150,000 cubic feet of space? The average temperature required is 60 degrees at zero, or 50 degrees at 20 degrees below zero. Is a cast-iron boiler preferable to a steel boiler for economy of fuel and durability? Is there any advantage in a boiler that has the fire box surrounded by water, as compared with one that has the water only over the fire? Which of the two boilers would be the better, a steel return tubular fire box or a steel horizontal tubular set in brick?

P. M. O.

According to the figures given, a fifty horse-power steam boiler should be sufficient to do the work. The Scotch marine type of boiler is one of the most economical types constructed. The water jacket about the fire box is economical of fuel, but the difference in the first cost and the life of boilers usually throws the choice to the brick set return tube type. For ordinary heating and steam generation this type is very satisfactory. L. C. C.

DIFFERENCE IN RADIATION.



In the REVIEW of January 23, in answer to A. H. D., you say that a boiler of certain dimensions will heat five houses 20x100 if used with hot water, or seven houses of the same size if used with steam. What I want to know is this: Are the two extra houses pure gain, or will A. H. D. be able to burn more coal on the same grate? W. B.

The difference is that it takes more radiation with hot water to accomplish given results than with steam. In other words, the amount of radiation carried in the two cases is practically the same, but with steam the efficiency of the radiation is increased about twenty per cent; hence the difference in the number of houses that can be carried. As it requires more heat units to heat water to 212 degrees than to 180 degrees, it will take more fuel to run the seven houses on a steam basis than the five houses on a hot water basis, but probably not as much as would be indicated by the difference in the amount of work done.

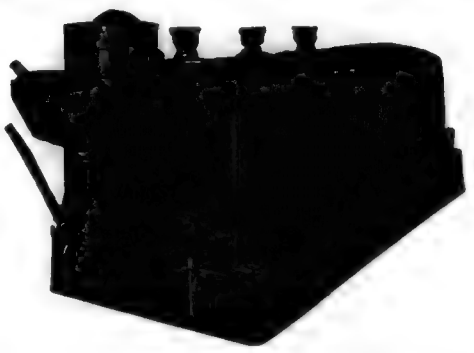
writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, I find that the system of having hot water pipes close up to the glass has considerably extended during the last few years, yet it is by no means a new idea. I think it was at Cannell & Sons' where I first saw pipes up near the glass. These were the ordinary 4-inch pipes, and only a short distance from the bottom of the rafters. Since then I have seen various methods. The 1½-inch or 2-inch gas barrel makes a neat purlin, and, if properly fixed with uprights bedded in cement, gives more support than the ordinary wooden purlins or iron rods. More recently I have seen the ordinary 3-inch hot water pipes used a good distance up the roofs of glasshouses. Where properly arranged the elevated pipes afford a quick flow from the boilers, and all the pipes at the ordinary level may be heated by the return water. It is, however, concerning the advantages derived rather than the actual fixing of the pipes and other details which may easily be ascertained from inspection where the system is in operation, with which we are concerned.

It is well known that the moisture settling on the surface of flowering plants, when we have no sun to dry it off, is a great source of trouble; also, that in the spring when the ground is cold and the sun sheds its warm rays from above, plants make more growth than at any other period. Bottom heat induces root growth, and after roots are plentiful, heat from above will induce stem growth, and encourage flowering.



Taking plants which are grown on stages, the hot water pipes beneath dry the under surface of the foliage and provide a convenient refuge for insect pests, while the moisture rises and condenses on the under side of the glass and rafters, besides which some moisture settles on the flowers and causes damping. The elevated pipes not only give warmth under more natural conditions, but also preserve the woodwork by preventing condensation of moisture. I do not suggest that all the heat should be supplied from above, but I should prevent hot, dry air rising up from under an open stage where flowering plants are grown.

We all recognize the value of bottom heat for popagating from cuttings, and for inducing a start to root growth, and also that some tender plants do not like a cold surface to stand upon. Even fern growers find that it is a great advantage to have the elevated hot water pipes; carnation growers are adopting the system. For flowering pelargoniums in winter a great advantage is gained. In Belgium I found that some houses used for palms had the elevated pipes. In most instances arrangements are made for shutting off the heat from the elevated pipes when the sun is bright. Since fuel has become so dear it is an important matter to make the most of all the heating surface, and much may be gained by keeping the pipes quite clear of the ground and free from all obstructions.

METHOD A GOOD FERTILIZER.

A great many of the florists of Detroit and throughout Michigan and northern Indiana look to the Kenneth Anderson Mfg. Co., at Detroit, for supplies in the line of heating specialties, rubber goods, etc., and say that what fertilizers are to plant growth, strict adherence to the best business methods have been to this concern. It was started in 1901 with two floors of a small building and now occupies 450,000 square feet of floor space, showing a growth of about 600 per cent in six years. If this fails to be of any interest to the florists at distant points, it will interest the trade at Detroit, for the success of the Anderson Co. is a matter which affords pleasure to the SULPHURIC ACID A FUNGICIDE.

The Gardeners' Magazine (England) says that a safe and useful fungicide, which is used with satisfactory results at the Royal Gardens, Kew, is a solution of sulphuric acid in the proportion of 1 to 1,000, or one pound to 100 gallons. This does not injure the plant, and completely destroys mildew and similar fungi. No harm will be done to pumps, etc., if a small amount of clear water is pumped through the apparatus at the conclusion of spraying. This should be done whatever solution is used, as the apparatus is then left in a clean condition.

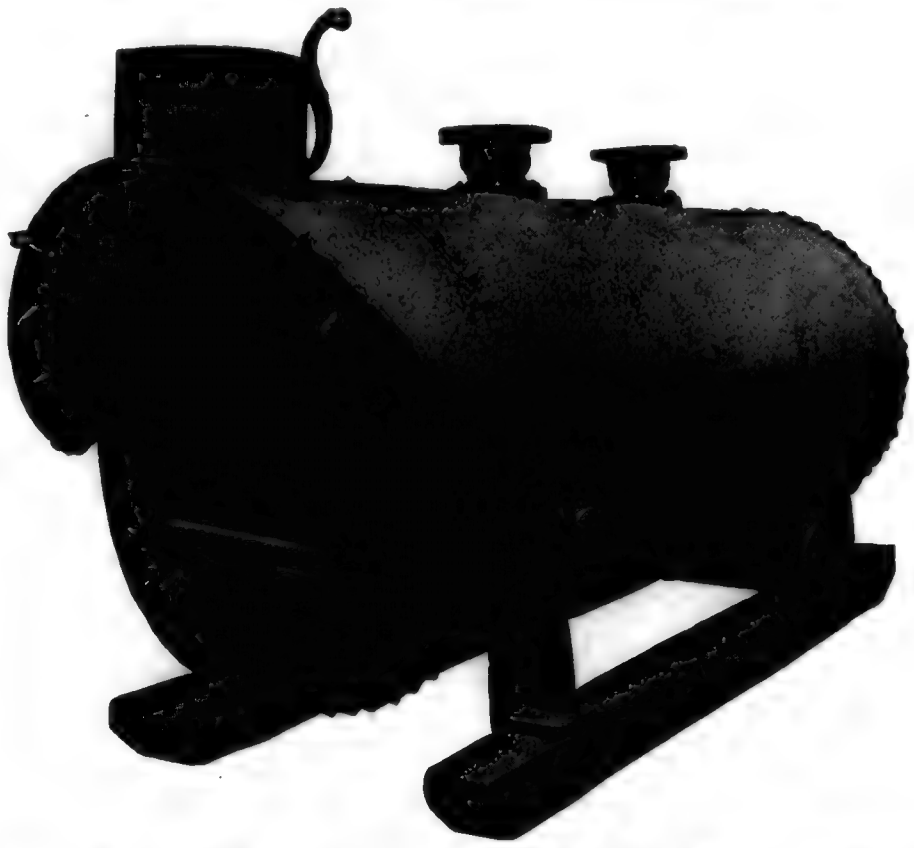
MODERN ADVERTISING.

"I have observed that many of the advertisements are taking on a more modern aspect," says a writer in a British horticultural trade paper.

"There are some of the old school who declare that people don't stop to read descriptive advertisements.

"They don't, if the latter have that tired sort of appearance, but let there be life in the advertisement, and it is as good as a salesman.

"The point to bear in mind when drawing up an advertisement is that it has to take the place of a salesman.



"If Tom Brown merely inserts a line or two to the effect that he is a carnation grower, he may sit and wait for buyers unless he is well known. But let him take up a few inches of space and set his advertisements so that they talk at the prospective buyer, and he may calculate on trade coming to him.

"It's not good enough to merely advertise your name. You must let people know what you hold, its value and condition, why you can back it against anything in the market. Many traders might well take a leaf out of the American's book.

"Talk big, act big, and convince buyers that you are big. Keep straight, and don't exaggerate one iota beyond what you know is fact. That is the class of advertisement that will bring trade, in my opinion, and I might add that I have done a little of it."

The Market.

All things considered, business has been good during the last week. The demand has been lively and the supply of stock has greatly increased, so that all orders could be filled in full. The cold snap is a thing of the past and we are having weather more to our liking. The retail business continues to be mostly funeral work. There have been many deaths among persons of prominence and so the demand for this class of work has been greatly above normal. Transient trade has been light and the demand for stock for weddings and receptions is not up to standard.

Roses continue coming just abqut as last reported. There has been a little increase in red, outside of Beauty, and the quality is good. A good price is obtained for them also. Brides are in heavy demand and more could be used to advantage. Carnations are coming more heavily nearly every day. The bright sun has been doing the work. This increase has forced the price down a little, though the demand continues good. It looks now as if the carnation is going to have its inning for some time to come. Growers report thousands of blooms in sight and coming fast. It is to be hoped that a good part of this cut will be harvested, at least before Lent, and it would appear that such will be the case.

Bulbous flowers are in good supply and are selling well at quoted prices. Valley is having an especially good run. Lilies, both Harrisii and callas, are scarce and not equal to the demand. Consequently they bring good prices.

Violets are in good supply and sell fairly well. As is usually the case, the long-stemmed single ones bring the best prices. Some fine double ones from New York sell well.

Various Notes.

On February 8 occurred the death of Mrs. Bright, mother of Mrs. R. A. Betz. The funeral took place February 11.

L. F. Benson has been drawn on a jury for a two weeks' term. He says that he is glad of it, as things have been a little quiet with him.

A new firm has started up in this city to manufacture florists' wire designs, has adopted the name of Florists' Wire Design Co., and is located at 113 and 114 East Third street. The firm is laying plans to keep a large stock on hand at all times, so as to be able to fill orders quickly. The factory is in charge of one of the best wire workers in the country and the work turned out will be sure to give satisfaction.

Charles Reimers stopped off at this city February 8. He was on his way to his home city, Louisville, Ky., where he was formerly engaged in the flower business. He came all the way from Los Angeles, Cal., where he has been living for several years. He said he was homesick to see the old town, so just had to come back for a visit.

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION

The Springfield Meeting.

The biggest blizzard of the winter swept over the Illinois prairies February 18 and 19, impeding the operation of the steam railroads and effectually tying up the electric lines of Springfield and the network of trolleys which link to it the surrounding cities. But old Boreas could not affect the success of the third annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association further than to keep from the meetings the florists of the nearby towns, who would otherwise have come in in large numbers by trolley. The reduction in attendance was greatly deplored, because the association has before it the opportunity to do more for the good of floriculture than has been accomplished by any other trade body in recent years. The association has the opportunity to cause to be established at the State University the first practical school in the United States for the training of florists; the assistance of every member of the trade is not only wanted, but warranted, and the sessions of the society were therefore full of interest.

Then, too, there was a trade exhibition which would have done full credit to a much older and greatly larger society. Arion hall was well filled with exhibits, attractively staged, and some splendid stock was shown. The facilities were excellent and the Springfield Florists' Club is entitled to much praise for the manner in which the arrangements were handled. They had joined hands and worked unitedly, with a most commendable result. The entertainment features were lavish, especially considering the small number of florists in Springfield to bear the burden of work and finance.

Tuesday's Business Session.

Antrim C. Brown, president of the Springfield Florists' Club, opened the convention with a brief welcome and introduced Mr. Murray, spokesman for the mayor, who was ill. He not only apologized for the blizzard in welcoming the visitors, but quoted some of the facts as to the extent of the florists' industry in Illinois and congratulated the trade on its progress, stating that the investment and volume of business has doubled in seven years. The response was by P. J. Foley, of Chicago, who said that the splendid opportunity to do great and lasting work for floriculture which lies before the Illinois Association demands the coöperation of every florist in the state.

President's Address.

President Albert T. Hey, of Springfield, then read his address, an able document, in which he gave a resume of the work accomplished in the last year, including the securing of the appropriation of $15,000 of public funds for the purposes of the trade studies at the State Experiment Station. He recommended that steps be taken to secure a complete census of floriculture; that the State Association offer medals or otherwise participate in the national flower show; that those who participate in the trade display be recognized by the award of certificates, etc., under proper rules; and that a committee on state fair be appointed to assist in securing for the trade the great benefits which can be had from the increased appropriation for floriculture at this great annual event. He called attention to the city beautiful movement as worthy of whole-hearted support and, referring to the experimental work, said:

"Our station is yet in its infancy and the work is much impeded in not having the houses built to carry on the work. Plans and specifications have been made and the plant will be in full operation in a few months. Some little work in the line of experiments has been made—part of the greenhouses of Washburn Bros., of Bloomington, have been rented for this winter, and report of what has been done will be given you by Prof. A. C. Beal, who has charge of the work. The time is not far distant when we will see a practical course for florists established at our university. The coming florist should have a practical training, combined with a knowledge of those sciences relative to our business. The agricultural department of the university is doing a great work on these lines, especially in the study of soils and fertilizers, and the florist who wants to rank high in his profession must attain a knowledge of those sciences, and it is for this association to see that a way is made possible for him to do it.

"As in all other trades and professions, we are today flooded by a great variety of chemical fertilizers, insecticides, etc., that are thrown on the market with all their excellent recommendations for the innocent, good-natured florist to experiment with. Many of our trade know little of their adaptability to different soils, etc., until they have found out, by sometimes costly experience. I want to see this put on the same basis as our pure food law and think that any fertilizer and insecticide sold to the trade in Illinois should have the stamp of our experiment station analysis upon it."

Secretary A. C. Beal, of Champaign, and Treasurer Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, presented reports which showed 110 members January 1, 1908; receipts for the year $166.81, disbursements $133.57, balance January 1, 1908, $33.24.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was introduced to talk on any topic he chose and after saying a word in favor of the state fairs as a means for reaching a class of people we are not touching at present, he discoursed most entertainingly on the trade as it is conducted in France, of course treating specially on rose breeding and flower shows.

The committee on president's address reported favorably on a number of his recommendations, including: That the president and secretary be authorized to arrange for certificates and rules to govern their award to exhibitors in next year's trade display. That the establishing at the State University of a practical course of instruction for florists be urged. That resolutions be transmitted to the Society of American Florists requesting that body to memorialize the census bureau in favor of a thorough census of floriculture. The report was adopted.

The president appointed the following committees: Judges, A. F. Friedley, F. H. Rowe, A. F. Longren; national flower show, F. L. Washburn, W. N. Rudd, W. L. Kroeschell; state fair, J. F. Ammann, Geo. Asmus, A. T. Pyfer.

Floriculture at University.

A letter from E. Davenport, dean of the State University, whom illness prevented from being present, was read. It was in part as follows:

"If I do not greatly mistake the ideas of the florists, we are not to stop at the present stage of things. I believe that your action and your achievements up to date are but a part of a larger thing that was born when you were successful in landing the present appropriation.

"Your action in behalf of floriculture was the first of its kind, and your university is the first to assume an obligation to do what it can for an interest that is not only commercial but is also eminently artistic, and in my way of thinking great things will come of it.

"Floriculture is a new subject from the university standpoint, and as a consequence few men are trained to do the work that needs to be done at this time. There are many successful growers of flowers, only a few who have attempted to teach the subject even in an elementary way, and almost nobody who has distinguished himself as a competent investigator in the broader field of floriculture.

"So we are placed in the position of together working out a plan not only to achieve a definite purpose but to make the organization and the machine to produce it, but with the money which I feel certain the state will provide, we shall accomplish things worth while."

Report of Advisory Committee.

For the committee charged with advising as to the work of the experiment station, with the recent appropriation for floriculture, W. N. Rudd presented a full report. It was stated that of the appropriation of $15,000, one-half is available each year for two years and that for this year the general funds of the State Experiment Station, $5,000, have been added to this year's appropriation, to go towards buildings. Plans for a range of up-to-date commercial houses have been prepared (and were shown) and erection will proceed in the spring. At one of the early meetings of the advisory committee it was decided that "a sum not exceeding $2,500 of the appropriation for the current year should be expended to cover expense of a field inspector and for an investigation into the damages and ravages caused by thrips especially, and other insects and diseases infesting plants and vegetables grown under glass in Illinois, and for conducting experiments in controlling and preventing destruction and damages by such insects and diseases. At the last meeting it was decided to go on with the investigation of the life history of thrips with the hope that new facts might be brought out which would indicate the vulnerable point on which to attack these insects, which in the opinion of the committee are causing more financial loss to the growers of vegetables and flowers under glass in the state of Illinois than any other disease or insect, or, possibly, than all others put together.''

Mr. Rudd said he could not close his report without ''testifying to the appreciation of the committee of the enthusiastic manner in which Dean Davenport, Prof. Blair and the officials of the experiment station have taken up this work. They are ready and anxious to push our work in every possible way, but funds must be provided. This is your part of the work. When the time for the next appropriation arrives we must collectively and individually see to it that this appropriation is doubled.

''We want to know how to eradicate thrips. We want to know how to fight other insect pests and diseases. We want to know a whole lot more about fertilizers, and about soils, and about new methods of culture. We want to know whether there are not locations in this state where bulbs, plants and seeds for which we now send our good money abroad can be produced cheaper and better. Above all, and beyond all, we want a great school where our sons and daughters can be educated into our business instead of away from it.''

Officers Elected.

The election was a part of Wednesday's proceedings. It was the unanimous opinion that Albert T. Hey had made so good a president that his acceptance of reëlection was insisted upon, and the hospitality of Springfield was so thoroughly appreciated that the invitation to return in 1909 was accepted. The other officers elected are: Vice-president, George Asmus, Chicago; secretary, J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; treasurer, F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.

Wednesday's Program.

The program for Wednesday morning provided for two papers, ''Summer Bedding,'' by Prof. H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, and ''Our Experiment Stations and What We Have Done,'' by Prof. A. C. Beal, the latter covering the work thus far done with the state's appropriation for floriculture.

The constitution and by-laws were amended to conform to legal requirements as published. The committee on the national flower show recommended that the association offer a special prize, which was ratified. The judges made a report, recording the trade exhibits and commenting favorably upon each.

In the afternon the Ad-men's Association of Springfield took the visitors on a trolley ride to points of local interest and A. C. Brown and A. C. Canfield provided conveyances to take all visitors to their admirably kept and interesting greenhouse establishments.

The Banquet.

The Springfield Florists' Club entertained the visitors at an elaborate banquet in the handsomely decorated dining-room of the St. Nicholas hotel on the evening of February 18. Including the local florists and prominent citizens, more than 100 were present. When cigars had been lighted, A. C. Brown introduced Hon. Charles E. Hay as toastmaster. Mr. Hay gave J. Hamilton Lewis, confessed politician, an opportunity to display some fully developed specimens of the flowers of speech before proceeding with the following list of toasts.

USE FOR LEATHER SCRAPS.

I get a large quantity of leather scraps weekly from a glove factory. I am using them for fuel, but want to know if they are of more value as a fertilizer. How can they be rendered soluble? The ashes have a peculiar greenish color. Have they any particular value?

J. L. J.

I referred your query to the chemistry department of the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst. Professor J. B. Lindsey, head of the department, reports in brief as follows: "Leather refuse is of little value for fertilizing purposes, unless it is dissolved in sulphuric acid. It requires considerable patience to do this and I doubt if anyone would care to attempt it. The ashes from the leather contain about two per cent of potash and possibly seven to eight per cent of lime. I should judge it might be worth for fertilizing purposes about $5 per ton." Professor Lindsey forwarded a bulletin detailing some work the station had done along this line, which I shall be pleased to send to you if interested. W. N. CRAIG.

GLADIOLUS NANUS MATHILDA.

In the REVIEW of September 19, 1907, pages 3 and 4, under the head of "Useful White Summer Flowers," C. W. refers to Gladiolus nanus Mathilda. I have ordered this gladiolus from two leading houses and was unable to obtain it. Kindly ask C. W. where he obtains his Gladiolus nanus Mathilda.

CHAS. WINKLER.

Gladiolus nanus Mathilda arrives in America during October, from Holland, and should be placed in flats not later than the last part of November. Many Dutch firms list this invaluable variety, which is much superior to G. Colvillei The Bride. The variety was listed last season by many American bulb dealers and when this year's fall bulb lists appear the correspondent will have no trouble in finding it. C. W.

DAHLIA PROPAGATION.

It is my intention to propagate some dahlias in the hotbed this spring, putting the clumps from which the young plants are to be obtained into the hotbed early in March. Will cuttings from these plants grow readily in a coldframe in sand or in a hotbed with mild heat? Or ought one to try to start only those plants that have a heel and are starting roots when removed from the plant?

J. L. D.

We would not advice you to start the dahlias so early as the beginning of March. A month later will be seasonable. Nothing is gained by early propagation or planting of dahlias. The roots are usually divided soon after being started and a single shoot left to each. They root readily from soft cuttings and those rubbed off with a heel are the best. Do not try to root these in mold, but in clean sand with good drainage below it. If you are not familiar with the propagation of soft-wooded bedding stock, it would be better for you to divide the roots. For home trade or shipping moderate distances, we think cuttings are preferable, but for long distances it is better to use divided roots. If the plants are for your own use, either method of propagation will answer.

C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

Lilies for Easter will need close watching for the next few weeks. To have this crop come in exactly on time requires considerable care, and the florist who gets nearly all his plants in flower has every cause to feel elated. Easter prices are always much higher than those prevailing before and after the great festival, for about everyone who buys a plant wants an Easter lily. As a general rule, it is well to see the buds so that they can be counted forty days before Easter. Under ordinary conditions the plants will flower within the time named, if grown in a sunny house and given a minimum temperature of 55 degrees. It is always well to be on the safe side, and if your plants are a trifle early, do not worry, for it is an easy matter to move them to a cooler house and retard them, if you only grow a few hundreds. Even where thousands are produced, the same moving around is necessary, for in a large batch of lilies there will be a difference of weeks in the flowering of a large proportion of the plants.

Weather conditions have much to do with the forwarding or retarding of lilies. Do not depend too much on three weeks of hot, sunny weather in April to push along your laggard plants. This month may prove cold and sunless and a sweating process may be necessary to flower them. After you see the buds, feeding may be given every fourth or fifth day. Sheep or cow manure water is good; so is guano water. For plants which are inclined to be yellow, a little nitrate of soda has a magical effect. Do not allow aphis to secure any lodgment on the plants. Either squirt nicotine juice into the tops of the shoots or drop tobacco dust over them. Fumigation is the best of all remedies.

Rambler Roses.

Rambler roses intended for Easter should now have shoots well developed, and if you can see the little buds in the ends by the beginning of March, you are all right. Give the plants all possible sunshine. When you syringe, let it be on a clear, sunny day, so that the foliage will be dry early in the afternoon. Do not let mildew make its appearance, or the plants will soon be ruined. Keep some flowers of sulphur on the heating pipes as a preventive. Avoid cold drafts and a cold, clammy atmosphere. As the pots are probably a network of roots where the plants have been growing in them since last spring, give them some liquid stimulants. A surfacing of fine bone, mixed with loam, is also good. Avoid surfacing with green cow manure, too often practiced with evil effects. Plants potted last fall must not be fed for a while yet, as the roots will not have become matted in the pots. It is always well to allow the pink ramblers a week or ten days longer to develop than the Crimson Rambler. The latter rose is becoming somewhat overdone and the pink plants, when well done, are in better demand at more lucrative prices.

Hybrid Roses.

While the hybrid roses are not grown to anything like the extent of some years ago, they make acceptable Easter plants. It is no easy matter to time them exactly right, as a few warm days will upset all your calculations, and hybrid roses, to be really salable, should have the buds showing color and one or two expanding. Full-blown ones are not wanted. You cannot retard these plants when once in flower, as you can lilies, azaleas, acacias or many other plants, so be careful not to get them along too early. Hybrid roses should be sufficiently advanced so that the buds will show from March 10 to 15. The temperature, which should always be low when starting hybrid roses, may now be increased to 50 degrees at night, and 5 degrees more may be added after buds show. Treatment such as recommended for ramblers will suit them.

Azaleas.

There is no need to rush azaleas along yet for Easter, for six weeks will suffice to flower them in. It would be well, nevertheless, to get them into a cool house; one kept at 45 degrees at night will be sufficiently warm. Plants brought along and flowered in a cool house are much more lasting and satisfactory than those subjected to hard forcing. While red azaleas are in strong call at Christmas, white ones are quite popular at Easter, pink shades also taking well.

Spiraeas.

Spiræas or astilbes should all be started before this time. Not less than eight weeks should be allowed for even the common S. Japonica, and the newer forms take ten to fourteen days longer to develop. Give them a brisk heat to start with. Water very liberally; no other plants need so much; it is almost impossible to oversupply them. Spread them out as they grow. You can move them into a cooler house as the flowers show color, if you have ample time for their development.

Rhododendrons.

Similar treatment to that suggested for azaleas will answer for rhododendrons. They can be rushed along in a forcing house, but such plants will not keep long enough in bloom and can but give disappointment to purchasers. The beautiful variety, Pink Pearl, sold well a year ago and promises to be again a leader this season. Its comparative scarcity and higher price prevent the average country florist from trying it. In potting up your rhododendrons, be sure the balls are well soaked first. Those potted in a dry state will drop most of their buds. No amount of watering will soak a ball which has been potted in a dust-dry state.

Schizanthus.

The pretty annual, schizanthus, is worthy of more extended culture in pots. It was pleasing to see it in the hands of a number of progressive florists a year ago. Its culture is of the simplest and, as it may be had in flower over an extended season, it would seem to be worthy of greater attention. Easter plants should be kept well pinched for a while yet. Grow them in a cold house. If in 4-inch pots at present, they can be flowered in 6-inch. Discontinue pinching after March 1. Grow them in a sunny, airy house. Stake before the shoots become ungainly. As a rule, a single stake will answer for a well-grown plant in a 6-inch pot, and three or four for larger sizes. The variety Wisetonensis is best for pots; other sorts grow so tall as to be ungainly.

Gladiolus The Bride.

Gladiolus The Bride succeeds better in flats than in benches. It dislikes anything like forcing, but does well grown in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Keep it well up to the light. It prefers a shelf or a bench without bottom heat. In a high temperature many of the stems will rot off at the tops of the bulbs. By keeping them well aired and in a strong light, much of this trouble will be overcome. The variety Blushing Bride is of more vigorous habit than The Bride and is well worthy a place in every commercial place where such flowers are in demand.

Timely Reminders.

Prepare a good quantity of soil for seed sowing. Let two-thirds of it be leaf mold, and if sterilized to kill all weed seeds, larvæ, etc., all the better.

Continue to house batches of Dutch bulbs. They should all go directly to the bench now and will require no drawing in the dark.

Grow anemones and ranunculi cool. A violet temperature is about ideal.

Give any freesias you are carrying over good light until the foliage becomes yellow.

A mulching of coarse manure or some other material is necessary for perennials and bulbous plants. Alternate freezing and thawing of unmulched ground will soon cause much destruction.

Keep shamrocks moist at the root. They are only in demand for March 17, so get your plants in as good a condition as possible before that date.

As Cypripedium insigne passes out of flower, any necessary repotting can be done.

Keep the propagating bench well filled with cuttings. The percentage of loss will be much lighter now than a month hence.

Do not be in too big a hurry to put shading on the glass. Make it light, even on palms and ferns.

ROSES FOR WINTER BLOOMING.

I have an even-span greenhouse, running east and west, without heat. It has solid beds, containing the following varieties of roses: White and Pink Cochet, La France and Kaiserin. These roses are one year old and bloomed some last summer. If I heat this house next winter, will these rose bushes be of any value for blooming during the winter, or had I better throw them out and put in the regular forcing roses? If I can use them, please tell me how to handle them next summer and fall. H. W. E.

As these roses have never been subjected to heat, if they are in a healthy condition they should be good subjects for your purpose. The varieties, however, are not the best, either for the work or for marketing of the blooms. It would be more profitable to throw them out either in the end of May or beginning of June, and plant standard varieties for winter blooming, such as Bride, Maid, Richmond and Golden Gate.

The proper treatment for your present stock, to put it into condition for winter blooming, would be to begin withholding water in July and continue this for at least four weeks, keeping the syringe going and giving abundance of fresh air. Then prune out all the small wood and shorten down the strong growths to three or four eyes. Remove three inches of the old soil, or as much of it as can be safely removed without injuring the roots. Give the surface a sprinkling of air-slaked lime, and then replace with a mixture of good loam and well rotted manure, in the proportions of two parts of loam to one part of manure. An addition of one 4-inch potful of good bone meal to each bushel of the compost will be of great benefit. Give the bench a thorough soaking and keep the house cool and moist for a couple of weeks. When the leaves begin to push, gradually resume watering and give ordinary rose treatment.

RIBES.

BEST HARDY ROSES.

What do you consider the best hardy monthly and ever-blooming varieties of roses of the following colors: White, yellow, pink, scarlet, cherry red, crimson, rose? J. L. D.

The most persistent flowering roses are, in most cases, a little tender and should be well earthed up and protected in winter. If lifted, laid in a trench and buried, they will come through all right. Among the hybrid perpetuals, Mrs. John Laing, soft pink; Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford, rosy pink; Ulrich Brunner, cherry red; General Jacqueminot, crimson, and John Hopper, rose, are good summer and autumnal bloomers. All of these are very hardy. Among the so-called monthly roses, York and Lancaster, striped red and white, and the Centifolia or Cabbage, pale pink, can be recommended.

A few other roses which are persistent bloomers are: Baby Rambler, bright red; Gruss an Teplitz, crimson scarlet; Hermosa, pale pink; Mme. Georges Bruant, white, and Conrad Ferdinand Meyer, pink (these two latter are rugosas and very vigorous); Clothilde Soupert, white, shaded pink; Blanche Moreau, white moss; Apolline, pink; Maman Cochet, pink; Maman Cochet, white; Catherine Zeimet, a white Baby Rambler; Mme D. Matrat, yellow; Mme. Gillemot, yellow. Of the foregoing the yellows are the least reliably hardy, except the rugosas and Blanche Moreau. It would be better to dig and bury the balance late each fall. I am aware that a number of the sorts mentioned are often listed as ironclad, but I have not found them so. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Treatment of New Varieties.

The articles in the Annual Carnation Number of the REVIEW, relating to the introduction of new varieties, recite the possible shortcomings of the disseminator, and now it would seem proper to call attention to the treatment which stock of new arrivals should receive at the hands of the buyer.

Neglect of proper handling after dissemination is, to my mind, responsible for much of the unsatisfactory behavior of new introductions. No matter how much care the disseminator may exercise to insure honest, vigorous stock being sent out, unless it is intelligently handled afterward, we can expect nothing but indifferent results.

Promptly on arrival the shipment should be examined for evidence of frost, and if such condition exists, each bundle should be dipped, without unrolling, in very cold water and then rearranged loosely in a larger box, in which they should be carried to a moderately cool house to slowly thaw. Any dryness at the root would be remedied in much the same way, but in all cases unpack at once on arrival and allow the cuttings a few hours to gradually reach a temperature about the same as that of the propagating house before potting.

Use new soil composed of rotted sod, without the addition of fertilizer in any form. Be particular to have this in readiness a few days in advance, so that it may become warmed to the inside temperature. See that the pots are clean and, when potted, stand the stock on a shaded bench which you would take pleasure in inviting the originator himself to inspect for cleanliness. Give sufficient water to moisten the soil to the bottom of the pot, and no more.

Remember, these cuttings have been packed in damp moss and denied the least ray of light for several days, making it reasonable to expect a degree of softness in growth not present in home-rooted stock. Therefore extra care must be taken to protect them from drafts, lest serious damage result through wilting.

An Injurious Practice.

A practice which cannot be too severely condemned is that of planting cuttings in very rich soil to encourage tall, rapid growth, with a view to making a cutting from the portion removed at the first topping. I confess my reluctance in bringing such a matter to your attention, but it is indulged in to a greater extent than would on first thought be supposed. A grower is free, perhaps, to do as he pleases with stock bought and paid for, but when he deliberately follows a practice which undermines the work of another he is in a certain sense morally wrong.

Regarding the quantity necessary to be purchased in order to give a variety a thorough trial and at the same time be in a position to propagate for the season following trial, I would advise arranging for at least 250 cuttings. If one could count on growing every one to maturity and on through the blooming and propagating seasons, a less number might answer, but there would still remain the doubt as to whether from among them sufficient desirable plants could be selected from which to propagate without resorting to high pressure, or, to borrow expressions, "chopping down," "massacring," "using just anything that will strike roots."

In case one wishes to grow a few for personal amusement, for hybridizing purposes or to ascertain which of a number of sorts is best suited to his soil, that is another matter.

Having never been interested financially in the launching of any new variety and writing wholly in the interest of growers, I feel that what has been pointed out will not be taken in any sense as retaliatory or as given in a spirit of censure. I agree with all that is set forth in the articles before mentioned.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

INDOOR CULTURE.

Will you please tell us what temperatures are best suited for the following varieties of carnations: White Perfection, Queen, N. Fisher, Enchantress, Victory and Beacon? We expect to grow these varieties the coming season and would like information along that line. Also, what varieties are best for indoor culture? E. A. Harvey, in his paper published in the REVIEW of February 6, spoke of using "a stronger and quicker acting commercial fertilizer," but does not tell us what it was. We wish he would. J. W. M.

The night temperatures best suited to the varieties you name are as follows: White Perfection, 52 to 54 degrees; The Queen, 52 degrees; N. Fisher, 52 to 54 degrees; Enchantress, 50 to 52 degrees; Victory, 52 degrees; Beacon, 50 to 52 degrees. Of all these I would grow only Beacon inside, if at all; personally, I would grow even that outside.

Do not allow yourself to be carried away by this idea of indoor culture. Under certain conditions you will find it desirable, but when conditions are normal you will find the field culture preferable. I say this advisedly, knowing that some will disagree with me. If I had only my own experience to govern me, I might hesitate, but I have seen one expert carnation specialist after another take up this method with enthusiasm, only to drop it again and return to the field method. Perhaps some day we will have a race of carnations which will require indoor treatment, but we do not have it now and I am not sure that we want it very badly. I do not know to what kind or brand of commercial fertilizer Mr. Harvey refers, but I am reminded of the words of Prof. Galloway at Washington last month. He advised against using any of these fertilizers and in favor of using animal manures, both as liquids and as mulch. Experience inclines me to favor his recommendations.

A. F. J. B.

SOME PROLIFIC SCARLETS.

We want to know what red carnation will give the most blooms. A medium size will suit as well as a fancy.

B. M. G.

We now have three scarlet carnations between which it is difficult to choose. In fact, it depends on one's particular needs as to which one he wants. Victory will cover the whole season with a fair average cut of splendid quality. Beacon is a tremendous midwinter bloomer, and if you want your crop between December 1 and April 1 this is the one you want. Red Chief will cover the whole season with a good heavy cut of medium sized blooms of splendid color. It will make more blooms in the season than either of the other varieties, but they are smaller in size. Better try all three and choose between them. A. F. J. B.

GRADUATING TEMPERATURE.

There is considerable difference of opinion about the proper degree of temperature for growing carnations. Some growers say to keep the day temperature 60 to 65 degrees on bright days, reduce the temperature to 58 or 60 degrees at dark, and gradually reduce to the proper night temperature for each variety by midnight—50 to 54 degrees—and keep it there until the outside temperature begins to rise, say, after 8 or 9 a. m. Other growers reduce to night temperature soon after dark and try to keep it there until after daylight, while others allow the temperature to go down several degrees below usual night temperature after 4 o'clock in the morning. We believe an article written by your experts, covering the matter of ventilation and temperature minutely, would be a great help to your many new subscribers and to any beginners in growing carnations.

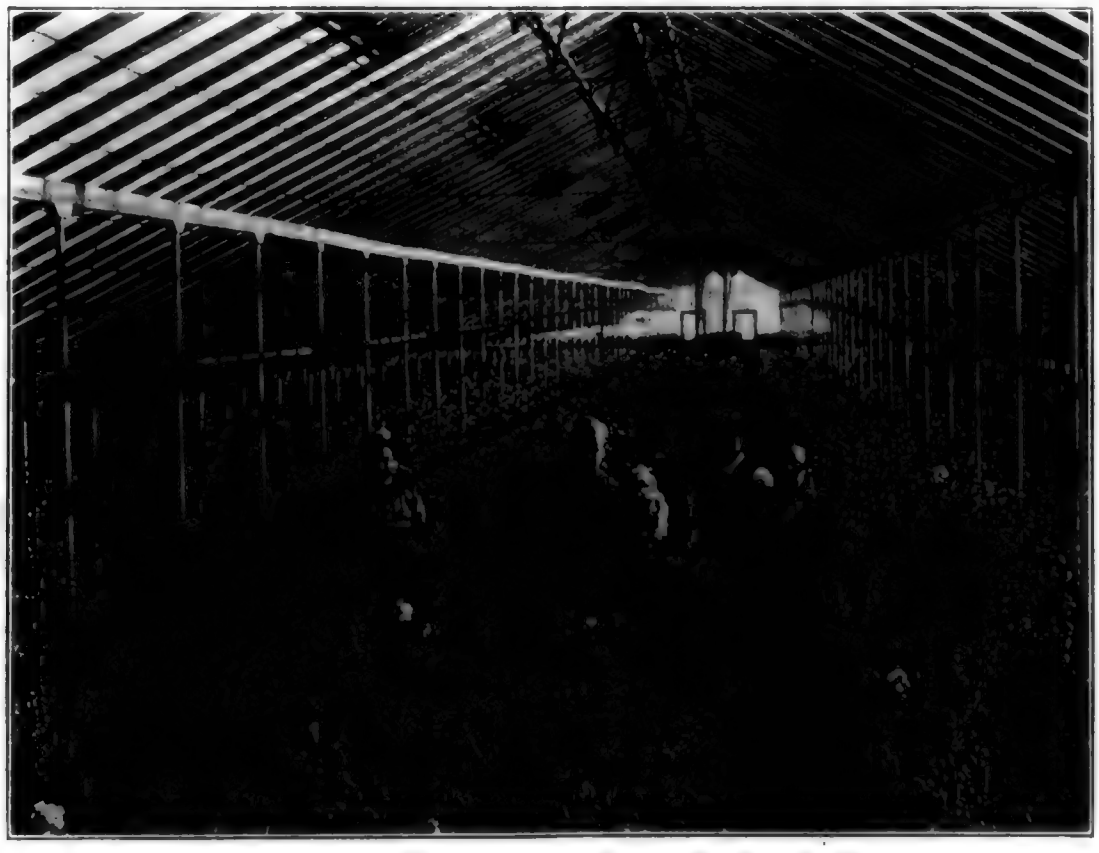
W. F. C.

I have heard of these various methods being practiced and I have no doubt but that good arguments could be set forth in favor of either of the two first named. But how the last mentioned could be justified is more than I can understand. So let us consider it first. It is a well-known fact that extreme changes in temperature are not desirable in growing carnations, as they tend to cause splitting. The idea of regulating the temperature is not to counteract anything that has gone before, but it is to give the plant the temperature in which it will produce the strongest and healthiest growth. It seems that heat and light have so much bearing upon each other that when one is lacking the supply of the other must be regulated accordingly. The plant, to do its best, must have these two elements in proper proportion. As we cannot regulate the light, we must confine our efforts almost entirely to the heat. We know that the carnation develops the healthiest growth in a night temperature between 50 and 54 degrees, according to variety. Much below 50 degrees causes a standstill in growth, which is not at all desirable, and, in most cases, is harmful. When the light becomes stronger as the day grows, more heat is also wanted and that is why we have a night temperature and a higher day temperature.

Just why the temperature should be lower at midnight than it is at 8 p. m., I cannot see, because it is not darker at that time. And why the night temperature should not prevail by 8 p. m., or even before, I cannot see, either. I do not see, either, why the night temperature should prevail until the outside temperature begins to rise in the morning. Suppose the outside temperature does not rise? It seems to me as being entirely a case of supplying heat in proportion to the strength of the light.

I do, however, advise changing from the one temperature to the other gradually, letting the change consume about three hours each time. When the light begins to fade in the late afternoon, begin to let the temperature drop, so that by dark you have your plants in the night temperature. Do the same way in the morning. When the day begins to break, begin raising the temperature, and by the time the daylight is full—which will vary according to the weather and time of year—you will have the day temperature prevailing. Then, if the day is bright, let the sun raise the temperature as much higher as you want it above the cloudy day temperature, and open the vents to prevent too much rise. It seems to me that this is the most rational and sensible method, unless I am entirely wrong on the light and heat proposition. A. F. J. B.

TRIMMING CUTTINGS.



Where is the best place to cut carnation cuttings, at the joint or between joints, when they are broken from the stalk? W. U.

The young shoots used for cuttings should be so short-jointed that there is really no stem between the joints. When cutting at the base, merely make a clean cut wherever it may have severed from the plant and remove enough of the lower leaves to make a stem sufficient to insert in the sand. Roots will form equally well wherever the cut is made. Heel cuttings, however, will usually root a little more quickly than those taken from farther out.

A. F. J. B.

HOUSE OF ENCHANTRESS.

Warren S. Garland, at Des Plaines, Ill., has had especial success in the house shown in the accompanying illustration, from a photograph made February 1. Last year this house was pictured in the Review with a phenomenal crop of Lawson. This season Mr. Garland planted it to Enchantress and, beginning along in January, he has had fully as large a crop as a year ago, when Lawson was the variety. The quality is excellent and the house is returning big money in spite of the fact that in the last three weeks Enchantress has sold cheaper than ever before at this season in the Chicago market. Percy Jones is Mr. Garland's selling agent.

POTTING CARNATION CUTTINGS.

Do the large carnation growers pot the rooted carnation cuttings from sand, or do they plant them in soil? J. A. W.

It cannot be said that any one method of handling young carnations is practiced generally by all the large growers. In fact, you will find that many of them have ideas of their own on this subject and their method varies from that of others accordingly. In handling the young stock strict attention to detail is of greater importance than method, though of course a good method is very desirable. A method which is practiced by many large growers, and which we consider about the best we have ever tried, is to pot the young cuttings from the sand into 2-inch or 2½-inch pots and, when well established, plant them four inches apart in three inches of soil on a bench. We like this planting on the bench better than shifting into 3-inch pots, because in the spring the pots dry out too rapidly in spots unless they are plunged. But by all means pot from the sand. You will find that ball of soil holding together even when you dig the plants from the field for housing, and it is a great help in holding up the plants. A. F. J. B.

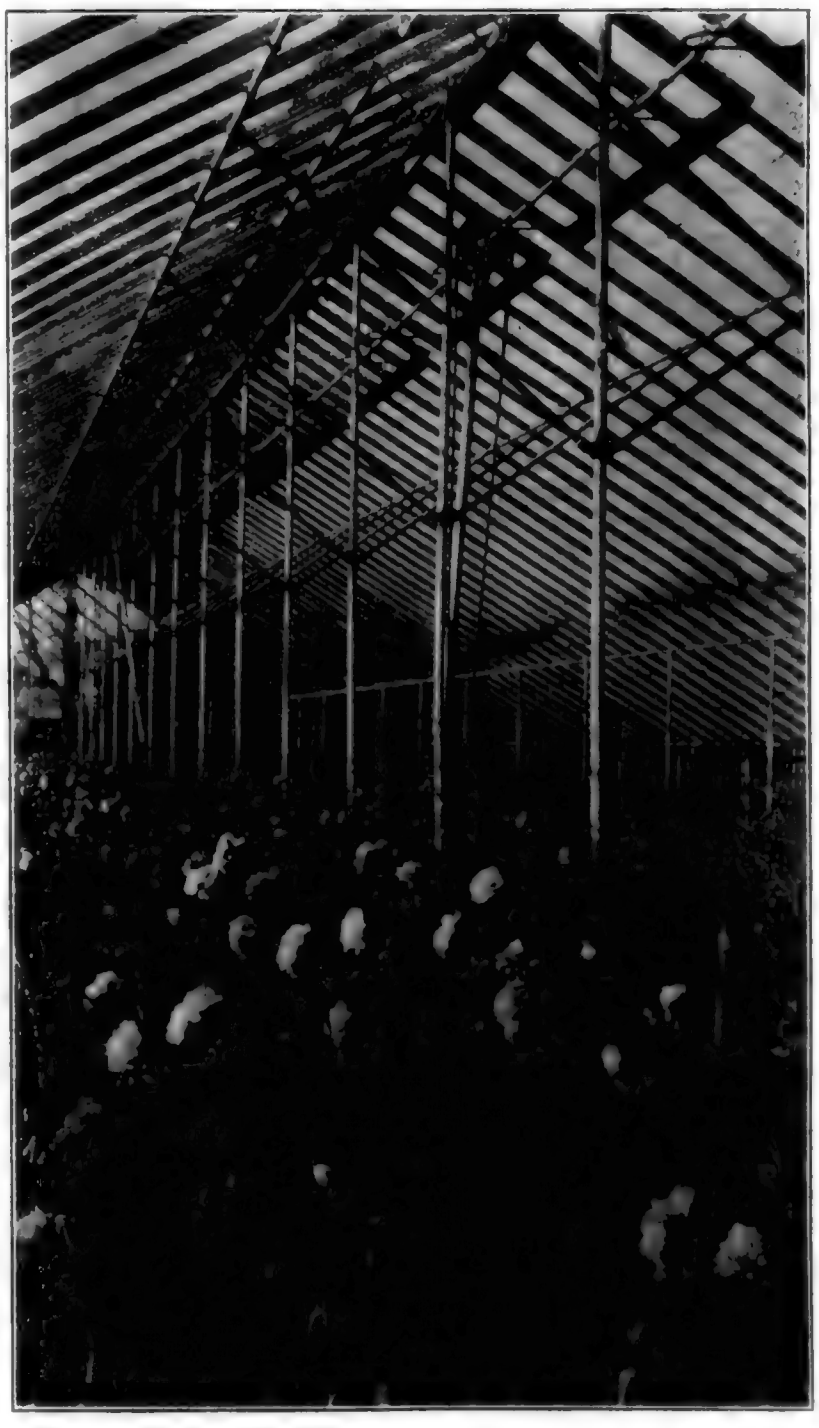
J. D. COCKCROFT'S PLANT.

For several years the up-to-date Long Island establishment of J. D. Cockcroft has been attracting the attention of carnation growers because of the seedlings which have originated there and which have made a place for themselves in the New York wholesale cut flower market. Traendly & Schenck are the selling agents for Mr. Cockcroft and say that his Harvard is the best crimson carnation they ever have handled. It is exactly the shade of the colors of the university for which it is named. It is a seedling of Maceo and Prosperity, and Mr. Cockcroft says it has the free blooming qualities of one parent, with the size and stem of the other. He has been growing it for four years with the best of success. Harvard and another seedling, named Faust, are to be sent out from Northport this year. The latter is scarlet, a cross of Crane, of old-time popularity, and Mrs. Lawson. The flowers are of only medium size but excellent form and in growth the plants are strong and healthy. Mr. Cockcroft says the variety is especially good for Christmas, because it comes into bloom early.

Another Prosperity seedling which takes the eye of every visitor is Georgia, a large, fringed, white variety, a house of which is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. Mr. Cockcroft is figuring on sending out stock of this variety in the season of 1908-9.



There are a number of other promising seedlings in this establishment, which is one of the largest devoted to carnation growing for the New York market. The accompanying illustration shows the plant, two negatives having been necessary to show all the houses. The latest structures are iron-frame and 33x156 feet. Hot water heat is used and a Kroeschell boiler found its way from Chicago to Northport to do duty here. Mr. Cockcroft is a progressive florist and a thorough business man. His place is kept in the best of shape and is one from which the writer always carries a favorable impression. H. O.

EFFECT OF EXCESSIVE HEAT.

What would be the after effects on Queen, Enchantress and Lawson carnations of a night temperature of 62 to 65 degrees, maintained for eight nights before Christmas, and how long would any bad effects be likely to last?

A. T. G.

Just how serious the effects of such treatment would prove would, of course, depend very largely on the condition of the plants at the beginning and the general treatment during that time and since. However, I would not expect a very high grade of culture from a grower who abuses his stock in such a manner. If this temperature was accompanied with a good deal of ventilation, the blooms and the growth would become softened somewhat and the blooms would have come smaller. Bursting of the calyxes would also follow in a considerable percentage of the blooms. But a few weeks of sane treatment would bring them around again in fair shape. Under certain conditions, however, like dark weather, no ventilation, overwatering, overfeeding, etc., the plants could be ruined, as far as good blooms are concerned, for the rest of the winter. The spring growth would, of course, come better again. A. F. J. B.

TROUBLE WITH EARLY TULIPS.

I have mailed you today several samples of tulips that I have trouble with. The bulbs were of good size; I planted them at the same time I planted the Paper Whites and Von Sions, in the same soil, and gave them all the same treatment and same protection against frost, and still the tulips are a failure. They had a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees and 60 to 65 degrees in the day time, exactly the same as the Paper Whites, Von Sions and Romans. The samples I pulled out of the soil and consequently some of the roots have been broken off. C. L.

The samples received were certainly sickly ones. Are you quite sure that your tulips had plenty of water, not only just after being planted, but later? Many bulb failures are directly traceable to too little water. A good many growers still cling to the idea that if they give a good soaking at planting time, no more is needed until the bulbs are housed for forcing. There could be no greater mistake. Dutch bulbs should be kept moist at the root. They start to root immediately after being potted or boxed, and if you expect the initial watering to carry them along for the matter of three months, when they are making masses of roots, failure only can result.

The Romans, Paper Whites and Von Sions are French bulbs and grow much more speedily than the tulips, preferring also quarters a trifle warmer in the early stages of growth. The fact that they need covering with cinders, loam or other material but a short time, if at all, gives opportunities to water them, which the tulips no doubt sorely need. We incline to the opinion that dryness at the root is the cause of the tulips doing so poorly. Perhaps your soil looked moist, but was in reality far too dry for them. Dutch bulbs, if in well drained pots, pans or flats and placed where water will not stand, are not likely to be injured by too much water at the roots. C. W.

BOOK ON ORCHIDS.

I would like to ask the name of the best book devoted to the cultivation of orchids. I have never grown them and would like to read up a little. Just a plain, practical treatise is what I want, something a fellow not a college graduate can understand. L. H.

Quite a number of works have been published on orchids. Some are very elaborate and expensive. I would recommend one by William Watson, Kew, England, as an inexpensive and useful book. Williams' "Orchid Manual" is another good work. Each of these is well illustrated. The latter is also an English work. Bailey's "Cyclopedia of American Horticulture" contains an exhaustive and practical article on orchid culture, and the needs of the various genera will be found alphabetically arranged in this work and in Nicholson's "Dictionary of Gardening."

SPRING STOCK.

With the lengthening days we are reminded that it becomes imperative to turn our attention to the bedding stock, although as yet it is rather early for many items. Geraniums that have become leggy may be topped and the cuttings rooted. If the fall struck plants have been wintered in 2¼-inch or 2½-inch pots, as soon as they have broken again they are fit for a shift into a 3½-inch or 4-inch. Let your soil for potting be stony; too large stones throw out, but pot firmly, to induce stocky growth. Unless you intend to specialize, do not have too many varieties. A representative dark red, white, salmon, pink and bright red are for ordinary usage sufficient.

If you are short of coleus stock, propagating may be commenced. If infested with mealy bug, carefully destroy by hand at once, as it is much easier to eradicate this pest when your stock is low than it would be later.

Fuchsias plunged in heat and syringed several times a day soon break readily, and cuttings taken off when there are three or four pairs of leaves root readily in 60 to 65 degrees. These should be cut off, and not torn off, as by cutting one can leave a small portion of the new break that will break again and give more cuttings. Fuchsias do not root very readily in hot weather; therefore early propagation is advisable. This also applies to marguerites. Both of these, if once allowed to flag, take a great deal longer to strike, if indeed they root at all. Sheets of newspaper placed over the bench, after having sprinkled the cuttings in the morning, assist greatly.

In regard to those few old dahlia roots you contemplated sprouting up: Put them into a greenhouse a little later on; just cover the roots with soil, only leave the base of the old stem clear, and after a short interval they will give you lots of cuttings. Pot them straight into 3-inch pots and water freely; they will root in a remarkably short time. For quantity, St. Katherine and Cycle throw cuttings very freely. Mrs. W. Slack, Mrs. Langtry, Mrs. Gladstone, John Bennett, Uncle Tom, Ard Patrick and Keyne's White make a large bunch with a few blooms, besides being a good assortment of colors.

The heliotropes and verbenas may be started up, not forgetting the lemon-scented variety, Aloysia citriodora. Have a look around the greenhouses; the sight of a plant often suggests possibilities. The red and variegated tradescantia, possibly forgotten since last summer, or the Saxifraga sarmentosa, and a few dilapidated-looking Rex begonias, if they have been worth keeping, are worth attention.

Hydrangea cuttings, taken as soon as the plants commence growth, will flower during the summer. For a comparative novelty, try Kochia tricophylla, or summer cypress, easily raised from seed. These sell readily in 6-inch. An occasional trim with the scissors keeps them symmetrical.

The old-fashioned musk, Mimulus moschatus, some people's abomination, still finds favor with a good many. Seed may be sown now, very thinly. It is some time before the seedlings are large enough to prick off into flats. This should be done separately and not in clumps. Take cuttings off the seedlings, putting about sixteen into a 3½-inch pot, and water liberally, thrips being very partial to musk.

Panicum variegata is very useful in conjunction with tradescantia for basket work. A few echeverias stuck in the moss through the wire help to hide the bareness of the basket when viewed from below. Isolepis gracilis makes for variety and the variegated vinca should not be forgotten. The blue lobelia, although best from cuttings, can be grown from seed and requires early attention. Do not let it grow so that a bunch of flowers hangs over the side of the pot; snip it off with the scissors and keep it level. In a 5-inch pot, well done, this looks superb.

There is as yet plenty of time before the bulk of seeds need be sown, such as stocks, asters, zinnias, salvias, pyrethrum, sweet alyssum, marigolds, Cobæa scandens, nasturtiums, etc., but attention might well be paid to the other items mentioned. Ferns and their ally, selaginella, sell readily during the early days of spring and summer. Numerous tasteful and effective combinations are possible, both for basket and dish work, and to those thirsting for novelty the field possesses almost endless variety.

THE READERS' CORNER.

A Good Propagating Bench.

There appears in "Seasonable Suggestions," in the REVIEW for February 13, the oft-repeated instruction to put geraniums into soil in 2-inch pots, as a better way than to root them in sand. Our experience is not extensive, but we succeed better with the sand. We can safely say that with our potted cuttings this winter we have lost ten per cent, while with those in the sand we have lost less than three per cent.

As we have what we think is a very good propagating bench, I will describe it. We built a new house last fall, running it right over the boiler-pit. We built our propagating bench directly over the boiler, with the floor of the bench thirty inches above the floor over the boiler-pit. The bench is five feet wide. Across the frame of the bench, on three supports, are laid old buggy tire irons, just far enough apart for the ends of the brick to meet on them. On these irons we laid a floor of smooth, even sized brick and slushed the joints with thin lime mortar. Around this we put a 6-inch board, and filled in with medium coarse sand. We left one board out of the floor that covers the boiler-pit, just over the boiler and under the bench. This gives us a temperature of about 65 degrees in the sand. We purpose enclosing the bench between the two floors, which will give us a higher temperature.

Our geraniums are exposed to the sun and are not shaded at any time.

W. N. THARP.

GOOD FLOWERING CLIMBER.

I am anxious to find a few hardy flowering shrubs that would be suitable to grow as climbing plants in Montana. We have tried several, such as hop vines and others on the same order, but have had no luck with them. It is true that we are far north, have a severe winter and usually have no spring until the middle of May. I wonder if clematis would do?

A. C. W.

You could have nothing better than Clematis paniculata. It is a rapid grower, soon covering a trellis. Its glossy, dark green foliage is beautiful in itself, and during late summer the profusion of starry, fragrant flowers almost hides the leaves. It will grow in any situation. It dies to the ground in a very severe climate, but this is immaterial, as the shoots springing from the ground soon cover all space allowed them. Protect slightly the first winter; afterward it will care for itself.

Rose Crimson Rambler will withstand 20 degrees below zero. If your temperature runs lower than this, lay the plants down early in the winter and throw some straw or soil over them. The climbing honeysuckles, or loniceras, also the wistarias and bignonias, are handsome, but less hardy than the other two sorts named.

Charles Henry Fox.

CHARLES HENRY FOX.

The name of Fox is as closely identified with the advancement of floriculture in Philadelphia today as it was with the reform in English politics, which did so much to secure American independence a century and a quarter ago. In the latter case it was Charles James Fox, who, with Burke, battled in the House of Commons for the cause of freedom. In the former case it is, as the REVIEW readers know, Charles Henry Fox who is striving to secure a better appreciation of true art in the arrangement of flowers.

Charles Henry Fox is the son of Charles Fox, one of the best known and most respected members of our profession. Charles Fox secured his early training with Karl Müller, one of our most famous spring plant growers, doing business on the extreme outskirts of West Philadelphia. From there the senior Mr. Fox went to Robert Buist, the well-known seedsman. Later Mr. Fox joined forces with Hugh Graham, Sr. Mr. Graham had a few greenhouses on the ground at the rear of his residence at Eighteenth and Thompson streets, and there the start of the new enterprise was made. Some years later, in 1883, Mr. Fox started on his own account at Broad and Master streets, where there were four or five small greenhouses at the rear of the store and dwelling. Here his son, Charles Henry Fox, started with him. A few years later Mr. Fox, Sr., sold this property and moved to his present location at 1307 North Broad street, where he has a fine store, with a conservatory and second-story greenhouse in the rear.

Mr. Fox, Sr., sent his son, Charles Henry, to Trenton for his apprenticeship in the nursery and greenhouse business of C. Ribsam & Sons. After a little over a year there, Charles Henry Fox returned to Philadelphia to go into business with his father. Seven years later he opened a store at Twenty-first street and Columbia avenue. This business has prospered and today the store is one of the busiest in the northern section of the city. Mr. Fox noticed that the department store idea of bargain sales was becoming increasingly popular and he was, I think, the first to introduce this idea into our business, establishing plant bargain sales at his Columbia avenue store. His plan was to buy entire blocks of a certain variety of plants for cash and then offer them at attractive prices.

Mr. Fox was, however, not satisfied with this kind of business. He aimed at something higher than mere business success, and in the fall of 1903 he opened an English flower shop on the old Dundash place, on the west side of Broad street, just north of Walnut street. When this property was sold to make room for the Arcade building, Mr. Fox moved a block farther south, but his shop has remained as first designed, an English flower shop, with all its appointments substantial and in the best taste. This shop was "The Sign of the Rose," described in the REVIEW of October 17, 1907, and two following issues. REVIEW readers are familiar with some of Mr. Fox's ideas in floral arrangements which have appeared each week since then, and his unique ideas are greatly appreciated.

The Weekly Florists' Review

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

THE mid-February glut of carnations appears to have been general, reaching to all the large markets of the country.

INQUIRY is made for someone who can furnish Henri Jacoby geraniums. A classified advertisement will bring business to anyone who has the stock.

THE second spring exhibition of the St. Louis Horticultural Society will be held in the Masonic Temple, March 10 to 12. A list of premiums has been issued.

THERE is not a word of complaint as to the state of business in the agricultural communities and the prospect for a fine spring trade is causing hundreds of florists in the cities and villages of the middle west each to prepare to build another house or two next summer.

THE introducers of new carnations say the growers are not taking hold of the novelties this season with the interest that has run up the big sales of new sorts in the last few years. As a result, it will be all the more profitable for those who get in early on the good things.

THOSE who do a considerable business in rooted cuttings of carnations say that White Perfection is the best seller, it being impossible to supply the demand. White Enchantress is second choice. Beacon and Victory both are big sellers and Winsor is called for in quantity. But the man who is propagating Flora Hill and Joost is not very busy with shipping.

FUCHSIAS, those good old favorites of by-gone days, are coming back to delight us once more. We may never again see such magnificent specimens as the memories of our apprenticeship days call vividly to view, but we can have fuchsias just the same, without being considered old-fashioned. There are on nearly every place one or more spots, just a trifle shaded, where fuchsias would thrive and delight the eye as nothing else would. For window boxes, if placed in suitable situations, fuchsias are admirably adapted.

WHEN advertisers receive orders for stock which can not be shipped immediately, the least they can do is to acknowledge receipt of the order, stating the day shipment will be made.

THE horticultural traders of Great Britain, under the leadership of George Monro, of Covent Garden, London, are endeavoring to secure from British railways recognition of the importance of their traffic, better service being more desired than lower charges, although these are high.

HARDLY a week passes at this season without the report of one or more wagonloads of plants, and frequently the vehicles themselves, being destroyed by fires caused by the oil stoves used to keep out the frost. It would be much cheaper to buy an accident-proof wagon heater, like the Lehman—and there are others, only our trade does not know them, as they have not been advertised in the REVIEW.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondents of the REVIEW are instructed to use the wires of the Postal Telegraph Co., whenever possible, and advertisers and others are requested to do so when telegraphing to the REVIEW.

ILLINOIS EMBLEMS.

By act of legislature it has been decreed: "That the native oak tree be, and the same hereby is recognized and declared to be the native state tree of the state of Illinois; and that the native violet be, and the same hereby is recognized and declared to be the native state flower of the state of Illinois."

THE DEATH ROLL.

Merton M. Green.

Merton M. Green died in Louisville, Ky., February 8, of pneumonia. He was born in Hamilton, Madison county, N. Y. In 1854 he removed to Louisville, and some time afterward was in the florists' trade for a while at Fourth avenue and Green street.

Robert Petrie.

Robert Petrie, who had recently purchased the business of H. Gresens, in Alameda, Cal., died of heart failure February 6. Mr. Petrie was 29 years of age and had resided in Fruitvale, Cal., for several years before removing to Alameda. G.

William Adels.

William Adels, who was one of the most popular young men in the trade at St. Louis, died February 11, aged 35 years. He had for several years been with Mrs. M. M. Ayers, the retail florist, and was skilled in his branch of our work. He leaves a widow and one child.

Robert Mann.

Robert Mann, the pioneer florist of Lansing, Mich., died January 6. He was born in Ipswich, Mass., January 23, 1831. Early in life he removed to Michigan, and at one time lived in Hillsdale, where he joined the Masonic order. In 1857 he married Miss Alice Clark, of Jonesville, Mich. About eight years later they made their home in Lansing, and Mr. Mann engaged in the greenhouse business near the Washington avenue bridge. Afterward he bought other property on Washington avenue, south,

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The St. Valentine's business served to give the wholesale market renewed strength, for the volume of sales was quite satisfactory, considering the depression which had existed for more than a week before this new floral holiday. While large quantities of stock were moved, prices did not advance greatly, because of the large supply in practically every line except roses. The quantity of violets sold was something tremendous. Practically every retailer made some special effort in the way of window decorations of heart-shaped and other boxes of flowers and business done at retail also was satisfactory.

In the days following February 14 the market weakened again, but large quantities of stock were moved at fairly satisfactory prices. Carnations continued in large supply in spite of the change to colder weather. Prices, however, were not in the demoralized condition of the first of last week.

While some growers have had fair crops of roses, others have not yet begun to cut heavily and the demand has been good. Beauties are especially scarce and there was a sharp advance in prices last week, because of the impossibility of filling orders. Buyers have been glad to pay $6 for Beauties which a month ago were freely offered at $3, with further concessions to large buyers.

The season of bulbous stock seems only fairly under way, for receipts increase steadily. Tulips are of much improved quality, but they have no special salability. All bulbous stock is cheap and it is no wonder that the bulb salesmen from Holland, who now are so numerous in town, find the buyers slow to place orders.

Violets continue to arrive in large quantities and there is every prospect that there will be more from week to week as the season advances. Word from Rhinebeck is that Chicago not only can have all the violets that are called for, but a few extra boxes, other markets being even worse than Chicago on this specialty.

There are large quantities of sweet peas received daily. The good ones sell fairly well, but the short stock is hard to move.

The market for greens continues on its even way.

Randall Closes Lease.

The A. L. Randall Co. has closed a lease for a term of years upon the four floors of the building at 19 and 21 Randolph street, in which at present two floors are occupied. The lease does not include the street floor or basement, but renders all the rest of the building available as the needs of the business develop.

Chicago at Springfield.

The main Chicago party had a special car on the Illinois Central February 17 for the trip to the state convention. The city was well represented, the following being present: George Asmus, J. S. Wilson, Adolph Poehlmann, N. J. Rupp, George Garland, Wm. L. Kroeschell, Leonard Kill, R. S. Woodhouse, W. N. Rudd, P. J. Foley, H. B. Howard, J. E. Jensen, J. C. Vaughan, W. E. Lynch, J. H. Pepper, Frank Johnson, A. Dietsch, J. H. Burdett; Will Breitmeyer, Detroit; A. T. Pyfer and P. Olsem, Joliet.

Club Meeting.

If the Chicago Florists' Club keeps up for the year the pace it struck on the evening President Leonard Kill first occupied the chair, the members will owe special recognition to H. N. Bruns, to whose insistence the nomination of Mr. Kill was due. The attendance February 13 was nearly forty and the interest keen.

President Kill announced his committees as follows:

Finance—H. N. Bruns, Wm. Kidwell, George Asmus.

Sports—Phil Schupp, F. Lautenschlager, George Asmus.

Transportation—F. F. Benthey, E. C. Amling, A. C. Spencer.

Good of the Club—T. E. Waters, Ed Enders, H. B. Howard.

The finance committee reported having audited the books, finding a balance of $349.35 in the treasury.

Applications for membership were received from W. E. Hennig, J. J. Kruchten, John Schillo, H. Schiller, H. C. Lenington and J. H. Pepper.

A. H. Poehlmann reported on the plans for the national rose show at the Art Institute March 25 to 27 and read a long list of donors of special premiums. The club voted to give a banquet to the visitors to the show.

J. S. Wilson, Andrew Benson and W. L. Palinsky were appointed to score a vase of Fritz Bahr's new carnation, Lucille, a beautiful flower on the order of Prosperity, of which it is said to be a seedling, but of a totally different color, all the pink being in the shape of a flush at the base of the petal. This was exhibited by the E. F. Winterson Co. and scored eighty-five points, entitling it to a certificate.

A. C. Beal, of Urbana, secretary of the State Florists' Association, was present and spoke for a good attendance at Springfield this week.

Easter Lilies.

Peter Sroczyniski, who perhaps will be more easily recognizable as "Big Pete," says that he has been about among the lily forcers north and west of town and finds a general complaint as to the quality of bulbs. Practically every grower who is forcing multiflorum for Easter has a large loss, which Big Pete estimates at fifty per cent; in his own case it was more than sixty per cent. Part of this is due to disease in the bulbs and part to the bulbs being double-nosed and triple-nosed. Where a bulb throws three grass-like shoots, it is not worth the space it takes up. The loss in the giganteums is not over ten per cent and Big Pete says that next season he will not be in the lily business unless he can get giganteum bulbs.

Long Distance Phone.

The long distance telephone is coming more and more into use for ordering cut flowers from this market. Since the telegraph companies increased their rates it is cheaper in many cases to phone than it is to telegraph, if an answer is required; besides, it is decidedly more satisfactory. One day last week a visitor to one wholesale house went on because his chat with the proprietor was interrupted by a call from Buffalo and, stepping in next door, he found the wholesaler talking with St. Louis. Nearby towns use the telephone almost exclusively for ordering.

Various Notes.

Weiland & Risch have secured a piece of land adjoining their plant at Evanston and the prospect is that a good sized range of rose houses will go up as soon as they can work the ground. It is intended to increase the planting of Killarney and cut down on Bridesmaid at this place.

Peter Reinberg has concluded to make the campaign for reëlection to the city council again this spring.

N. J. Rupp, of the John C. Moninger Co., spent last week visiting prospective greenhouse builders in northern Illinois and Iowa.

Zech & Mann say roses are selling first-rate and that they are lucky in having three growers, each cutting good crops: Albert Lies, of Niles Center; Damm Bros., and Emil Kroll.

J. A. Budlong will next season plant two houses with White Perfection and White Enchantress.

Robert Johnstone, with Vaughan & Sperry, was called to Nunda, Ill., on the evening of February 15 by the sad news that his mother, well advanced in years, was dying.

At E. C. Amling's they were especially fortunate last week in having a fair quantity of good Beauties, one sale being made as high as $7.50 per dozen.

At E. H. Hunt's they say the locally grown Marie Louise violets sold for $1 per hundred at Valentine's day without satisfying the demand.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says that in his estimation the wholesale florists should be well pleased with the volume of business now being done. In Mr. Pieser's opinion the flower business is better than general business.

An attraction at Winterson's last week was the vase of twenty-five blooms of Fritz Bahr's carnation, Lucille, which was shown at the Florists' Club's last meeting. It is a magnificent flower and shows up particularly well under artificial light.

Bassett & Washburn have a white sport of the Killarney rose of which they intend to work up as much stock as possible for another season.

August Poehlmann says that the Poehlmann Bros. Co. has every reason to be pleased with the season's business. December did not give quite the returns expected, but January was twelve per cent ahead of last year and February is making a good record in spite of low prices, because of the large volume of sales.

Remember that Saturday, February 22, is a legal holiday, with only one mail delivery. If you want stock from the Chicago market, telegraph your orders that day.

Mrs. F. Beu is making preparations for St. Patrick's day. For several years she has sold a steadily increasing quantity of her carnation dye.

Scheiden & Schoos, at Evanston, have in the sand, or just potted up, 25,000 cuttings of a seedling carnation raised by Joseph Schoos. It is a cross of Lawson and Enchantress and they think so well of it that they are going into it heavily for next season. The color is fine pink and the flower is large and well formed. The stem is long and strong and there are few splits. They intend to exhibit it and possibly disseminate it in the trade next season.

N. J. Wietor says that most of the buyers of carnation cuttings have got over the idea of early delivery, unless it be of novelties. He says that it is March 1 before the cutting business really begins with them, and they have a large trade in this line.

George Reinberg is cutting a large crop of sweet peas.

C. W. McKellar says that the cattleya crop is off and orchid prices are advancing.

The Mrs. Marshall Field rose is still giving a good account of itself at Peter Reinberg's.

Among the week's visitors were Will Breitmeyer, of Detroit, and one of the Heinl brothers, of Jacksonville; also H. S. Morton, of Rockford, Ill.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Little or no improvement can be recorded in flower market conditions, which are the worst Boston has seen for many years. Even the milder weather has failed to stimulate buying, and large quantities of flowers are either unsold each day or cleared at absurdly low prices. Roses, which have held up very well, owing to their comparative scarcity, are now going down with the rest. The best grades are selling fairly well, but the cheaper ones are down in the dumps. Carnations were surely never so hard to sell in February. Some select flowers may bring $3 per hundred, a few possibly more, but $1 is a fair price on good flowers and 50 cents is as much as large quantities are bringing, even lower figures than this being taken to clear out by growers. The quality of carnations was never better and this is the first time for years that they have been so unsalable. Violets are not quite so plentiful among the leftovers and are selling tolerably well. They are the same price as a week ago.

Some good sweet peas bring fair prices, but common grades bring very little. Lilies and callas are down with the rest. One grower disposed of his longiflorums at $2 per hundred, surely a ruinous price. Of course, this low price was exceptional. Prices in all other flowers are very erratic. Bulbous stock is not in many cases bringing the initial cost of the bulbs. La Reine tulips and double Von Sion narcissi at $10 per thousand cannot be profitable for the growers. Plant trade is quiet and conditions are not very roseate, although a change in the tide, it is hoped, may soon come.

Horticultural Society.

John Dunbar, of Rochester, N. Y., delivered an able lecture on "Conifers for the Home Grounds" at Horticultural hall, February 15. Mr. Dunbar brought along small branches of many evergreens to illustrate his remarks. He was asked what he considered the best time to transplant evergreens. The lecturer stated that he thought spring just when the buds were starting, and the end of August during moist weather, the two periods when transplantation could be done with the least loss, but he had moved them sucessfully in midwinter and about every month in the year. He prefers propagation in boxes of sand in November, where this method of increase has to be adopted. Cuttings three to four inches long are sufficiently large and a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees is about right.

February 22 being Washington's birthday, there will be no lecture on that date. February 29 Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, will speak on the private gardener.

The spring flower show will take place March 20 to 23, and promises to be unusually large and attractive. There will be eight concerts furnished by an orchestra.

Various Notes.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club February 25. Quite a number of visitors from a distance are coming to enjoy carnation night, and exhibits promise to be numerous, especially of novelties.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club has fixed upon March 25 as the date of the annual concert and dance, to be held in Horticultural hall. There will be no banquet, but refreshments will be served.

Robert Cameron lectured at Melrose February 10 on "Annuals and Biennials," and will speak on the same topic at Newport, February 25.

William McCormick, brother of J. J. McCormick, the Malden florist, died February 13, at the age of 53. He had been with his brother for some time at Malden.

Joseph Fuller, of Leominster, is sending in some remarkably fine longiflorum lilies, which William Aylward is handling at Park Street market.

Charles J. O'Brien, of Jamaica Plain, as usual, has La Reine tulips and Golden Spur narcissi of splendid quality.

In common with other sections of the country, we have experienced some vicissitudes of climate this month. February 8 we had the coldest day of the winter, with the temperature below zero and the wind blowing a gale. February 15 gave us drenching rain, driven by a south wind, and a temperature of 60 degrees.

Chatenay roses from Exeter Rose Conservatories, Exeter, N. H., are again notable for their size and remarkable stems.

At the Park Street market exhibition, February 29, there will be numerous exhibits from a distance and all available space will be called into requisition.

J. R. M. L. Farquhar lectured at Wellesley, February 12, on "Italian Gardens."

Welch Bros. say: "Considering the depressed condition of the flower trade at present, we find things are not so bad with our house. We have been able to sell all our goods at fair prices so far, although our growers have increased their supplies materially this year."

Savannah, Ga.—A. C. Oelschig & Sons have opened a retail store in the most fashionable part of the city, at 147 Bull street, near Oglethorpe avenue.

Rugby, N. D.—N. P. Lindberg, proprietor of the Rugby Greenhouse, reports that he lost a house of roses last fall on account of the non-arrival of building material, which the manufacturers promised to deliver in August but which was not on hand till the first part of November. Consequently the roses were frozen. The other stock, including the carnations, is doing finely.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Roses are scarce and the demand is strong. There have been few American Beauties in this market. Carnations are more plentiful, but sell readily at good prices. The sales on cut Easter lilies are good and none go to waste.

Daffodils are plentiful, selling at 3 cents wholesale and 75 cents per dozen retail. Narcissi are not so plentiful at present and Romans are also somewhat scarce. Dutch hyacinths are now making their first appearance. This market has been supplied with more cyclamen this year than in the last three years altogether. They meet with ready sales at fair prices.

The last week there has been a great call for azaleas and there has not been enough to fill the demand. The cause seems to be that the early ones are gone and the late varieties are not in yet. Besides, some are holding them for Easter.

Primroses in pots sell well. Daffodils in pots and pans are in good demand. The 50-cent and 75-cent pans sell best.

Tulips are not yet very plentiful and are selling at 75 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

A. F. Barbe is cutting some extra fine white snapdragons. He has the greater part of one house planted in these flowers. He is very successful with them.

Ed Humfeld's daughter has been quite ill with pneumonia, but she is now improving nicely. Mr. Humfeld has been busy the last week with funeral work and wedding decorations.

shipping in large quantities of single violets. Thirty thousand of these were picked at his place the day before St. Valentine's day. He finds a ready sale for all he grows and is selling them at 50 cents per hundred. His roses are off crop and he cannot supply the demand. He is cutting very few American Beauties at present.

James Payne had a good display of purple Dutch hyacinths in his window last week.

The Alpha Floral Co. displayed in its window some of the largest white carnations that we have seen this winter, and also had some large Nelson Fisher. This company claims that its trade is twenty per cent better than last year at this time. James Biggam, their decorator, had the decoration for the Taft banquet at the convention hall. Large quantities of wild smilax and palms were used.

D. Freudenthal reports business as being good, but he cannot get enough white roses in this market. Mr. Freudenthal has leased a new store, which is now being fitted up. The location is a good one. It is at the southwest corner of Eleventh street and Grand avenue, in the Bryant building. He intends to run both stores. We are glad to see him come to the front and wish him much success in his new undertaking.

Miss J. E. Murray is doing a fine business. Her display in the show window was good. A vase of large white snapdragon was the center of attraction.

We have been told that Miss M. Dalley will, in the near future, open a cut flower store. W. H. H.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale commission men report the cut flower market in a very satisfactory condition the last week, as far as the supply was concerned, but prices were not so satisfactory, as they were up one day and down the next. They also claim that the retailers must have had plenty of funeral work to do, as white stock of all kinds sold pretty clean every day last week, while of colored stock there was plenty left after the morning sales were over. On Monday, February 17, there were not any too many cut flowers in the market, and clean-up sales were reported.

On St. Valentine's day a large supply of violets came in and the price dropped from $7.50 per thousand to $5.

1,580,000 feet of Modern Glass

51 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO

On Sunday the price fell to $2.50 per thousand.

Roses are in good demand and the stock is limited in all grades. Carnations are of good quality and the supply is good, especially in white and Enchantress colors. All kinds of fine bulbous stock are to be had in quantity and at reasonable prices. Tulips are fine, as are also valley and Paper Whites. Smilax, asparagus and ferns have excellent call. Galax, too, sells well.

Club Meeting.

The carnation meeting held by the local club Thursday afternoon, February 13, was voted a great success. The attendance was large, forty members being present and ten visitors. The exhibition was large and much of it was made up by our local growers. Favorable comments were heard on all sides, as to the excellence of the vases shown.

Those who showed blooms, and the varieties exhibited, were as follows:

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., vase of its new scarlet, Andrew Carnegie.

Richard Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O., vase of Afterglow.

Stevenson Bros., Govanstown, Baltimore, Md., their new pink, Splendor.

Pierre Schneider, Kirkwood, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress, Mrs. T. W. Lawson and Lady Bountiful.

James W. Dunford, Clayton, Aristocrat, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress and White Perfection.

Henry Johann, Collinsville, Ill., vase of Aristocrat.

W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood, vase of Beacon.

E. W. Guy, Belleville, Rose-pink Enchantress and Enchantress.

St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, its new pink seedling No. 20, cross of Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Lawson.

Charles Beyer, vase of Enchantress.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, vase of mixed varieties.

John Steidle, of Central, two vases of mixed varieties.

After the regular business was disposed of, the pottery committee reported progress and was given until the May meeting, in order to complete the $10,000 subscription fund.

The trustees reported that the club had to vacate its present quarters, as alterations in the building will do away with the meeting hall. They were instructed to report on new meeting rooms at the March meeting.

A communication from the local Horticultural Society, asking the club members to assist in making its spring show a success, was read. This communication was referred to the trustees, to be acted on as they see fit.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, addressed the meeting in the interest of the Illinois State Florists' Association and invited all to attend its meeting. A list of thirty local florists who would attend was handed him.

It was decided to hold our annual rose meeting March 12. The secretary and the trustees were instructed to prepare for the exhibition at once. Growers of new roses will be asked to send their varieties for exhibition.

The chair appointed Messrs. Fillmore, Ude and Bentzen to act as judges on the exhibition. Their report was as follows:

Rose-pink Enchantress, J. W. Dunford, first; E. W. Guy, second.

White carnation, J. W. Dunford, first, with White Perfection; P. Schneider, second, with Bountiful; E. Guy, third, with Bountiful.

Best red, J. W. Pilcher, first, with Beacon.

Aristocrat, J. W. Dunford, first; Henry Johann, second.

Lawson, P. Schneider, first.

Enchantress, J. W. Dunford, first; P. Schneider, second; C. Beyer, third.

Mixed vase, J. F. Ammann, first; John Steidle, second and third.

Afterglow, by R. Witterstaetter, received the club's certificate of merit.

Splendor, by Stevenson Bros.; A. Carnegie, by Chicago Carnation Co., and Seedling No. 20, by St. Clair Floral Co., received honorable mention.

The question box brought out a good discussion on carnations. After adjournment all present were invited to a fine lunch. At the rose meeting in March this will be repeated.

Various Notes.

Wm. Adels, for many years with Mrs. M. M. Ayers, died February 11, at the residence of his mother, at the age of 35 years, after a short illness. Mr. Adels was well known in the trade here. He leaves a wife and young son. The funeral took place February 13, from his mother's residence. Quite a few in the trade attended the funeral and extended their sympathy to the bereaved family.

Congratulations were extended last week to Harry Young, who will now be known as Grandpa Harry. His many friends in the trade will be glad to learn the news.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club two of the oldest florists in the city attended. They were Carew Sanders, aged 80, and Francis Fillmore, aged 83. Both were congratulated on their healthy appearance.

C. C. Sanders was at the last meeting of the executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society and was elected chairman of the committee. He reports that the hall for the spring flower show had not as yet been selected, but that the chances are that the show will be held in the same hall as last year, the Masonic temple on Grand avenue.

John Steidle, at Central, was in hard luck recently. His large smokestack blew down, but no damage was done to any of the houses. The stack has been rebuilt and all is well.

Carl Beyer reports heavy plant decoration orders. The Western Rowing Club ball and the Concordia Turners' ball are on for this week. Mr. Beyer is still on the crippled list, having hurt his kneecap recently.

According to the reports of our four wholesale houses, there were consigned to them 300,000 California violets Thursday, February 13, and nearly 200,000 the next day. Thursday they brought 75 cents per hundred and Friday 50 cents. Many large advance orders were booked for St. Valentine's day.

Among the club members who live in the surrounding towns and who attended the last club meeting were: Henry Johann and Charlie Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; E. W. Guy, A. S. Halstead and A. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill.; J. W. Dunford, Clayton; John Steidle, Central; F. W. Ude, Pierre Schneider, Wm. Winter, Frank Vennemann, W. J. Pilcher and J. H. Ahner, of Kirkwood; Edwin Denker, St. Charles; S. Van Hook, Ferguson. If our city members would take as much interest, the club would have large meetings each month.

Among the traveling salesmen in town last week were Joe Rolker, of August Rolker & Sons, New York. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

"What shall I say of the cut flower market and the outlook?" was the general query which I put to the men who determine values, the wholesale merchants of the street. And the consensus of reply is, "There is no strength to the market, and the outlook is anything but cheerful." Low as were the quotations of a week ago, the actual bottom was beneath them. In fact, for some stock there was no bottom and a good deal was unsalable at any price. The only sustaining happenings were the holidays, Lincoln's birthday, which was of little avail, and the lift of St. Valentine's, which was more effective than usual in the popularity of gifts of flowers. The Kruger funeral was the most remarkable demonstration of public grief and sympathy New York has seen in years, and the many brilliant dinners and weddings have kept the retailers busy and saved the wholesale marts from complete stagnation.

The Shonts wedding, the most elaborate of the week, used large quantities of Beauties and orchids and was a most artistic affair, doing M. A. Bowe great credit. Even the bridegroom count, from Paris, sat up and took notice when the florist had completed his work.

But so great is the flood of stock arriving that none of these things seems sufficient to deplete the supply and now the increasing shipments of roses have begun. Doubtless before the week closes these, too, will join the procession. The retail department of the business is not complaining. Prices are so low and funeral work so abundant, to many there has been a harvest during these lean weeks and in all a spirit of optimism is noted. Confidence in all lines of business is being restored, and apart from the cut flower department there is no complaint. It is hardly necessary to particularize this week. Look over the quotations and see for yourself what they were on Monday, and Monday is usually top for the week.

Carnations have suffered the most, even 50 cents per hundred for excellent quality being accepted February 15. In large quantities even lower figures were touched. Some of the wholesalers here receive over 10,000 a day on the average. Multiply that by forty and you have some conception of the enormous receipts, and nearly everybody who grows carnations now is growing the best of the newer varieties and growing them well.

Violets seldom rise beyond 40 cents. Occasionally 50 cents is reached, never more, and the remnants of each day go to the street, often as low as $1 per thousand. Valley, too, has fallen. The best of it does not go above 2 cents and the street corners take the rest of it and peddle it at 5 cents a bunch.

Close at hand are the shipments of southern narcissi and the beginning of Lent's six weeks of penance, as if all the atonement necessary had not already been made.

Various Notes.

St. Valentine's day was ahead of expectations. We are hoping Washington's birthday, the last of the week, may bring an old-time Saturday and be the beginning of normal conditions and better times.

The A. J. Fellouris Co. has been incorporated in this city, with a capital stock of $5,000. The directors are Antonio J. Fellouris, Spiro J. Loupy and Gabriel G. Malhami.

The weather is again spring-like. After all, New York is not a bad winter resort. Judging by some of the retail windows, spring is near and the warnings of the squirrels and the hedge-hog are baseless.

In Small's, primroses and forsythia make a brilliant effect. All the retailers who are worthy of the name are taking advantage of these abnormal prices and displaying their decorative ability. Siebrecht's, Smythe's, Young's and McConnell's are worth walking a mile to see. So it is at Bowe's, and up at David Clarke's Sons, on upper Broadway; at Nugent's and Donohoe's on Twenty-eighth street; at Wilson's and Masur's in Brooklyn, and at Myers' and Duer's, on Madison avenue. Visiting florists should not leave the city without studying the skillful work and the charming effects these artists produce daily.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club February 29, at the St. Denis hotel, promises to be a great success. Chairman Walter Sheridan is receiving many engagements of tickets daily, and it is sincerely hoped that the happy occasion may bring together an assemblage of over 200. The misunderstanding as to the exclusiveness of the affair should be corrected. It is not necessary to be a member of the club to enjoy this annual festivity. Everybody will be made welcome and every member is requested to bring a friend with him. Dress suits are not necessary. The idea is to have this year's dinner as popular as those of ten years ago, when extra room and tables were required. Send your name at once to Mr. Sheridan. No one can afford to miss it. A fine program of music, eloquence and all that goes to create and cement good fellowship.

George V. Nash, of the Botanical Gardens, lectured Wednesday afternoon at the American Institute on "Ornamental Shrubs," illustrated with stereopticon views.

Wernz & Koehne are meeting with great success since their removal to aristocratic Fifth avenue. Their wedding decoration of Grace church last week was a most creditable accomplishment and their career is a standing demonstration of what the mission of the young men in floriculture is to be in New York.

A goodly delegation from this city and vicinity, including President Traendly,

John J. Foley had a large addition to his regular trade this week because of the Emerald ball. He is adding to the scope of his floral photograph album each season.

Le Moult, on the Bowery, is opening a branch of his famous headquarters in the Bronx, near his residence. Mr. Le Moult has been identified with the florists' business almost since New York was New Amsterdam. His landscape work at his home in upper New York is a remarkable accomplishment. Commencing with a perfectly level piece of ground 100 feet square, he has built hills and dales and decorated with hedges and trees until the transformation is the talk of the town, his residence at the top being as unique and attractive as the landscaping. His downtown store is at the terminus of the Williamsburg new bridge and has been a landmark for several generations.

The plantsmen are busy. Eight weeks only are left for Easter preparation. A good many orders are booked already, the growers tell me. Most of them are duplicates of 1907.

The seedsmen are the first to feel the throb of spring. Already the orders are arriving encouragingly, and with no evidence of loss of confidence in the good times coming. The recovery from the temporary and largely local depression seems assured, and if the advance orders and the success of the traveling representatives are fair indications of what is to be, we may look forward confidently to a splendid season's business.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was a pleasant one, as well as the weather of the last week. This was indeed a great help to business, for violets, sweet peas and valley were worn a great deal on the street without freezing. From reports, business was beyond expectations, for all the violets in town were sold by noon. However, sweet peas and valley make a good valentine, and a large quantity of this stock was disposed of. Aside from the holiday business, trade has been good.

Various Notes.

On February 14 the regular meeting of the club was held at Saturn hall, hereafter to be the regular meeting place. It was indeed gratifying to the old members and a good incentive to the new, for the attendance was large and as a result applications for the admission of twenty new members were received. On account of the fiscal year ending soon, and the necessity of electing new officers, the applicants were elected as members on the same night.

All officers were present and a few remarks by President Neubeck opened the meeting. The regular order of business ensued and nominations for officers for the year were received. At this point Wallace Eiss gave a very interesting talk on the manner in which the club had been run and further stated that we should have life and feeling in the doings of the club from now on. Nominations were then received, as follows: President, Chas. Sandiford and Mr. Reichart; vice-president, David J. Scott, of Corfu, and Geo. E. McClure, son of the vice-president of the S. A. F.; secretary, J. Rowland Cloudsley; financial secretary, Emil Bruecker; treasurer, Wallace Eiss.

The order of business then closed, after a few points of interest were discussed. An entertainment committee was also selected to maintain interest among the members. This committee was up to the handle at once and arranged a party for February 24. Everybody is invited and we hope to see a large attendance.

After the meeting a neat lunch was disposed of and everybody was pleased. Cards and music followed and the evening ended very pleasantly. It was suggested by Geo. E. McClure, lately of St. Louis, that a press committee be formed to give a good account of all meetings, for he stated that he always enjoyed reading the doings of his former club. We can assure all the readers that they will always find a good account of the meetings in the REVIEW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

St. Valentine's day brought a slight acceleration of business in certain varieties of flowers. Violets were stronger than for some time. Pansies, forget-me-nots, sweet peas and red roses also profited. The retail shops were very busy during the day. Nothing more plainly shows the congested condition of the wholesale market than the fact that few orders were placed in advance. General conditions have not improved over those of a week ago, although the volume of business this week will undoubtedly be larger than that of the corresponding week last year, which carried us into Lent. Carnations have never been finer than at present; many growers are sending in nothing that falls below the special class. But so much does the supply exceed the demand that comparatively few of these special flowers can be sold at listed quotations, much of the stock being bought at cheap figures, some finding no market at all. Roses have also felt the effects of lack of demand, prices being easier than those of a week ago. Valley is greatly overdone. It is reported that some of the principal growers are cutting down the quantity at each forcing. Smilax and Asparagus plumosus continue excellent stock. Cattleyas constitute one of the bright features of the market. Acacia pubescens has made its appearance in quantity. Gardenias are scarce and in fair demand. Sweet peas are plentiful and of excellent quality. The supply of Paper Whites is rapidly falling off. Tulips are at their best; yellow, white, pink and double orange can be had in quantity. The prices realized for all bulbous flowers are very low.

MRS. JARDINE

We are most favorably impressed with Mrs. Jardine, and believe that it will make one of the best selling varieties of roses in the cut flower market during the winter months. Its strong points are its pleasing color (a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon-pink), its long, heavy stems (even the shorter stems hold their flowers erect), and its keeping qualities. From a grower's standpoint this promising variety is almost ideal; vigorous, healthy, free-blooming, producing few flowers of poor grade, and retaining its beautiful color even in dark weather.

We offer strong plants of Mrs. Jardine at the following prices: 2½-in. pots, $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000. Grafted Stock add $5.00 per 100

We can supply a limited quantity of cut flowers of Mrs. Jardine, $4.00 per doz.; 3 days' notice required.

East and West.

This is not a season when the building record is likely to be broken. Two important additions, however, to the glass of the district supplying this market with cut flowers have already been planned and will be carried into effect as soon as spring opens. One is at Garrettford, the other at Southampton. At the former place, James Verner, famous as gardener in charge of the greenhouses of the late Anthony J. Drexel, will add some 15,000 feet of glass to his place. This, if I recollect rightly, will fully double Mr. Verner's plant. The addition at Southampton, on the place of Stephen Mortensen, is in the shape of one house 43x265 feet, or an addition of pretty nearly the same amount of glass as at Mr. Verner's. It is interesting to note that these additions are made by two of the most conservative, as well as capable, growers in this district. It is also interesting to note that the stock coming from these places goes, if we may so describe it, from west to east, and from east to west. For Mr. Verner, who is out on one of the Pennsylvania Railroad lines, sends his stock across Broad street to the Leo Niessen Co., while Mr. Mortensen, who is out on one of the Reading lines, ships his stock across Broad street to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Various Notes.

William Keaton, of Andalusia, Pa., has been sending some exceptionally fine Princess of Wales and Luxonne violets to this market. Mr. Keaton, who has served an apprenticeship in one of our best violet schools, has developed during his first year into an important factor in the violet market. He not only grows first-class stock, but bunches it properly, so that his stock compares favorably with the best seen in the market. Mr. Keaton consigns his flowers to W. E. McKissick.

The last meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held February 18. A schedule of prizes for the November exhibition was arranged.

Eugene Bernheimer has been looking after the financial interests of the Florex Gardens during the last week, owing to the illness of Henry C. Geiger.

George A. Strohlein has returned from Europe.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving gardenias in quantity. Choice stock of this sweet-scented flower is scarce at present.

Henry F. Michell has returned from Florida.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. received heavy shipments of myosotis for St. Valentine's day.

Walter P. Stokes reports the mailing seed business as opening in excellent shape. Mr. Stokes is well pleased with the crops produced at his Floracroft Gardens, at Moorestown, N. J.

W. and Harry F. Evans, Rowlandville, Pa., commenced shipping fine bunches of the delicate Acacia pubescens to the Leo Niessen Co. February 17. This is the first acacia to reach this market, with the exception of some from the Hugh Graham Co. greenhouses at Logan. It will be remembered that when the Messrs. Evans had to choose between sacrificing their Acacia pubescens tree or building a larger greenhouse, they at once decided to build the greenhouse—higher.

Philip Freud, who arranges the show windows of a seed store on Market street above Tenth street, made another hit a few days ago. He depended for his piece de resistance on Japanese air plants, or sea moss. He threw in a little scarlet crepe to add color, and a Teddy bear to add life, and sold a measly little 1,500, mostly singly, some in baskets, at a profit. I hardly dare tell you what the profit was, but it was quite satisfactory, especially for a dull time. When seeds are booming, of course, the seeds will go in the window and should prove more profitable.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., reports great preparations for Easter, when his house will have many things that every florist knows and wants, and some things that many florists do not know and will want.

HORTICULTURISTS.

Their Tribulations and Rewards.

At a dinner given by the Nassau County Horticultural Society, of New York state, January 29, 1908, the following address was delivered by Buell G. Davis, editor of the Glen Cove Echo:

"The horticulturist has my sympathy, for he surely has a hard row to hoe. The preparation of his ground is often harrowing. The scattering of seed is a sower job. He sets a plant and it leaves the first oportunity. His cultivation of flowers involves cutting experiences.

"But tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope and, in the end, realization. The common weed is evolved into a beautiful foliage plant, the wild flower is transformed into the cultivated blossom, and the outcome of his industry and genius is the marvel and admiration of a community, and often of a nation or even the world. His vocation is in a way a demonstration of successful life. The honors and emoluments of living are earned by labor and sacrifice, just as the choicest products of the garden and greenhouse represent care and solicitude, and thus you workers in this profession are preaching the way to success in all forms of industrial and intellectual effort, the way to make the most and get the most out of existence.

"With my sympathy you have my congratulations. You are doing a work which, operatively, adds to the joy of the world, and, speculatively, is an example of promise to all who appreciate and profit by it. It gives the local press great pleasure to note your progress and wish you Godspeed."

PRIMULA QUEEN OF NORTH.

According to the British gardeners' magazines, the new primula, Queen of the North, which Dickson, Brown & Tait, of Manchester, England, have introduced this season, is so highly meritorious that it can hardly fail to attain a high degree of popularity. The form and texture of the flowers are notable, but important as are these attributes, the claims of the variety for consideration do not wholly rest upon them. Rather do they rest upon the distinct combination of coloring the variety affords, and the effectiveness of the plants when in bloom. Queen of the North is described as having been raised from a cross between Avalanche, one of the finest of the pure white varieties belonging to the florists' type, and The Lady, a stellate form bearing white flowers, and remarkable for the deep red coloring of the leaf stems and flower stalks, and the deep bronzy hue of the foliage. In this form the characteristics of the two parents are happily combined, the flowers being like those of Avalanche in size, form and purity, while the flowers are borne on long stalks, and the leaves and stems are dark in color, as in The Lady. The large white flowers present an extremely pleasing contrast to the dark hue of the foliage.

BULBS IN THE SCILLY ISLES.

The Isles of Scilly are, as many of our readers know from of old, about twenty-five miles out in the Atlantic from Lands End, the southwestern corner of England, and the source of a large part of the supply of bulbous flowers, especially daffodils, in the London market. The climatic conditions are especially favorable, so that the great business of the Scillonians is flower culture, and practically everyone, from the lord proprietor downward, has an interest in the trade. The credit of discovering the commercial possibilities of the islands for flower production must be accorded to the late Augustus Dorrien-Smith, who developed an extensive bulb farm at Tresco, and ere long the rest of the islanders took up the culture, until now the Isle of St. Mary's seems

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

clothed in daffodils in the early spring time, bulbs filling the ground from quite near the seashore up to where the hard rock puts a bar against cultivation. The industry has developed until in the season that began at Christmas, 1906, and ended in April, 1907, nearly 900 tons of flowers, filling about 140,000 boxes, were dispatched from the islands.

The earliest flowers are opened under glass; indeed, almost all the flowers, even late in the spring, are fully expanded under glass, to insure clean, clear blooms, but in January the broad, light houses, chiefly span-roofed, are heated, and the flowers, culled from the fields as their buds show color, are set in deep flower pots—made without a drainage hole—in water. Here they expand quickly, and on the central stage or in an adjoining glass-roofed shed they are packed in boxes and dispatched to the salesmen. Thousands of bulbs are also forced into bloom in these houses by the larger growers, and they are grown in boxes, pots, or broad pans, so that flower time in the Scillies now lasts from Christmas almost to June.

The work of bunching and packing is carried on very largely by women and girls, and during the busiest season there is a special arrangement with the school authorities, whereby the young people are released from some part of the school time, so that they may assist in the ingathering and dispatch of the harvest of flowers.

TOO MUCH NITRATE OF SODA.

I wish to inquire if we could depend on getting good rose plants from roses that were given too much nitrate of soda. They received this set-back last fall, and while they are now beginning to improve and show new life, the stems of the flowers are weak and short. Would you consider it good policy to hold such plants over another year by transplanting them into fresh dirt? J. B.

Roses which have received an overdose of nitrate of soda, or of any other food to the extent of sickening them, are in no condition to take cuttings or scions from. The reduced vitality of these plants would also make them undesirable subjects to carry over. Better invest in fresh, young stock and plant in good season—in June. Ribes.

Vegetable Forcing.

Simon Dumser, of Elgin, Ill., gets after the greenfly in his lettuce houses with hot water. He uses the city water, passing it through a heater, and says that water hot enough to be uncomfortable to the fingers at the nozzle does not hurt the lettuce, but that the greenfly does not like it and the hot water is a preventive and even a cure for lettuce rot.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Cucumbers, 60c to 80c doz.; leaf lettuce, 17½c to 20c case; mushrooms, 25c to 50c lb.; radishes, 20c to 40c doz. bunches.

New York, Feb. 17.—Beet tops, 75c to $1 bu. box; No. 1 cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.75 doz.; No. 2 cucumbers, $3 to $5 box; lettuce, 15c to 75c doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 55c lb.; radishes, $2 to $3 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 30c to 50c doz. bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 25c lb.; mint, 50c to 75c doz. bunches.

Boston, Feb. 17.—Cucumbers, $1.50 to $14 bu. box; lettuce, 40c to 75c box of 2 doz.; tomatoes, 25c to 35c lb.; chicory, $1 doz.; romaine, $1 doz.; escarolle, 75c doz.; parsley, $2.25 to $2.50 box; mint, 75c doz.; mushrooms, $2 to $2.25 per 4-lb. box; beet greens, 75c to $1 box; dandelion greens, $1.25 to $1.50 barrel; rhubarb, 7c lb.

VEGETABLE PACKAGES.

In the Boston market cucumbers are packed in bushel boxes, the number of cucumbers varying with the size and quality. The standard lettuce box contains two dozen heads.

In the Chicago market all the lettuce locally grown under glass is of the leaf varieties. The standard case is a box roughly made, about twenty-four inches long, nine inches wide and six inches deep. These cases contain from one dozen to one and one-half dozens bunches of leaf lettuce, or two to two and one-quarter pounds.

VEGETABLE PLANTS.

I want to grow this spring, for the trade, 400,000 vegetable plants, in eastern Pennsylvania, of the following varieties: Tomato, transplanted and pot-grown; cabbage, early and late; beets, lettuce, cauliflower, pepper, egg plant, 3-inch pots; celery and sweet potato. Will you please advise me when to plant the seeds in my carnation house, which contains 8,000 square feet, and when they should go out in the coldframes or hotbeds, of 2,000 square feet? What kind of soil and temperature should they have and will pulverized sheep manure be good to mix with the soil in the coldframes?

I have always had trouble with pepper and egg plant seed. Should the seeds be soaked, or started in a hotbed with steady heat? I want to grow pot tomatoes, having them in bloom May 15. How can I grow them in 4-inch pots to have them about twelve to fifteen inches high and thick and stocky?

I would like an article on each vegetable mentioned, stating how to handle it from the sowing to the selling time; which ones can stand coldframes, which a small depth of manure and which require a hotbed. How much salt should I put in a bed 6x100 feet to keep the cabbage maggot out? Is salt good for celery seedbeds or is it best used in the bed they are transplanted to?

B. J. P.

In a carnation house temperature, cabbage and cauliflower seeds should be sown about the middle of March to give nice plants by setting-out time. Sow the seeds in flats with about two inches of soil and cover them over to the depth of one-eighth of an inch. If your seed is good and fresh, sow rather thinly, so that the little plants will not crowd one another and become drawn before they are large enough for pricking off. The time to prick off is shortly after they have made the first rough leaf. If you intend to put them in a frame at this stage, sufficient heating material should be put in the frame to maintain a temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees.

To insure good, stocky plants they should be allowed a space of two inches each way in the frame. At this distance a sash 3x6 feet will accommodate about 650 plants. Keep close and shade for a few days after transplanting, until they have obtained hold of the fresh material; then give all the light possible and sufficient air to prevent the temperature in the frame from rising above 65 degrees.

As the season advances and the weather becomes warmer, gradually give more air and, as planting-out time approaches, gradually harden off so that the sashes can be removed altogether for a few days and nights previous to planting out. This will prevent any severe check and the plants will prove much more satisfactory.

Tomato seeds need not be sown until about two weeks later than the cabbage, as they grow fast after they are once started and cannot be planted out before danger of frost is over, which is quite a little later than cabbage can be set out. The seeds may be sown in flats, the same as cabbage, and if you have room in your house, the plants should be pricked over into flats again, about two inches apart, and potted up when about three inches high. They require a night temperature of 60 degrees to keep them growing freely. The only way to keep them thick and stocky is to give them plenty of light and air and avoid crowding. Plants that are not intended for pots can be pricked out into frames as directed for cabbage.

Lettuce and beets can be sown about the same time as tomatoes and handled as directed for cabbage and cauliflower, only they can be put closer together in the frame, as they are smaller growers.

Probably your trouble with egg plants and peppers is that you have been growing them too cool. These require a temperature of at least 65 degrees. There is no need of soaking the seed, but start as you suggest, in a hotbed with steady heat, and keep them growing. Once checked, they never make good plants.

The tubers of sweet potatoes should be started in a good, warm hotbed. The offsets should be removed from them when about three inches high and potted up into 3-inch pots. These pots should be put back in the warm frame and the plants kept moving right along until the weather is sufficiently warm for hardening them off preparatory to planting outdoors, which cannot safely be done before the end of May. About six weeks is required from the time you put the tubers in to the time when the plants will be ready for setting out.

Unless for early celery, which only succeeds in certain localities, there is no need of sowing seed indoors. The best celery is invariably that which is sown and grown outdoors. If early celery is wanted, it could be started in the greenhouse and pricked out into a coldframe. About the middle of March would be quite early enough to sow it. But for the main crop the best place to sow the seed is in some sheltered corner outdoors, as early in April as the ground is in condition to work. It is quite a hardy seed. We have had excellent plants from seeds which were covered with snow to a depth of four inches after they had been sown.

Regarding salt for celery, I think the best time and place to use that is after the matured article has been taken up, nicely washed and put on the table ready to be eaten. If your soil is fairly good, there should be no need of adding sheep manure or any other fertilizing material, as there is no need to push the plants in this way. Too rich soil would only tend to make soft, lanky growth, which above all things is what should be avoided for young plants of any kind which have to be transplanted to the open ground.

I do not think you will need salt for your cabbage any more than for celery, as the cabbage maggot is not likely to cause any trouble at this early stage. If you have had trouble with it formerly, the best plan is to change your soil, as you could not add enough salt to kill it out without injury to the plants.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE Dakota Improved Seed Co., A. W. Wheeler, Mgr., Mitchell, S. D., is sending out its first catalogue, of thirty-two pages.

W. J. FOSGATE, of Santa Clara, Cal., was in Chicago at the end of last week. He reported business good on his eastern trip. He has taken a side trip to visit relatives in Georgia and from there will return home by a southern route.

THE bean growers do not seem to be in as good shape as the pea growers. Reports are to the effect that it is much harder to book contract business for beans. The final result, it is thought, will be just as good, however.

THE pea growers report contract booking of orders right up to the limit of what they can expect to produce. This looks good as far as it goes. It is reported that some of the orders are taken on a basis of three-fourths of a full delivery guaranteed. This is a feature that may not be so good.

SEED trade reports during the present week have the same general tone as a week ago. Business is reported to be normal in all lines. Enough stock seems to be available for all immediate needs. The weather is such as to hold in check the purchasing of seeds ahead of time. This will have a good effect in equalizing values. Stocks supposed to be scarce, and for which a higher price is asked than conditions really warrant, will probably drop to somewhere near proper values by the time the seeds are actually needed, and stocks that are thought to be overplentiful will probably rise in price.

A SHARP advance in the price of onions has given seeds of the Globe varieties a slight boost. The trouble is, however, that the high prices at which seeds of the Globe varieties have sold for the last year or two induced the growers to save seed of their own; consequently there is a smaller demand for Globe seed than there has been for many years. There will be just as much of it planted, however. The same thing will happen on the flat varieties before long and thus will come low prices again. Just as soon as the price of seeds goes beyond a certain limit, the man who uses large quantities of it will grow his own. Professional seed growers must keep this in mind.

the father of Walter Helms and was handed down to him and now he turns the management to his son Edward.

THERE is reported to be a great rush for seeds of the finer sorts of sweet peas with the trade in England.

SOME onion-set growers hope that onion seed may come within the reach of all; others hope that it may not.

ONION SETS are moving out rapidly, with no easing up of the demand. There are yet six good weeks for any who have a surplus of this article to move it. Do not get discouraged.

A. C. HOYT says that up to the present time Toledo's clover receipts amount to about 23,000 bags and in 1897, when we had the largest seed crop in the history of the country, Toledo's receipts were 160,000 bags, or about seven times as much as this year. In 1897 local dealers were selling seed at $2.75 to $3 per bushel, now at $11 to $12 per bushel. Even at the prevailing price farmers claim it pays to sow clover seed and some say it would not be prohibitive at $20 per bushel.

H. VAN BUSKIRK, seed grower at Rocky Ford, Colo., has recently returned from a trip to California.

LATEST advices from Holland are of severe cold with the ground bare of snow, and the bulb growers say January was a trying month on the bulbs.

FIELD corn that will germinate a high percentage is reported to be exceedingly hard to get. The late maturing sorts are the varieties that are hardest to obtain.

LILY BULBS.

F. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York, met Robert Fulton, of the same firm, at Chicago February 17, the latter on his way home from Japan, where he has been for several months. Mr. Henry says that the surplus of multiflorum bulbs dumped into the London auction rooms this season does not indicate an overproduction of bulbs, but a lessening of the demand for that variety, the call now being for giganteums, of which it is impossible to supply the demand. He says that the crop of multiflorum in Japan this year will be less than last year, with a good increase of giganteums. The crop in Formosa will be from 150,000 to 200,000 bulbs, controlled by two firms, and Mr. Henry says these are supposed to be the true Jap longiflorum, but some black stems are found among them. He says the Azores crop of bulbs does not yet exceed 500,000. The Bermuda growers are now employing much more careful methods than they did a few years ago and the quality of the output there, which has fallen from 5,000,000 bulbs to 1,500,000, is rapidly improving.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending Feb. 8 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto ...	231	$3091	Millet 1216		$3603
Canary	1	3	Mustard	200	1940
Caraway ...	600	5789	Poppy	500	3503

Clover	710	21865	Sugar beet...	603	4163

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $1,846.

SEED TRADE IN GERMANY.

With the seed growers at Erfurt, Germany, at the beginning of February it was reported that the main transatlantic and antipodean orders were mostly en route, or arrived at their destination, but other quarters of the globe were still waiting for their supply of seeds, and Great Britain was loud in its demands to be promptly supplied, so that the season, somewhat later than usual this year, is really only at its height at date of this report. Most kinds of vegetable seeds have been going off well, especially cauliflower, Savoy cabbage, brussels sprouts and parsley, while peas, beets, cabbage, leek, lettuce, radish, carrot, spinach, and most kinds of herbs have all been in demand. Dwarf French beans have shown an indisposition to move off, but runner beans have had relatively a much brisker sale. Natural grasses have moved off better than was expected, considering the high prices of most species this season. The sale of flower seeds is thus far satisfactory. The demand for most of the leading articles has been good and sustained. Orders for Viola odorata can only be partly filled. The stocks of some classes of asters are running low, especially among the dwarf sections.

At Quedlinburg it is asserted that the seed trade on the whole has been doing a fair amount of business, but comparatively little money has been made by the growers, as many seeds sold below the cost of their production, owing to the low prices that ruled in other districts or countries. Wrinkled peas have not met with the usual sale. Brussels sprouts, carrots, celeriac, chervil, chicory, corn salad, cress, radish, spinach and Swedish turnips sold readily and there will be little left over. Borecole, cabbages, cauliflower, endive, gourds, pumpkins, kohlrabi, parsley, parsnips and turnips met with the usual demand, while leek, lettuces and onions did not sell so readily as usual. The demand for mangel and sugar beet remains, thus far, behind that of the last several seasons. On the whole flower seeds met with an increased demand. Nearly all classes of dwarf aster and some of the half-dwarf and tall ones, of which the crop turned out exceedingly small, are sold out long since.

THE DISCLAIMER AGAIN.

Our friend, Dr. Van Fleet, of the Rural New-Yorker, is feeling badly over the fact that seedsmen will not give any warranty whatsoever as to the results of planting their merchandise. Referring to the Bolgiano case, he says:

"These repeated decisions appear to leave seed buyers no encouragement for damage claims against dealers when the purchase proves worthless, but it may be doubted whether the victory will turn out unalloyed benefit for the seed trade. Manifestly the seed dealer cannot, in consideration of the varying character of seasons, soils and the skill of planters, guarantee a profitable crop from the seeds he sells, but he can, at least, assume reasonable responsibility for the genuineness and purity of his goods. If he is not willing to do this he is best out of the business. Some of the more reputable seedsmen in practice do this, making good the direct loss when it can be shown they are at fault, but for fear of being victimized by irresponsible buyers, do not care to publish the fact; others appear inclined to take refuge behind their legal disclaimer and ignore all appeals for failures. The outcome is certain to be weakening of confidence in the entire business.

"I am in a position to know that dissatisfaction with the quality of staple seeds furnished by a few dealers hitherto well regarded is on the increase. The last three seasons have been notably unfavorable for seed growing in many localities, and conspicuous shortages have been from time to time reported, yet certain handlers always claim to have an abundance of the scarcest sorts to fill orders—under the non-warranty clause! We hear of seeds being saved in quantity from the refuse of canneries, old seeds being recleaned, and trash of all kinds warehoused for the coming season's trade. Many of these reports are doubtless exaggerated, but it will not do to take too close refuge under the disclaimer, and sell without testing anything that comes to hand. Good seeds are worth good money—some quite a lot of it—they should be guaranteed as far as compatible with commercial safety, and at least sold with the understanding that any obvious mistakes will be rectified. The reasonable conclusion, under present conditions, appears to be to deal only with seedsmen of established probity.''

Really, the doctor takes it too seriously. Practically every seedsman stands ready to adjust any reasonable complaint, and in every case which has gone to court unreasonable claims were made, as in the Bolgiano matter, where $3,600 was demanded on a purchase of seeds for $2.45.

LILY BULBS IN THE U. S.

Referring to the account of the work of the Department of Agriculture in growing bulbs of Easter lilies from seeds in the United States, published in the REVIEW of January 23 and February 6, George W. Oliver continues:

Pollination of the Flowers.

To insure the production of seed, the flowers must be artificially pollinated, as capsules are rarely formed without this operation. The pollen is not scattered by wind to any extent and insects evidently visit the flowers without accomplishing a satisfactory transfer of pollen from the stamen to the stigmas; therefore recourse must be had to hand pollination. This consists in taking three or four stamens between the thumb and forefinger and rubbing the anthers, which are copiously supplied with pollen, against the viscid surface of the stigmas. It is best to transfer the pollen from the flowers of one plant to those of another, as the flowers then set seed better than when the pollen of one flower is transferred to the stigma of the same flower or to other flowers on the same plant.

The best time to select pollen is when the anthers have shrunk considerably and the pollen adheres to them in great masses. This should be applied to the stigmas shortly after the segments of the flowers open; the stigmatic surface will then be covered with a viscid substance which enables the pollen to adhere very easily. After pollinating the flowers on outdoor-grown plants it is advisable to cover them with paper bags. This is not necessary with plants grown in the greenhouse.

When the flower is ready for pollen it usually occupies a horizontal position, and when the pollen has performed its mission the capsule gradually assumes an upright position, indicating that fertilization of the ovules has taken place. Not more than four capsules should be allowed to mature on one plant, as the production of seed seems to be a considerable drain on its resources.

The time required to ripen seed outdoors varies with the climatic conditions. In a greenhouse the seed ripens in about two months after fertilization is effected. Those plants which set seed do not go to rest at the same period as those without seed capsules, but remain fresh and green for several weeks after the others have matured.

The ripening of the seed is indicated by the capsules turning from green to a light brownish color and splitting open at the top. They should then be gathered into a bag or box and spread out to dry. When dry the seeds should be removed from the capsules and stored in a cool, dry place until sown.

The plants selected for seed bearers should not be subjected to checks during the growing period. Water should be given when necessary and the ground cultivated as soon as possible afterwards. A mulch of very old stable litter helps to keep the soil cool and moist. Observance of these details will give the best seed-producing conditions; otherwise the capsules will not fill satisfactorily.

Sowing the Seed.

The seed should be sown as soon as ripe, which is usually about the latter part of August or the beginning of September, in a place where close attention can be given to shading, ventilating and watering. The method which has given most satisfaction in California is to sow the seed in well-prepared ground covered with a cloth house. This is easily and cheaply constructed.

The roof should be high enough from the ground to provide plenty of space for a person to move about without stooping. The soil should be about six inches deep, on top of about eight inches of stable manure. The bed should be raised above the surface of the ground three or four inches and edged with narrow boards a few inches above the paths; these will keep the soil in position and give a neat appearance.

The soil should consist of sandy loam mixed with screenings of dried horse manure, not for the purpose of enriching the soil, but to make it porous and easily worked. Fresh manure is injurious to the young plants. Make the surface of the beds level with a garden rake, sow the seed thinly, and press down with a piece of board. The seeds should then be covered with one-half inch of soil and cocoanut fiber in equal parts; ground redwood bark will answer the purpose quite as well, the idea being to keep the surface porous.

Water should be given through a fine sprinkler whenever the soil shows indications of becoming dry. The seeds should germinate in from three to six weeks. In April, or as soon as the weather will permit, the cloth may be removed gradually in order to harden off the young plants previous to planting out. The seeds may also be sown in a frame built and covered so as to exclude sunshine and heavy rains while germination takes place; and while the plants are small care should be taken not to have the seed beds too wet at the planting-out period, as in this condition the seedlings are more easily wilted than otherwise when put in the field.

Pricking Off the Seedlings.

It is a question whether or not it pays to prick off the seedlings previous to planting in the open field. Judging from the behavior of most other crops so treated, one would suppose that it would be the best practice.

Those of the seedlings which were pricked off the past season undoubtedly showed stronger growth than those left in the seed beds till planting-out time, but it is claimed the operation does not show any beneficial effects on the plants a few weeks after being in the field. At any rate, there is much to be gained in thinning out the seedlings and pricking them off when they come up too thickly in the seed bed.

I COULD not do without the REVIEW if I would and I would not if I could. The help derived from your paper is worth many times the price paid.—A. R. WATKINS, Gaithersburg, Ind.

IT gives me great pleasure to remit another dollar for the renewal of my subscription to the REVIEW, the gem of horticultural journals, which I look for most eagerly every week and which informs me in up-to-date style of what is going on in our profession. I have been perfectly satisfied with the paper in the past, and hope to give it the support of my little dollar, and any other support that I can render it, for many a year.—C. ADAMS, Memphis, Tenn.

The best way to collect an account is to place it with the National Florists' Board of Trade
56 Pine Street, NEW YORK
Why? Because many debtors will pay the Board, fearing otherwise a bad rating in our Credit List. Full information as to methods and rates given on application.

PACIFIC COAST.

Seattle, Wash.—The Alki Floral Co. has been incorporated, with $1,800 authorized capital stock.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Trade conditions have remained much the same since our last report, varying but little from day to day. It is sufficient to say that the demand in all lines fully equals the supply. A left sweep of that Chicago blizzard came our way and caused the growers a few sleepless nights and much anxiety in filling their wholesale orders. Cut flowers are scarce, particularly roses, and prices have advanced accordingly. The celebration of the Chinese New Year is now in progress. It lasts for two weeks, during which John has the time of his life. His sporting proclivities naturally crop out at this season, but he always pays his debts. The Chinaman is a good customer on this occasion, usually selecting the more highly scented cut flowers, and it is estimated that no less than 300 azaleas adorn the festive boards in the celestial quarter.

Various Notes.

The firm of Rahn & Herbert is meeting with great success. They say so and their customers corroborate it. When they leased the Pfunder greenhouses last fall, it was an undertaking that required pluck and perseverance, as well as skill. While the houses were well filled with a various assortment of plants, yet all were not of a strictly commercial value, and good results are now being produced by the weeding out of the undesirable and the classifying of the more profitable stock. The finest bench of lilac the writer has seen in years was here ready for the market. We inspected the whole place and found that every inch of space was being utilized, and when the planting season opens this firm will have 25,000 young plants to offer to the trade.

While out walking on a recent Sunday afternoon, we called briefly on John Alstadt, Hoffman Bros., Burkhardt Bros. and George Otten, all of the west end, and learned that trade with them was equal to last year at this time, and in fact some said it was better.

Two traveling men from Milwaukee were here last week — W. G. Schucht, representing the Pollworth Co., and A. J. Currie, of Currie Bros. Co. We are glad that the coast is attracting the notice of the big eastern firms, and these two young men seemed quite equal to fulfilling the duties imposed on them.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have been treated to several kinds of weather during the last week. We had copious rainfall for the early part and plenty of warm sunshine, with fairly cold nights, for the balance. At present it looks as though we will have some pleasant weather. The month of January was a stormy proposition, and the same could be said of February until within the last few days.

Flowers are not overplentiful, with the exception of violets and narcissi, and these are going begging. Regarding prices, yellow daffodils cost the retailers from 50 to 75 cents per hundred, and the white varieties of narcissi can be had for half these figures.

Roses are commencing to show the results of the continued dark weather, and most of them are of poorer color than usual. Good whites are scarce and no fancy Beauties have been seen for some time. Carnations, especially of the white sorts, are not plentiful and the prices have stiffened a shade during the last few days.

Some inside sweet peas are being brought into town. They cost the stores about $1.50 per dozen bunches. Fruit blossoms are now in full blast. The almond is past its prime, but early plum is taking its place and is in good demand.

Wild maidenhair is being brought in from the country and is taking the place of the cultivated variety, which has the appearance of having been very closely cropped. Smilax is rising in price and seems to be getting very short in length.

Various Notes.

Harry Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, left for Portland, Ore., on his return trip eastward during the present week. His wife accompanied him on his present trip.

Wm. Nelson, a well-known nurseryman of Ashland, Ore., is in town looking up some varieties of nursery stock. He reports everything booming in his neighborhood.

At the last meeting of the Society of Hortensia, of Alameda, the proposition of holding a spring flower show was discussed at length, and details of it will be announced later.

A report of the death of Robert Petrie, of Alameda, will be found in the obituary column. G.

CARNATIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

Rooting the Cuttings.

The present is about the best possible time in California for the rooting of carnation cuttings without bottom heat. This is easily accomplished either in a coldframe or in a glass house without fire heat. It is also possible to root the cuttings in the open, but this is more easily accomplished after March 1, as the excess of moisture at the present time usually interferes greatly with their growth. When it becomes slightly warmer overhead and the excess of moisture has not to be contended with, there is no particular difficulty in rooting cuttings. But if the plants are wanted for spring sales, they will usually be too late if grown this way. Hence, a coldframe or the bench in a greenhouse will regulate the temperature so as to make it possible to root cuttings at least two months in advance of those outside.

The cuttings themselves are better if taken from inside-grown plants and, if no bottom heat is to be used in striking them, much better results can be had if the cuttings are taken from plants that have been forced little, if at all, during the winter. Cuttings from outside-grown plants are usually very short and stubby so early in the season.

In regard to the soil to use when bottom heat is not given, it matters little whether soil or sand is used, provided the drainage is good. This means that if soil is used there must be sufficient sand in it so that it will not hold the moisture too long. Heavy soil is out of the question, certainly, but there is an advantage in a mixture of sand and soil, in that it is possible to leave the cuttings several months in the boxes after they are rooted, if it is to be an object to keep them this way.

As the California climate is subject to sudden successions of extremely warm spells in the middle of the day and as this is one of the dangers always to be looked out for in unrooted cuttings, it is always well to have temporary shade that can be arranged at a moment's notice. In a general way, much better success can be had if the cuttings can be kept away from the glass. If the house is not too dark the boxes can be put on the floor, and I have rooted many thousands in this way when I happened to be short of room. Ventilation must be arranged for, because of the same reason that I have given for the shading. It is always better to give too much rather than too little.

Watering must be watched carefully on warm days or at times when our drying winds are upon us. The secret is to keep the cuttings moist enough and it makes no difference whether they have to be watered twice a day or twice a week. Have the soil or sand such as will not get crusty and cake on the top. Clean creek sand is the best to use, but be sure there are no fine particles of adobe mixed with it, as this makes a putty-like combination that is sure death

LIQUID FERTILIZER.

I desire a little information about liquid fertilizer. I notice that this plan has been recommended—to place a peck of fresh cow manure or sheep manure in a barrel of water and, after it has fermented, apply the water. What I would like to know is, how long does it take to ferment? Will it be necessary to remove the peck of cow or sheep manure after emptying the barrel of water, or can I leave it and add a little fresh manure from time to time? I want it to feed Beauty roses. T. H. T.

The time required for fermentation depends on the temperature to which the material is exposed and also on the kind and quality of the manure. Horse or sheep manure will ferment more quickly than will cow manure. It is easy to determine by close watching when this change takes place.

It is not at all necessary to remove the old manure so long as there is any strength remaining, the main object being to have sufficient manure in the barrel to make the liquid strong enough to be of service to the plants. Frequent weak feeding is safer and more beneficial than strong doses at long intervals.

RIBES.

SHADING FOR A PALM HOUSE.

I should like to hear from somebody who has had experience in shading large palm houses or conservatories. Is it practical and safe to paint the inside of the glass where a light, permanent shade is needed, or is it better to put it outside? What material is best for this purpose? The house under consideration is constructed with butted glass and consequently there is more or less drip.

H. D. C.

If a permanent shading material is required on tne house in question, it would be best to apply a coat of thin white lead paint, but be sure that the paint is thin when applied, for more or less dust and dirt will stick to the paint and make the shade more dense than is required. If it is intended simply to shade lightly for the summer, it would be best to use a mixture of white lead and naphtha instead of a linseed oil paint, but this mixture would need to be applied each season, as it comes off with frost and snow.

Any shading paint should only be applied to the outside of the house, for when applied to the inside of the glass it soon becomes a harbor for minute green fungi, giving the house an untidy appearance and also creating more shade than is good for most plants.

W. H. TAPLIN.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

ROBIN HARTWELL is now a partner in his father's nursery business at Dixon, Ill., and the firm is J. L. Hartwell & Son.

SIMON & SON, of Beaumont, Tex., have purchased a quarter section of land at Stowell, Tex., on which they will establish a nursery for citrus fruits.

THE city council of Cleveland, O., has passed an ordinance providing for a fine up to $100 for any person who shall plant a tree without first procuring a city license.

THE Peters Nursery Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., has now been incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are S. V. Carter, L. D. Tyson, G. W. Callahan, R. P. Gettys and R. E. Gettys.

PINUS EXCELSA, or Bhotan pine, resembles the white pine in general appearance, but it is a much shorter-lived tree. It is a handsome tree. Its long, light green needles droop gracefully from long, slender branches. This variety is an exceedingly rapid grower and makes an attractive specimen when given plenty of room to develop.

WHENEVER opportunity occurs, Berberis Thunbergii should be highly recommended to customers. This is really one of the most satisfactory hardy shrubs made use of today, and the better it is known the greater the demand there will be for it. This barberry can be advantageously planted in many ways. It makes a splendid hedge of compact, sturdy growth, requiring little or no artificial means of keeping it in shape. It makes an effective display when planted in a large or small group out in the open lawn, as well as succeeding remarkably well under the partial shade of the overhanging branches of gigantic trees.

WHEN privet hedges get naked or bare of foliage, from the base upwards, they are not very ornamental and the sooner the defect is remedied the better. In most cases the best method of correcting matters would be that of cutting the plants back to within a foot or so of the ground in spring, and this can be done without any evil results, no matter how old the plants are. One good quality of California privet is, that it stands any amount of cutting. There may be some objection, however, to this method, because of the time that will elapse before the plants are as large as formerly. In the case of such an objection having to be considered, the hedge can be made permanently presentable by planting young plants close up to the old ones, thereby hiding the defects of the latter. In a year or two it will not be noticed that resort to such a scheme had been necessary.

SHADOW MAKES ASSIGNMENT.

J. W. Shadow, proprietor of the Cedar Hill Nursery and Orchard Co., Winchester, Tenn., has made a voluntary assignment in favor of Hugh Morton, trustee, for the benefit of his creditors. The estimated cash value of the assets is $60,000 and the liabilities are $42,000. Included in the assets are twenty-two peach orchards in Alabama and Georgia. The Cedar Hill Nursery did an average annual business of $250,000 and employed a large number of hands. The business will be continued by the trustee and it is said the obligations can be met within a year.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

It is sometimes hard to discern San Jose scale, and its presence may remain unnoticed until it has accomplished a great deal of injury. For that reason it will be well, when spraying is under way, to give the trees and shrubs the benefit of the doubt by spraying everything that is in any way likely to be infested with this veritable scourge.

It is by no means safe to rely on what has been accomplished in the destruction of the San Jose scale by the spraying done late in fall or in winter. The chances are that a sufficient number of these elusive and tenacious creatures have escaped from former attempts at their destruction to multiply to such an extent as to cause serious damage at a later time, when vegetation is in such a state as to make the application of remedies difficult.

There are many preparations of more or less efficacy for destroying San Jose scale, but it is perhaps on the whole just as well to use Scalecide. It is fully as effective as any other preparation and it is easily obtainable in condition for immediate use by simply adding water. The mistakes liable to be made in the preparation of other mixtures often cause injury to trees, or cause the mixtures to be ineffective. M.

DRAINAGE.

It is doubtless the case that some kinds of trees and shrubs will thrive in land so moist as to cause others to refuse to live at all, or at most to exist for a time under protest and then die. Even if some trees thrive in what may be called wet land, very few will thrive in land so poorly drained that it is always in that condition. Wet land is, generally speaking, undesirable and unprofitable for nursery purposes, and the sooner it is made otherwise by drainage the sooner will it become profitable.

In such winters as this has so far been, much good work in the way of draining may be accomplished before the spring work commences. Before beginning the manual labor of draining a field, it will perhaps save time in the future if the exact locations of the intended drains, outlets, etc., are marked clearly on a plat of the field on paper, which should be carefully preserved for reference in case of trouble occurring in the drains, or the necessity arising for a further extension of the system. In draining, care should be taken that no more laterals empty into the main drain pipe than the capacity of that main pipe warrants; otherwise there will sooner or later be trouble. M.

MONTREAL.

Various Notes.

When my last report was sent in we were buried under many feet of snow. Now it has almost all disappeared and we have had rain unceasingly for two days.

Business is splendid. St. Valentine's day called for all the red flowers, especially red tulips.

A big dance was given on the evening of Valentine's day by one of Montreal's leading families. Flowers were used in abundance, American Beauties in particular; also daffodils, all colors of hyacinths, stocks, calla lilies, etc.

Another important occasion was the Kilvert-Hanson wedding, which called for lots of decoration work and large bouquets.

J. Bennett has a large stock of splendid violets at present, which find a ready sale.

Mrs. White's window of jonquils and asparagus looked very attractive last week.

Hall & Robinson have had a busy time lately. Their business is always increasing. TOMMY.

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

"The best ever," is the report from all the stores and market stands for Valentine's day. It was a young Easter, so to speak. Novelties sold well, such as baskets, mail pouches, hats, hampers, etc. Violets had the call. One F street store alone sold 15,000.

A trip through the markets February 15 found all the stands filled to their capacity with bulbous stuff. Single and double jonquils were offered at 25 cents per dozen, and tulips sold at any price. Frank Slye is now personally in charge of his new stand and reports business good. Kramer's new stand, with new, handsome fixtures, looks fine.

W. F. Gude, who is the secretary of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, was agreeably surprised last week at a meeting of that body, when he was presented with a beautiful sterling silver loving cup. Mr. Gude has asked to be relieved of the office of secretary, but no successor has been appointed.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., spent four days here on his way home from a trip in West Virginia. O. O.

CANNAS! —— CANNAS!

I still have a good lot of roots of the following varieties of Cannas. They are strong roots, two and three eyes each, grown by me at Little Silver, are in perfect condition and strictly true to name and unmixed. To close them out I offer them at the reduced prices annexed. Speak quickly or it will be too late.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY. 3 ft. Orange-scarlet flowers spotted with bright crimson and banded golden-yellow. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
ALEMANNIA. 5 to 6 ft. An improved Italia, with more numerous flowers, of immense size. One of the best of the Giant or Orchid-flowered section. $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 1000.
AUSTRIA. 6 ft. Large flowers of clear canary yellow. $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.
BETSY ROSS. 3 ft. One of the loveliest and most beautiful of all pink Cannas. Flowers large and open. $2.00 per 100.
BLACK BEAUTY (true). 5 to 6 ft. In rich color and tropical effect this variety is unrivaled. The abundant leafage is of intense glistening bronzy-purple, shaded black with crimped wavy margins. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.
COMPTE DE BOUCHARD. 4½ ft. Bright golden yellow, thickly dusted with small red dots, so small they cannot be seen when a few feet from the plant. Large flowers and good trusses. Free bloomer and good clean grower. $2.00 per 100.
DAVID HARUM. 4 ft. Foliage dark bronze. Trusses and flowers large, with well rounded petals of good substance. $2.00 per 100.
EGANDALE. 4 ft. Foliage dark chocolate; bright cherry-red flowers, produced very freely. One of the best. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
EMIL WIELAND. 4 to 5 ft. A wonderful Canna. I have been growing Cannas largely for many years and I regard this as the most brilliant and beautiful variety yet produced, surpassing in effectiveness even the great and grand King Humbert. It is from Switzerland and is a cross between Mme. Crozy and the Orchid-flowered section; uniting the splendid plant and freedom of bloom of the former and the great size of flower and truss of the latter. The color is vivid orange-scarlet and the flowers are very large, produced in large compact trusses, very lasting; in the greatest profusion from June until severe frost, without interruption. A splendid, sturdy grower with Musa-like, fresh, light green foliage. 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100.
FLORENCE VAUGHAN. 5 ft. Canary yellow flowers, heavily dotted with deep orange-scarlet. $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.
MRS. WM. F. KASTING. 3 ft. The best bedding Canna to date. Of the same habit as the popular Crimson Bedder and superior to it; coming into flower still earlier, a more profuse bloomer and the color is a more vivid crimson. Foliage abundant, fresh green and the flowers are held well above the foliage. It presents a veritable blaze of color from the first of June until late October. 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100.
NIAGARA. 3 ft. A valuable low growing variety. Flowers deep crimson with a wide border of golden yellow. $2.00 per 100.
PILLAR OF FIRE. 6 to 7 ft. A giant variety. Flowers bright crimson in erect spikes. $2.00 per 100.
PENNSYLVANIA. 6 ft. An Orchid-flowered variety. Flowers a clear, deep, brilliant scarlet. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
PRES. CARNOT. 4 ft. A fine bronze-leaved variety. Bright orange-scarlet flowers, suffused with pink. $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 1000.
PRES. M'KINLEY. 3 ft. One of the very best Cannas for bedding. Flowers large, brilliant crimson, shaded with scarlet. $2.00 per 100.
QUEEN CHARLOTTE. 4 ft. One of the finest of the gilt-edge sorts. Flowers blood-red, broadly banded with bright canary yellow. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
SOUV. D'ANTOINE CROZY. 3½ ft. The brightest gilt-edge Canna. Flowers large, brilliant crimson with distinct border of golden-yellow. Very free flowering and very valuable. $2.50 per 100.
WEST GROVE. 3 ft. A superb pink Canna. Large trusses and extra large flowers of rich coral pink. $2.50 per 100.
MIXED CANNAS. Composed of fine named varieties of all colors but without labels. $1.50 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Dear Sir:—We desire to congratulate you on the two varieties of Carnations, GEORGIA and HARVARD, which you have been sending us. Georgia we consider to be the best white carnation that comes to New York, and can easily sell from 50 to 100 per cent more than regular white. Harvard we think to be the best dark red coming here, easier to sell at double the price of any other dark red. With kindest regards, we remain,

Yours truly,

CARNATION CUTTINGS

We are in unusually good position to supply exceptionally well-rooted, healthy stock. We have such a large quantity of flowering plants that we propagate only from heel cuttings from flowering shoots. Our cuttings are rooted in light, sunny, airy houses, and we are sure will satisfy the most critical buyer.

A prominent carnation grower writes: "You seem to be the only firm in the business that knows how to pack stock and have it reach the buyer in good condition, and I have always found your cuttings cheaper than the same varieties from others at much lower figures."

While our prices may not always be the cheapest, we certainly can give, quality considered, as good value as, if not better than, is obtainable anywhere.

WINSOR, which we introduced last year, has proved to be the finest novelty introduced in years. We think it is the most profitable variety grown today, considering its fine color, splendid keeping qualities, and productiveness. When properly grown, it leaves little to be desired, and almost everyone succeeds with it.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS, the best all-round white carnation on account of its large size, long stem, earliness, and productiveness. Our White Enchantress, exhibited at the Carnation Convention at Washington, was the only White Enchantress exhibited that received an award.

Strong rooted cuttings, now ready for delivery, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

We offer also VICTORY and RED CHIEF, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The monthly meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club was held February 10, with a fair attendance, considering the inclement weather. Matters pertaining to the spread of the civic improvement idea, particularly through the efforts of the retail dealers, were fully discussed.

The offer of P. M. Cartmell to donate $100 to any block in an established portion of the city, which would entirely remove fences from its front lawns, was again considered, and as a further incentive the club offered to plant flowers in the yards and window boxes, on such block, free of charge.

The following resolution was also adopted: "That the officers of the club inform the president of the city council that if your honorable body will before April 1, 1908, make the necessary alterations, and provide for sodding and care, the members of this club will for a period of five years supply and plant on the esplanade such bedding and ornamental stock as they deem in harmony with the location and environments. This offer is inspired by a desire to further the idea embodied in the motto of our club, 'Make Springfield beautiful,' and we trust that it may meet with a prompt acceptance and that we may be duly notified of any action by you in the matter."

This offer was promptly accepted by the city council on the following Tuesday evening. G. D.

The North Shore Horticultural Society has issued its regular annual schedule. The rose and strawberry show will take place July 1 and 2, and the summer show August 26 and 27. Numerous special prizes of gold and silver medals, silver cups and other trophies are offered.

Blue Mound, Kan.—Mrs. Arthur Foster carries on a retail trade in potted plants during the spring and fall. In the summer she is busy handling cut flowers and design work, obtaining her material from her own garden, which contains 500 choice roses, besides a variety of other plants.

The Market.

The cut flower trade remains about as usual. A good supply of flowers is now coming in. Prices have dropped considerably. Carnations now retail at 50 cents per dozen; some growers are retailing them at 35 cents per dozen. This fall in prices is largely the result of the recent warm spell, which caused the flowers to open up quickly.

Roses are selling at $1.50 per dozen. Retail stock is of good quality. Violets are selling fairly well. They bring from 75 cents to $1 per hundred retail. Sweet peas are now coming into this market. They retail at $1 per hundred. Tulips are to be seen of good quality. These bring 60 cents per dozen retail. Paper Whites and narcissi retail at 50 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

R. E. Nofftz has at all times a very attractive window display. He has an immense stock of bulbs, which he is bringing in all through the season. This is one of his successful specialties.

At the last meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society, February 10, H. A. Jahn exhibited fifty blooms of his prize-winning carnations, for which the society awarded him a silver medal. Mr. Jahn also exhibited his new seedling crimson carnation. The society voted to hold the fall show sometime in September, the date to be announced later. An invitation was received from the Leighton Club, of Fairhaven, across the river, to attend the lecture to be given at its next meeting by the Farquhar brothers, of Boston, who work together in giving these illustrated lectures.

R. H. Woodhouse says that trade has been good with him so far this season. W. L.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

This winter will easily get on record as one of the old-fashioned kind, of which the old folks tell us so much. From now I doubt if many will care to hear a great deal about such old-fashioned happenings. The majority will prefer, rather, to think of some other kind. A year ago there was not as much bright sunlight as we are having this year, but for some reason or other roses and carnations are not doing any better in this locality than they were this time last year.

If it were not for an unusual demand for funeral pieces, there would not be much of a demand locally for cut flowers. Funerals have been more than ordinarily numerous lately, and it so happened that many of those who have "crossed the bar" were prominent among their fellows. The consequence, of course, is that a correspondingly large amount is spent on floral tributes. The legend, "Please omit flowers," occasionally appears in the death notices in the daily papers, but nevertheless, it invariably happens that flowers are sent, and, curiously enough, those responsible for the intimation apparently anticipate just such action and appreciate it none the less.

The officers of the Newport Horticultural Society are doing all they can at the outset of their term of office to make this a year of results. Somehow, for a year or two the members of this society were content to meet in small numbers and transact the necessary business without much concern about the possibility of doing things that would produce great results. The exhibitions of the society and all matters connected with them were notable exceptions to that condition. The exhibitions are always affairs capable of inspiring enthusiasm. This year the educational capability of the society is receiving attention. On February 25 Robert Cameron will read a paper on "Annuals and Biennials."

De Kalb, Ill.—Recently the ten-year-old son of J. L. Johnson was nearly suffocated, while asleep, by a smoldering fire in the bed clothes, which had been ignited by a hot flat-iron placed at the boy's feet.

Portland, Me.—On the morning of February 9, a fire at the greenhouses of Niles Nelson caused a loss of a few hundred dollars. The fire originated in some scraps or refuse and was confined entirely to the boiler-room.

"MAY"

REASONS

Why You Should Plant MAY

May is a strictly commercial variety. Business from beginning to end.

It comes into bloom early and continues uninterruptedly until the end of the season.

It is freer than any other light pink we know of.

The size of the bloom is just what you want in quantity, 2½ to 3½ inches.

The color is deeper and brighter and more even than Enchantress and holds better.

The form is well shown in illustration.

It is not so crowded in the center as Enchantress, therefore opens quicker.

The calyx never splits and stem is always strong.

The plant grows strong and upright and about as tall as Lady Bountiful.

Makes nice plants in the field and transplants easily.

We invite you to come and see our stock of it any time; you will like its habit.

Current Comment.

Business conditions during the last week have been fair. St. Valentine's day helped considerably. Violets were the favorite flower. Red carnations were also extensively used. There was a fair demand for roses and pot plants.

The anticipated trip to Richmond has been postponed from February 19 to February 26. All parties interested will please take notice. With good weather, quite a number of the city florists will make the trip, which is always instructive and enjoyable.

Henry W. Rieman has a fine lot of cyclamens and cinerarias in popular sizes and has had great success in disposing of them. The cyclamens are especially fine, being grown from the best imported seed, and they show the care that has been bestowed on them.

The new lights installed in the Tomlinson market add much to its appearance and show the flowers to greater advantage than formerly.

The City Florists' Club met at H. W. Rieman's February 12. Quite a number turned out and spent a social evening together. The meeting next month will be at Fred Hukriede's place.

Mr. Stuart, of Anderson, and Chas. Knopf, of Richmond, were in the city on business this week. S.

AURORA, ILL.

The new range of greenhouses just completed by the W. B. Davis Co. is said by visitors to have the finest heating system ever installed in a greenhouse establishment. The entire plant of 100,000 feet of glass is heated from one boiler-room, containing four steam boilers of 100 horse-power each. The Morehead trap system is used, but the entire steam fitting system is laid out in a way that is quite different from the usual plan. The ideas are original, being conceived and executed by the members of the company. The system is well worth investigating by anyone interested in up-to-date ideas in heating. H. G.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Sawyer & Payne are preparing to build three or four greenhouses and set out quite an extensive nursery.

Raleigh, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn has filed a complaint with the corporation commission against the Southern Express Co., on account of the discontinuance of express service on certain trains. Mr. O'Quinn alleges that his trade with the east and west has been injured by the withdrawal of the service from these trains.

Current Comment.

"Business was better on Valentine's day this year than on the same day any former year, as far as I can remember." This remark was made by Miss Henrietta Suder, and the same opinion is expressed by every local dealer.

The florists expected a set-back when the rain began to pour early on Valentine's day, and had visions of thousands of flowers left on their hands when the day was over, but the surprise came when nearly every store sold out entirely by nightfall, despite the fact that the rain poured steadily all day.

The Youngstown Floral Co. disposed of 14,000 violets during the day and had a splendid run on roses and carnations. This company made a specialty of boxes containing a large number of assorted flowers, which were sold at $1 per box.

Geo. A. Heinl sold every flower in the store before evening, having a great call for violets as well as a fine sale of spring flowers.

The Schoen Floral Co., O. B. Wisner and others, report a splendid business during the day.

Joseph H. Sigrist reports an unusually large sale of violets last week.

George Heinl has returned from Terre Haute, Ind., where he spent three weeks with his brother. Mr. Heinl is greatly improved in health. H. L. S.

Wilmington, N. C.—At the Academy of Music, where the Knights of Pythias and their invited guests were addressed recently by Supreme Chancellor Barnes, the stage of the hall was decorated for the occasion by Wm. Rehder.

Negaunee, Mich.—The Negaunee Nursery & Greenhouses, established in 1895 by the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., have developed rapidly during the last few years and now ship considerable nursery stock to distant points. The nursery is said to be the only one in the upper peninsula.

Oakland, Md.—The H. Weber & Sons Co. is growing seedling carnations so extensively that few standard sorts are to be found on the place. Toreador is on trial at a number of widely separated localities and its introduction will depend on results, although the Weber Co. will in any event grow it largely for cut flowers next season.

Moline, Ill.—The Tri-City Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting February 13 at the residence of Julius Staack. The subject, "Propagation of Easter Stock," was discussed, Henry Gaethje and Henry Myers taking part. There was a good attendance. The April meeting will be held at the home of H. M. Bills, of the Bills Floral Co., Davenport.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business for Valentine's day exceeded all expectations. Violets sold much better than last year, probably owing to the better quality of the flowers. There was a good demand for flowers of all kinds. Blooming plants sold remarkably well. The weather up to Thursday was all that could be expected, but on Friday the weather man went back on the florists. It rained all day, and if you add to this a lot of thawing snow you can well imagine the effect on business. It was just like putting on the lid.

Business in general has been satisfactory. There is considerable funeral work. Roses about equal the demand. Carnations are still a little too plentiful. Considerable bulbous stock is arriving.

Various Notes.

A water main burst in front of G. H. Taepke's Gratiot avenue store about 6 o'clock in the evening of February 12. The car tracks and sidewalks on that side of the street were undermined and the street was turned into a veritable river for some time. The water in Mr. Taepke's store was about five inches deep, but as the floor is of tile and there is no basement it caused little damage. Some business, of course, was lost through the accident, as it was necessary to close off that side of the street for nearly a whole day.

J. F. Sullivan is again back at the store, after being absent nearly six weeks. The St. Valentine's business at his place was exceptionally good.

J. H. Smith, proprietor of Peter Smith & Sons' grocery, is building four greenhouses in East Sandwich, Ontario. Two of the houses are to be devoted to vegetables and two to growing flowers. Mr. Smith has about seventy-five acres of land and intends to erect more houses from time to time. The J. C. Moninger Co. has the contract.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House reports a good St. Valentine's business. About twice as many violets could have been disposed of if they could have been procured.

Every Monday about 8,000 to 15,000 rooted cuttings of Winsor, W. Enchantress, Beacon, etc., are shipped broadcast over the country by B. Schroeter.

Greenhouse Heating.

Referring to the overflowing of expansion tanks, W. E. Ernsberger, of Norwalk, O., expresses the opinion that it is not necessary, in any case, that the tank should be more than two feet above the highest point of the radiation. The trouble mentioned, he says, can be obviated by running a small pipe from the top of the heater, or from the highest point of the flow pipe, up over the top of the expansion tank, for a relief. His heating plant is so adjusted and works well.

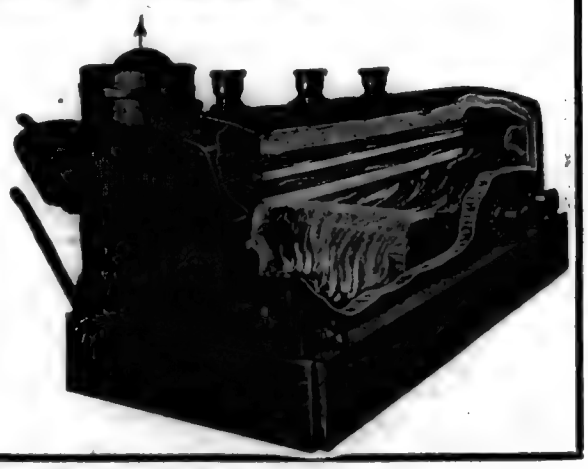
PIPING IN CONNECTICUT.

I am having trouble with the heating of my house, which is 21x104 feet, with 6-foot posts on the north side and 4-foot posts on the south side. It is a three-quarter span house, facing the south. The sashbars on the north side are about nine feet long and on the south side about sixteen feet long. The north side is all boarded up; on the west end is the boiler-house; the east end is all glass except two feet of boards near the ground; on the south side there are twenty inches of glass. The ridge pole is twelve feet high. The building stands in an open, bleak place, exposed on all sides.

I am using a 10-inch tile chimney. Would a brick chimney be better, and of what size? The tile chimney is sixteen feet high, extending four feet above the ridge pole. I have a hot water heating system. I have two 2½-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns. The maximum heating capacity of the boiler is rated at 1,000 feet of 4-inch pipe, but I can hardly get my house above freezing in zero weather, and during our last cold snap, with heavy winds, I froze everything up. I am not able to get the flow of water back to the boiler hot. The place where my boiler stands is on low ground and I cannot dig a pit, but I have a fall of three feet and a half from the upper end of the greenhouse to the return on the boiler. Now, what size of boiler in rating will it take to heat this house to 60 degrees at zero outside, and how much more pipe? L. C. A.

In regard to heating your house, I would suggest that you run the two 2½-inch risers as overhead risers and that each one be used to supply seven 2-inch returns, thus making fourteen 2-inch returns in the house in addition to the two 2½-inch risers. Your boiler should have a rated capacity for about 1,200 square feet of radiation, or the same amount of 4-inch pipe. Your plant actually requires about 900 square feet of radiation, but the capacity of the boiler should be twenty to fifty per cent greater than the actual work required. L. C. C.

PIPING IN KANSAS.



I want to build three connected greenhouses, 28x150 feet each and thirteen feet to the ridge, with side walls five feet and a half high. The glass is to be butted, with glass in both ends but none on the side. There will be a concrete wall on the east side and a double board wall on the west. The boiler-shed will be at the south end. The houses will run north and south. Each house will be divided into four 5-foot beds, with 2-foot walks between. I will heat with steam.

What will be the best way to pipe the houses? I want to use 1¼-inch pipe for the returns. Will two 2-inch flow pipes under the purlins, running from a 2-inch boiler manifold to the back end of the house and then dividing for the return pipes, be all right? How many returns will be required to hold the house at 60 degrees when it is 15 degrees below zero outside?

What size of boiler will it take to supply this plant, with seventy or eighty pounds' pressure carried on the boiler? Can all returns be connected to a manifold and the condensation be returned to the boiler through a steam trap, where no boiler pit is used? I want to use a horizontal return flue boiler. Please give size of shell, the number, size and length of flues and the extent of grate surface you think it will take to heat this plant.

All things considered, which is the better way to set greenhouses—north and south or east and west? J. H. H.

If I may be allowed a suggestion in regard to the construction of your houses, I would say in regard to butted glass, Don't. I have had so much trouble with butted glass that it is like a nightmare to me. For general purpose houses I would say use even-span houses, set north and south. Such houses get more light during winter than any other type.

To heat your houses, a good plan would be to use a 3-inch riser under the ridge in each house and eighteen 1¼-inch returns, disposed so as to supply heat under each of the benches, and in addition a coil of three or four pipes on each outside wall. A good plan would be to arrange four pipes under each of the twelve 5-foot beds and three pipes on each of the two exposed walls, thus using fifty-four 1¼-inch returns in the whole plant. By using overhead flow pipes and holding the returns as high as possible, all condensation can be carried to a hot well and returned to the boiler by means of a steam trap. A return tubular boiler, brick set, to do this work should have a capacity to handle about 5,000 feet of radiation. A boiler rated at fifty horsepower should do the work. A common size of such a boiler is fifty-four inches by thirteen feet, with 684 square feet of heating surface. The grate surface will vary a little with the kind of fuel used. The rule is, one square foot of grate surface to forty square feet of heating surface for hard coal, and one to eighty for soft coal. For hard coal a fifty horsepower boiler should have seventeen square feet of grate and for soft coal about nine or ten square feet.

The Market.

There has been no room to complain on business for Valentine's day, which was much heavier than last year. Violets held full sway, as usual, and most of the houses were out of them early in the day. There were loads of other stock, which moved well, especially after violets had run out. Bulb stock was in abundance and, from all reports, everything was cleaned up nicely.

Azaleas are in good supply and they move nicely at good prices. The demand on funeral work is still heavy and takes up stock just about as it comes in.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting February 11. There was a good attendance. The secretary read an invitation from Mrs. Griswold, at Worthington, O., inviting the club to a supper and a dance February 25. No doubt a big crowd will attend. The members are all worked up on the bowling question. They voted to form a regular club and the following officers were elected: Captain, Jacob Reichert; secretary, Wm. Metzmaier; treasurer, Jas. McKellar. It was decided to form a team of the five highest rollers, and any time any other member makes a higher average he goes into the team and the other one drops out. So there will be some tall hustling to get into the team and to stay in.

Metzmaier reports funeral work heavy and he has handled some large pieces lately.

G. Drobisch reports business rushing.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has been cutting loads of carnations from its new plant, which have found ready sale.

The Munk Floral Co. reports business good, with a heavy cut on carnations.

BULBOUS PLANTS FOR EASTER.

Would you please advise me whether hyacinths could be started under the benches now and brought to bloom for Easter. The temperature of the house is about 55 degrees at night. I would also like to start some jonquils now. Please give me your opinion on this.

S. S.

Both hyacinths and narcissi may be started under greenhouse benches. After this date, however, unless you are short of bench room, it would be as well to place them directly in the light. It is much too early to house Dutch bulbs intended for Easter. This comes on April 19 this year, and if tulips, hyacinths and narcissi are brought in from March 25 to 30 they will be in season. A month hence the days are much longer, the sun has considerably more power and all bulbous plants come along very fast. You can start the jonquils or narcissi in batches as needed. They will flower in from three to four weeks in a night temperature of 55 degrees.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

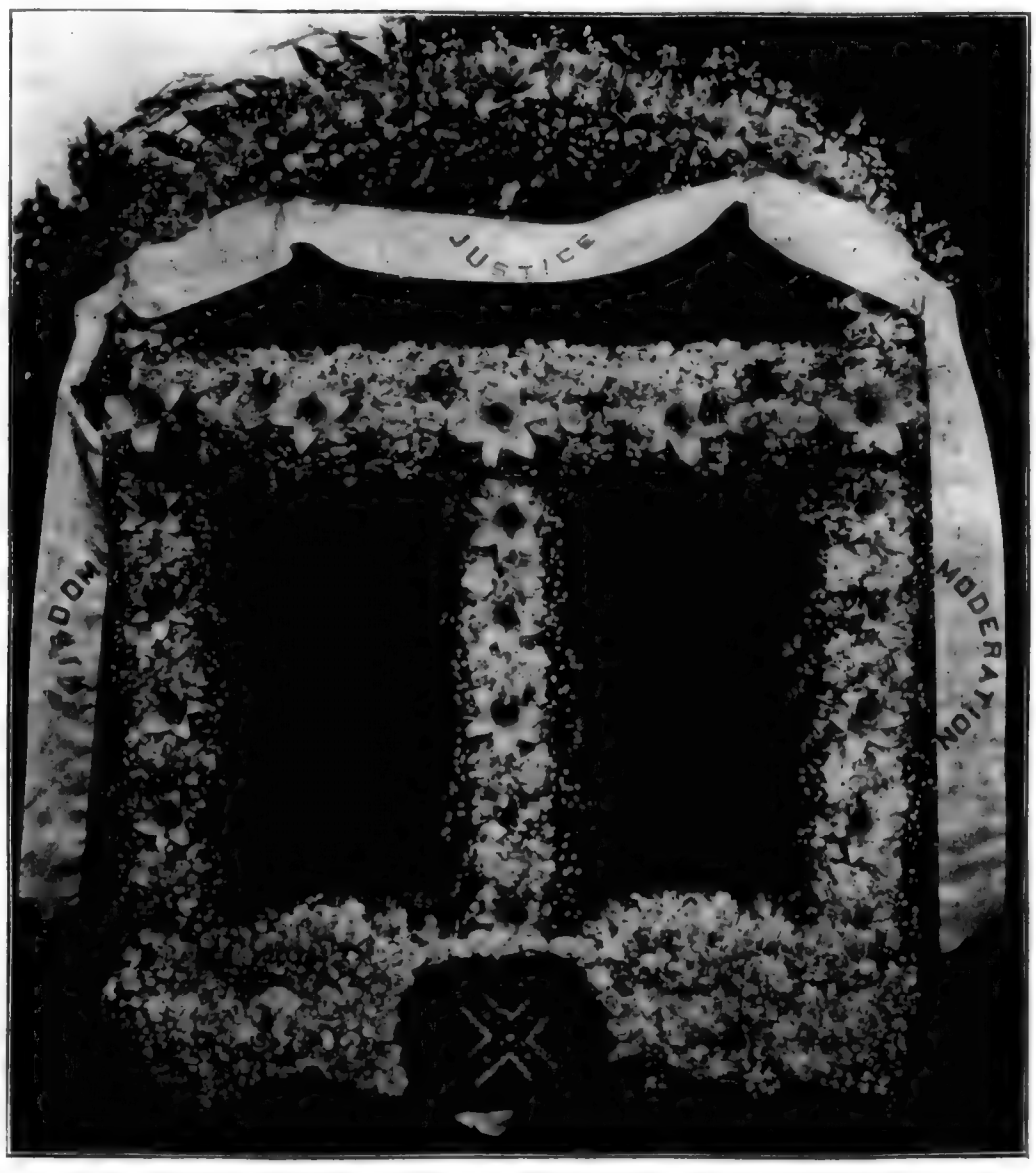
IN THE SUNNY SOUTH.

The coat of arms of the city of Savannah, Ga., is represented in the accompanying illustration. It is the design which the Daughters of the Confederacy of Georgia sent to the unveiling of the Jefferson Davis monument at Richmond, Va., and was made by Albert C. Oelschig, the youngest member of the firm of A. C. Oelschig & Sons. The design stood over six feet high and was nearly as wide. The flowers used were valley and blue hydrangeas, with longiflorum lilies set among the hydrangeas, the blue flowers being used to give the proper color. The background of the plaque was of smilax and at the base caladium leaves were used.

MAKING UP BASKETS.

Plant Baskets.

There are really three classes into which to divide floral baskets, namely, plant baskets, baskets of flowers and a combination of both. As it is possible to describe only one at a time, let us take the first.



Before going into details in regard to the planting or arranging of plant baskets, would it not be a good plan to talk over the various good reasons why every live, up-to-date flower store should at all times display some made up baskets? As we are all in the business for the good, honest dollar, just size up the basket proposition and see where the dollars come in. In the first place, there are always some plants that will not sell readily unless they are dressed up, so to speak. Among these, for instance, are small palms with maybe one or more broken leaves, blooming plants that are quite far advanced or of a poor shape, etc. This is one reason why baskets are profitable, for by working such stock into baskets it will not only sell readily, but give satisfaction to the purchaser.

Then, again, the larger stores are always compelled to keep on hand a nice assortment of empty baskets of various shapes and colors. Some of these are sure to become shop-worn, no matter how careful we may be. The color may fade or the handle get broken. These, when made up, make just as fine baskets as new ones. I have found it a good plan to give some of the more soiled a coat of olive green paint or some other suitable color.

Another reason why you should and will sell plant baskets is, because they make most appropriate gifts, which cannot help but please the recipients. What better gift could be sent than a nicely arranged basket of plants? Flowers last but a few days at the most, while a single plant would hardly seem enough to send. Then there are store openings or store decorations. Set a few baskets around on the counters, charging a fair rental for them. Last but not least, a few seasonable baskets standing around in your store will add much to its attractiveness and, even if they do not sell at once, they may sell some other article for you.

Various Shapes.

There is really no limit to the number of shapes of baskets, but a great many of these are not good for use as plant baskets. In fact, some are not of much use for anything but an ornament. Still, we must carry an assortment. In most cases when a person buys a basket of plants, he does so because he wants an article that will last longer than cut flowers. Many people will take care of the plants and make them last a long time, and I consider it a good advertisement if our flowers and plants last well. You may say that if they keep too long you will not sell as many, but this I consider poor logic.

The Coat of Arms of Savannah.

With the above in mind, let us just size up our stock of baskets and see what we find. First we run across a basket with a rounding bottom, the deepest part of which is only two inches, while at the sides it has no depth at all. Such a one may be all right for flowers, but it is of no use to us at present. Then there is the other extreme, one shaped more like a vase, almost too deep to fill with an assortment of plants. A basket of this style looks well with a tall plant in the center and several low ones planted around the bottom. Still another shape is one that is all handle and fancy work, with no room for plants. This you would better pass by. Next we run across some pretty birch-bark hampers. These are artistic when well filled. Now we come to the good, common-sense shape of basket; one that is of a reasonable depth, say about four to six inches, with the width and length in proportion. This is the shape that will make the nicest plant basket of any.

In all plant baskets there should be a tin to retain the moisture and prevent it from soiling tables, as well as to keep the plants in better condition. Most supply houses include the tin with the baskets if this is desired. If you have the tins made by a local tinsmith, explain to him that all you want is the cheapest material that will hold water and that you do not want any fancy-work. This will reduce the cost considerably.

If you are making up a basket of plants for sale, plant them with just as much care as if they were being potted up in single pots. If only for temporary use at some store opening, you can use sphagnum moss to fill in; this will retain the moisture for some time. If in an emergency you have no time to have a tin made, then line the bottom of the basket with some tinfoil. For temporary filling it is really not necessary to take the larger plants out of the pots, providing you have room for them.

HUGO SCHROETER.

DUTY ON ROSE CUTTINGS.

Rose cuttings that have been rooted in sand, but have never in fact been in soil, are not dutiable as "rose plants" under paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897, but as "cuttings of plants commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock," under the same paragraph.

The decision is final, for it is that of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second District of New York, to which the Secretary of the Treasury took it on appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of New York.

The case grew out of an importation of rooted tea rose cuttings by the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., although it was in the name of the American Express Co. The cuttings came from the Dale Estate, in Canada, and the collector at Buffalo assessed duty at the rate of 2½ cents each, as rose plants. The importers protested and the Board of General Appraisers upheld them, ordering that duty be assessed at twenty-five per cent ad valorem, as provided for "cuttings of greenhouse stock." The Government held that the board had erred in so deciding and directed that an appeal be taken to the Circuit Court of the United States. This court upheld the importer and the Board of General Appraisers, but the Government was not yet satisfied and took the case one step higher, to the Court of Appeals, which decided, February 11, that rooted cuttings that have never been in soil are not "rose plants" and are to be admitted at the lower rate of duty. The Government loses its case.

ANTHRACNOSE.

We are sending you under separate cover a sample of some roses which are giving us trouble. These roses are in solid beds; new houses running north and south. The soil is a fine, sandy loam and is considered excellent farm land. The soil was mixed with a moderate quantity of well rotted manure at the time of planting, which was about the middle of July, as the construction of the houses would not permit earlier planting. Considering the time of planting, the roses have done fairly well except that this trouble was beginning to show itself in November a little, and has gradually grown worse. While it usually shows itself on plants that seem to have been less sturdy than the rest, it has taken several that were making fine, large, strong growth. Perhaps the first sign would be a drooping of the flower bud, and then in a few days the plant is ruined. Others show at first one branch as diseased, with the bad leaves; then usually the rest of the plant follows, and right by it may be a fine, healthy looking plant that does not show an imperfect leaf. This helps to puzzle us, as it seems to us if it were bad water or soil it would more nearly affect all alike. Bride, Maid, Chatenay and Killarney all show it more or less, but our Richmond so far are entirely free. As I stated, the soil is sandy and with an open subsoil, and it would be impossible, almost, to overwater them, even if we were not careful. Carnations grown in solid beds in the same soil have done splendidly, and so have sweet peas. Pot plants in the same soil have done fairly well; such as have done indifferently we can, we think, trace to other reasons than soil. I have written at length so that you may have as nearly as possible all the facts in the case. W. H. C.

The specimen sent was in bad condition when it reached me, but from your explicit and concise letter, and from what I could detect in the specimen, it looks as if the plants were suffering from rose anthracnose, a most troublesome disease and difficult to eradicate.

These symptoms as described by you are the true symptoms of this trouble, and where the disease has got such a hold it is the most profitable way to throw the stock out and replant with clean, vigorous stock.

The cause of this disease is difficult to determine, but it usually attacks plants of low vitality—plants which have been propagated from weak stock. It is also encouraged and fostered by damp atmosphere and deficient ventilation, although I have seen bad cases of it in houses which were perfect in these respects.

I would advise not to propagate from such stock. Ribes.

AN OLD-FASHIONED ROSE.

What is the name of a common, old-fashioned yellow rose that grows about four feet high, is very thorny on the young shoots and bears a profusion of flowers, which, though considerably doubled, have a great many stamens and carpels? It blooms about the end of May in a latitude of 40 degrees. It is somewhat inclined to sucker.

J. L. D.

Persian Yellow is probably the variety you have reference to. Austrian Yellow and Harrison's Yellow are somewhat similar sorts. All are hardy.

ROSY MORN PETUNIA.

While great progress has been made in improving varieties of bedding plants, the list of plants suitable for bedding has not increased much, and on grounds where there is no gardener who has charge of the flower beds, only such plants can be recommended as will, with even little care, be effective. Petunias, as a rule, are not ideal bedders. The variety Snowball is quite attractive in mass planting, as a white. Howard's Star can be used to great advantage for veranda-boxes or rustic hanging baskets. But many of the double sorts have colors which cannot be used with any other flowers, and for bedding, they are, on account of their straggly growth, not to be recommended. Rosy Morn, however, is a most valuable bedder. It has a small flower of a beautiful rose-pink color, with a white throat, is a constant bloomer and of a rather dwarf habit. It comes true from seed, which, if sown about March 1, will produce, if pinched back several times, nice, bushy stock by May. Whenever its color is desired, and a plant is wanted which will, with but little attention, bloom until frost, it should be recommended. F. B.

EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

[A synopsis of a paper by A. C. Beal, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Springfield, February 19, 1908.]

With the ever increasing interest and support of the farmers in the state experiment stations, their work has been broadened. It would be difficult at the present time to find any agricultural interest which does not receive some recognition on the part of some experiment station.

Floriculture is one of the interests which more recently has received a little attention from the stations. It seems incredible that an industry representing so large an investment of capital, and with an annual product of so great value, has not received more recognition. According to the census of 1900, the amount of capital invested in floriculture was $52,462,419, and the wholesale value of the product is given at $18,422,522. Since 1900 the florists' business has developed wonderfully and the investment is not far from $100,000,000 for the whole country. What interest of such magnitude has been given less recognition?

In this connection it is well to bear in mind that when the stations were founded the farmer was the one to whom those in charge of the work looked for support and whom they sought to benefit. Most men, and the farmers least of all, know little about plant growing under glass, and they generally have a sort of contempt for the man whose operations are confined to a small area. The farmers might be surprised to learn that there are florists in Illinois who grow under glass more rose or carnation plants than there are hills of corn on fifty acres of land. If they had any adequate conception of the amount of handling, pruning, tying, etc., to care for this number of plants as compared with cultivating the same number of hills of corn, they would have a better opinion of the florists' business.

There has been some work done for florists by the experiment stations. Of those publications dealing with flowers, except a few bulletins from Cornell, practically all treat of insects and diseases.

REFLECTIONS OF A GROWER.

To-day, as I labored with trowel and hose
To grow, in perfection, the beautiful rose,
As I looked on its beauty and quaffed its perfume,
I thought, alas! of its ultimate doom.
When its beauty and fragrance have vanished away,
Its purpose is served, though it be but a day.
Then I think, can it be that I've labored in vain?
Has my toil brought only personal gain?
I reflect again. Ah, happy thought!
Perhaps to some life it has happiness brought;
Perhaps at some bedside its beauty was shed,
Or its purity some life to better things led;
Perhaps graced the altar, while vows were made,
Or on the grave of some loved one 'twas laid.
It may have done good in a thousand ways
With its influence spread, like the bright sun's rays.
Life's dreary pathways it may have brightened;
Life's many cares it has surely lightened.
Ah, truly my labors have not been in vain;
The thought gives me cheer and courage again.
Though the daily wage be ever so small
And the calloused hands much toil recall,
Ah, be happy, O toiler 'neath roof of glass.
Be not discouraged or lightly pass
The beautiful chance that is offered you
To happiness cause, and much good do
By life's pathways with roses strewing.
Ah, be not weary in well doing.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

Despite the fact that Primula obconica is one of the most useful plants for the retail grower, one can find many places without them. What other plant adapts itself to so many uses, in places where blooming plants are wanted from November until Easter? From what other plant can one cut flowers during this period, that make as good material for design work, and only too often at times when roses and carnations are bringing high prices? If ever any one flower should be called "Cut and come again," it is the obconica. Few of them are seen at the wholesale houses. It is not a flower one would look for there. Only the out-of-town grower who conducts a retail place can fully appreciate its value.

It grows in almost any soil, so long as it is in a temperature a few degrees higher than Primula Chinensis, is not allowed to get too potbound, and is not neglected with watering. For early flowering, sow now. If the seeds are not too old, every one will germinate.

There are now advertised a number of varieties, or which Primula obconica gigantea is perhaps the most beautiful as far as habit and size of flower are concerned, yet for free blooming Primula obconica grandiflora is by far the best. The flowers are twice as large as the type, over which it is an improvement in this respect. There is a rose or pink variety which is good; also a red or crimson one, which, however, is far from being either, as there is too much purple in it. The white is the best. F. B.

ZONAL GERANIUMS.

Excellent Christmas Plants.

It is satisfactory to note a growing demand for zonal geraniums, or pelargoniums as they are more properly called, for winter flowering. As yet they are less grown commercially than their beauty and comparative ease of culture entitle them to be. For winter blooming, singles of the English round-flowered section are decidedly preferable to doubles for Christmas sales. Nothing could be better than some of these splendid varieties, the individual florets on such sorts as J. M. Barrie and Duke of Bedford averaging two inches and a half to three inches in diameter. While plants would not stand shipping long distances, for local trade and near-by markets they offer great attractions.

The illustrations show a few plants, mostly grown in 6-inch pots, as they appeared a few days before Christmas. Cuttings rooted by the first of March and grown along will produce similar plants if properly cared for. More explicit cultural directions will be found in the last two paragraphs of this article.

Paul Crampel is a magnificent bright scarlet, as good for bedding as for pot culture. It is a very compact grower, dwarf and vigorous. Trusses are of immense size and as brilliant in coloring as poinsettias. This unique sort should displace others of its color now in general use.

Duke of Bedford is a beautiful crimson, with immense florets. It has a small white eye as a distinguishing feature. The habit is excellent and a plant carrying several of the huge trusses of bloom would sell on sight.

Gertrude Pearson is a well-known variety, with peach pink colored flowers. It has an ideal habit, and while the trusses are somewhat smaller than in some of the newer sorts, they are produced with great freedom. It is equally good for bedding and for pot culture.

Anna Defeuillet is the finest of all the pink varieties. The color is a clear salmon pink, which is beautiful under natural light and even finer under artificial conditions. This, I believe, is one of M. Lemoine's seedlings. It is certainly a gem, but is listed by very few growers.

Ian Maclaren is not a new variety, and while scarcely so deep an orange shade as Emile Zola, one of Lemoine's finest productions, it is remarkably effective as a pot plant, having a sturdy habit, and the large trusses of salmon orange flowers are produced on stout stalks. For outdoor culture this variety is less reliable.

A few first-class Christmas varieties in scarlet and crimson are: Jacquerie, Paul Crampel, Cannell's Crimson Bedder, Richmond Beauty, The Sirdar, Duke of Bedford and Mrs. E. Rawson.

Zonal Geranium Gertrude Pearson.

Cuttings of zonal geraniums should be placed in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots during January or February, using a compost of sandy loam. Stand the pots quite close together, on a bench where a little bottom heat will reach them. Give a good soaking of water and let them become rather dry before watering again. Avoid syringings overhead, which are more harmful than beneficial. The plants need no shade whatever and ninety-five per cent should root. Shift to 4-inch pots when nicely rooted and later to 6-inch, where they may be flowered unless extra large plants are required, in which case a further shift to 8-inch may be given.

For the final pottings a compost of turfy loam and well rotted and dried cow manure, to which are added some sharp sand and a pinch of bone meal, is suitable. Pot quite firmly. The plants will need some pinching until the end of August, after which time, if desired for Christmas flowering, it can be discontinued. Our experience has been that the plants do better kept under glass all the time, giving them a little shade in summer. In feeding avoid the use of too much liquid manure. It produces too rank and soft growth. Occasional top-dressings with such highly concentrated foods as Clay's fertilizer are to be preferred.

W. N. Craig.

A FINE BORDER GRASS.

The florist who grows bedding plants is sometimes short of suitable border plants for beds of cannas or other tall-growing plants. While this does not mean to say that Abutilon Souvenir de Bonn, or Savitzii, or coleus are not most useful for this purpose, the more of a variety one has to offer the more apt one is to suit the different tastes. Pennisetum longistylum is not a new thing, yet outside of the public parks or large places little of it is seen; still it gives a formal bed a most finished appearance. When covered with white plumes in August it forms a most beautiful contrast against bronze-leaved cannas. It can also be made use of to good effect with salvias or caladiums, or in clumps along shrub-borders. Its cultivation is simple. Seed sown now will make nice plants in 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, eight to ten inches high by planting-out time. The seedlings look tiny, and it is well to put three or four together when transplanting them. Around a bed twelve to fourteen inches should be allowed between the plants, so as to prevent them from growing straggly. F. B.

CYCLAMENS.

Their Increasing Popularity.

One notices with pleasure that there is a distinct revival of interest in these useful midwinter flowers. When the melancholy days are with us, the shortest, saddest and most uninteresting of the year, it is well to have something bright in the way of plants, something of an assured cheerfulness, which will give color to the conservatory or to the florist's window. What can one find better for this purpose than a well grown batch of cyclamens? Surely we could wish for no prettier sight than these plants, ornamenting the greenhouse during the dullest days of winter with their mottled foliage and brightly colored flowers. It is true we have hyacinths, tulips and various other sorts of forced bulbous stuff during the early months of the year. But at the best these are common and artificial to a true lover of flowers.

I have always flattered myself that I understood thoroughly the wishes and tastes of that mighty personage, the man in the street, or woman, as the case may be, and I have frequently noted how a nice pot of cyclamen catches the eye. Low-growing, neat and demure, with its beautiful, fantastic flowers in various shades of color, it never fails to make an impression upon the ladies. There is something bizarre, something Frenchy if I may use the expression, which appeals to them.

Recent Improvement in Quality.

One of the best proofs we have of the utility of this class of plants is to be found in the various seed firms, in this country and in Europe, which have lately turned their attention to the improvement of their cyclamens. And, thanks to a rigid system of selection adopted by them, cyclamens at the present day have attained a development and a variety of color which can hardly be surpassed.

Plants of almost any species are a pleasure to look at when well grown. It is, however, even more so with cyclamens. When badly grown they are a horror and an abomination. On the other hand, when well grown they are, in the language of the Greeks, "a sicht for sair een." While cyclamens are of easy culture, it does not necessarily follow that they do not require care and attention during the various stages of their development.

It should scarcely be necessary for me to remind growers of the great importance of buying good seed. It cannot be too clearly understood that good cyclamens cannot be grown from cheap seed. If plants of good quality are desired, Zonal Geranium Duke of Bedford.

Zonal Geranium Anna Defeuillet.

you must procure your seed from some firm that makes a specialty of this class of plants. You may have to pay more for it, but the little extra outlay will repay you in the end.

The Most Suitable Soil.

Soil is also a matter of considerable importance with this class of plants. Growers' opinions differ as to what constitutes an ideal soil for cyclamens. We must, however, be guided in this respect by our own judgment and have an intelligent idea as to what the plants will best appreciate in the various stages of their development. When in a young state, a soil of a light texture should be used, in which leaf-soil, charcoal and sand are the chief ingredients. For the final potting, a fairly rich compost may be used. I would suggest a soil made up of two parts good fibrous loam and one part leaf-soil, with also a liberal amount of sand and fine charcoal. Bone meal may also be added at the rate of a 5-inch potful to each barrow load of soil. In England most growers sterilize the soil which they use for their cyclamens, saying that by doing so they prevent disease, and judging from my own experience I believe it does to a great extent. We must admit that a great many of the diseases which have become so numerous in plant life get into the system of the plants in the earlier stages of their existence, or, I might say, during the process of seed germination. At any rate, it is tolerably certain that disease germs exist in most soils. Hence, if all soil used for potting purposes were sterilized, the chances of disease would certainly be considerably reduced.

Judicious Watering.

Care in watering is another important point to remember. Cyclamens require at all times a liberal supply of water, but at the same time one must use a little judgment. It often happens that indiscriminate watering with the hose, followed by dull weather or low temperature, causes the soil to become excessively wet. The result is, the soil becomes clogged, the fine roots perish and a sickly yellow tint appears among the young leaves, which is sometimes erroneously called a disease. Careful watering is absolutely essential at all times, and for this reason I would use the watering can in preference to the hose, especially after the flowers begin to appear on the surface of the corm.

The Cyclamen Mite.

Few growers can have missed, at some time or another, making the unpleasant acquaintance of the dreaded cyclamen mite. A sharp lookout should be kept at all times for this destructive pest, and as soon as it is noticed the affected plants should be burned. If plenty of soot and tobacco stems are kept between the pots, it will be impossible for the mite to exist. Syringing once a week with weak soot water will also act as a preventive, as the mite shows great aversion to soot in any form.

In most establishments cyclamens are grown in frames during the summer months. We should see that a free circulation of air is always kept among the plants, and during the mild, dewy evenings in the fall the lights should be removed, to give the plants the full benefit of the heavy dews. Regarding shade, I strongly advocate the use of tiffany, or fine canvas, for this purpose, for the reason that it can be removed in the afternoon, when the sun loses its strength, and the small amount of sun and light which they thus receive adds considerably to the strength and vitality of the plants.

Liquid Fertilizer.

When the plants are well established and the pots full of roots, weak doses of liquid manure will be beneficial. This should be as varied as possible. On two days a week, at least, clear water should be used. Sheep manure in a liquid state is one of the best, but care must be taken to use it only in very weak doses. When the fine roots begin to show freely on the surface of the soil, a light dusting with pulverized sheep manure may be given, as the more surface roots the plants are furnished with, the more stimulants they will be able to assimilate.

In the rush of the housing season, too often we find cyclamens relegated to some obscure position in a north house or some such place, with the result that the care and labor of months is to a great extent wasted. Growers would do well to allow more space between plants, after housing, than is commonly the case. When housed they should be kept fully exposed to sunshine, and a free circulation of air maintained. It is a cool, airy atmosphere which goes farthest in producing well flowered plants of the highest quality.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Seed Sowing.

The time has arrived when a good many flower seeds should be sown. It will probably seem like repeating old advice to give any cultural notes on this subject, but there are so many readers of the Review who have probably taken up floriculture as their vocation and who may not have had as much practical training as they would like, and there are, furthermore, so many of the rising generation, who are to fill our shoes some day, and who, unless they are of the "know it all" class, are ever ready to improve their minds, even by reading cultural hints, that we make no apology for touching briefly on this important branch of propagation.

It may seem somewhat stereotyped, but we would say again, do not buy cheap seed. The best is the least expensive in the long run. Seeds of all kinds, which are to be sown under glass, seem to prefer a lighter compost for germination than that which they are to grow in when well established. For this reason leaf-mold should always form the major portion of the compost. For the finest seeds, if a little sand is added to the mold, germination will be better than if loam is also used. For the general run of greenhouse annuals, three-fourths leaf-mold and one-fourth loam, with some sand added, make a suitable mixture. For choice seeds, such as begonias, gloxinias, primulas, etc., it is well to add a little powdered charcoal to keep the compost sweet. If you use steam and can sterilize the soil to kill all weed seeds and insect larvæ, it will be a great advantage.

Flats three inches in depth, or pans, are to be preferred to pots for seed sowing. They should in every case be perfectly clean. Earthenware should be well soaked if new. For choice annuals or those slow of germination, more drainage is necessary than for the quick-growing varieties. Many growers use no other drainage for such seeds as asters, zinnias and stocks than some rough pieces of turf, but it is always better to be on the safe side in this respect. When you water you want it to pass away quickly, or sour conditions will soon arise. In covering seeds, a safe rule is to scatter compost over them to their own depth. With minute seeds, such as gloxinias and begonias, after the surface has been made smooth and watered, the seeds should be scattered evenly on the surface and a little fine sand spread over it. You must use fine sifters for your soil, especially if you are sowing small seeds; use the sifter to drop it evenly over the seeds. After sowing, a good plan is to gently firm the surface with a smooth piece of board.

In the germination of seeds, much depends on their treatment after being sown. As a general rule, a temperature of 60 degrees at night will suffice for all seeds; many will grow freely in 10 degrees less heat, but the higher figure insures earlier growth and a removal to somewhat cooler quarters is easy in a few days. Flats containing seeds should never get direct sunlight. Covering with newspapers is often resorted to. These should be removed at night and during sunless weather, and must be gradually discarded as germination starts. If your shelf room is scarce, you can stack several flats one over the other until the seedlings start to grow, but you must watch them sharply or spindling plants will result.

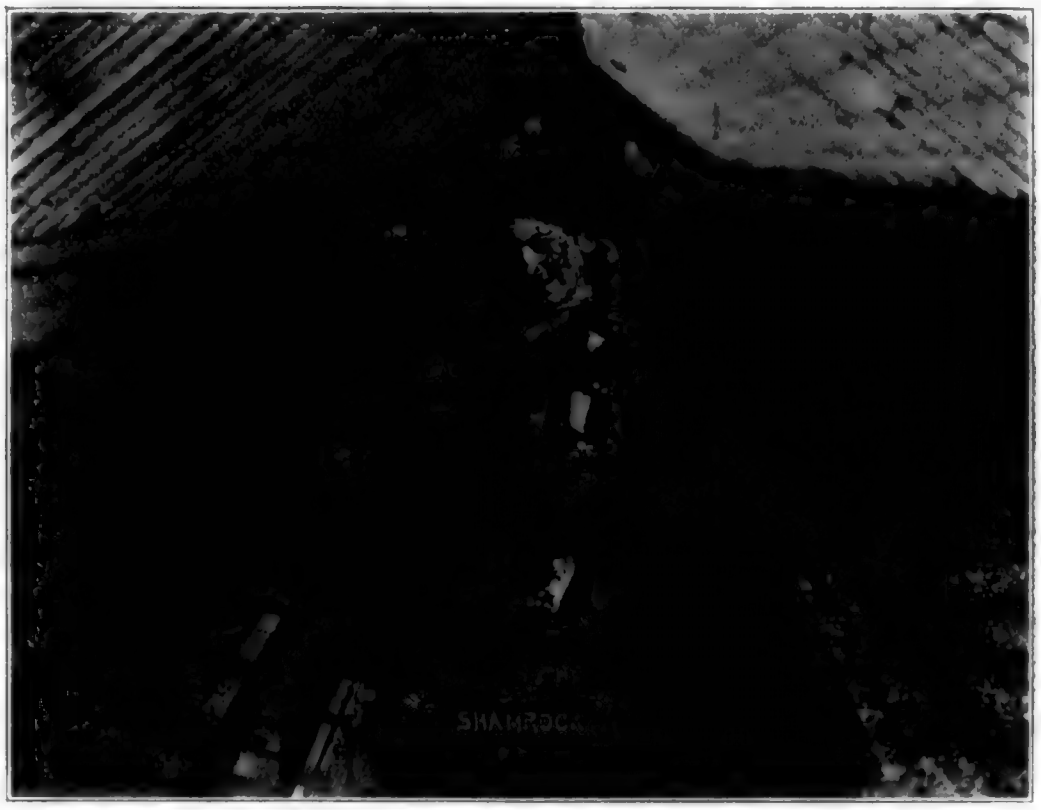
The present time is opportune for sowing batches of the following seeds: Asters of such early varieties as Queen of the Earlies, ten weeks' stock; verbenas, petunias, fibrous-rooted begonias, vincas, torenias, Santolina maritima, abutilons, primulas in variety, Clerodendron fallax, dracænas, eucalyptus, impatiens and browallia.

It is rather too early to sow such rapid growing subjects as Salvia splendens, zinnias, ricinus, wigandias, sunflowers, cosmos, Phlox Drummondii and balsams.

Among hardy perennial plants, the sowing of aquilegias, hollyhocks, Campanula pyramidalis, primroses, pyrethrums, lychnis, lupinus, Lobelia cardinalis, Malva moschata, delphiniums, Canterbury bells and other sorts is now timely. Many of these latter, sown now, will bloom the first season.

Propagation.

While the weather remains cold, when heavy firing is still the rule and before the sun becomes too powerful, is the best time to propagate. The genial, moist bottom heat soon makes the little cuttings root. The propagating bench should be kept well filled, for there are many bedding plants now which will yield plenty of good cuttings. Where you root your carnations will suit chrysanthemums, ericas, acacias, genistas, marguerites, verbenas and snapdragons, while in the warmer bench heliotropes, acalyphas, begonias, fittonias, panicum, salvia, coleus, achyranthes and alternanthera will root best.



Shamrocks.

The day for "the wearing of the green," March 17, will soon be here. The demand for little shamrock plants in pots and pans is now quite considerable. A cool house is needed for these clovers. If they are getting crowded, spread out the pots a little. Keep well watered. An occasional fumigation will ward off the attacks of thrips, which is quite partial to this plant. Quite a number of florists now make a specialty of shamrocks and find a good profit in growing them.

Easter Lilies.

From the number of inquiries recently received in regard to the condition of various growers' Easter lilies, it is evident that many are on the anxious seat about them. If your plants will show buds at all by March 5 to 10, you can get your lilies in for Easter in a night temperature of 60 degrees. If you can see these buds now, you can hold them all right in a slightly cooler house, but if the buds are three inches in length they are too forward. Do not make the mistake of rushing the earliest ones into a house kept at 40 to 45 degrees at night, as we once knew a florist to do; as a result he lost nearly every bud. Encourage plants which are a little backward by frequent light sprayings, and a little nitrate of soda in the water once a week will hurry them along. Squirt tobacco extract into the tops of the growths to clean out aphis and, if you want plants with nice foliage, never allow them to become dry at the root.

Lilium candidum can be had in bloom four weeks from the time the buds are so that you can count them, in a night temperature of 55 degrees. Do not force in a warmer house, as this fine lily resents such treatment.

Gladiolus Gandavensis.

You have probably gaps in your carnation benches where plants have died out. If you have planted nothing in their stead, try some of the large-flowered gladioli. As a rule, separate colors sell the best and for this reason growers prefer such varieties as Shakespeare and May. They will prove useful for you about Memorial day.

Speaking of carnation houses reminds us that this also is a good time to plant some sweet peas to run up the iron posts. These will prove invaluable in late spring, when people are getting rather tired of carnations.

Kalmia Latifolia.

If you want any of the mountain laurels in flower for Easter, start them now. In 1907 they sold well when nicely flowered. Treat as you would azaleas and rhododendrons. A temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night, a moist atmosphere, spraying overhead and removal to a cooler and drier house as the flowers expand, are the main cultural needs of this beautiful, hardy evergreen shrub.

English Ivy.

The demand for young plants of English ivy is fairly constant. In spring many are wanted for cemetery lots, and while it cannot be recommended in our northern states as a reliable evergreen climber, it succeeds fairly well on north walls, doing best near the ocean. There is not such a call for wreaths of ivy as existed a decade or two ago. Yet there is often an order for this class of designs and there can be no question of their advantages in winter over others composed of tender flowers. Cuttings put in your carnation propagating bench now and kept moist, will soon form roots. You ought not to sell these plants this season. A better plan is to plunge them in a frame or the open ground early in May, and they will make excellent stock for selling the following year. These plants are of such size and quality that they are well worth a fair price.

Variegated Vinca.

Variegated vinca is indispensable for the filling of vases, window-boxes, etc. Your old plants will be sending up quantities of nice young shoots now. Get a good batch of these into the propagating bench. They will need planting out in nursery rows during summer and lifting in the fall to provide you with salable plants for the following spring. You can propagate from the older and harder wood by simply cutting it in pieces, but you must wait longer for roots appearing on these. A temperature of 50 degrees at night will root them.

LARGE ROSE HOUSES.

Though it sounds like treason to say anything against large glasshouses, says an American correspondent of the Gardeners' Chronicle, practical growers are not all in accord with the builders of this class of structure. A span-roofed house fifty feet wide and some hundreds of feet long must of necessity be high at the ridge, and when to this are added low, solid beds instead of the old-time benches, three feet or more in height, the young roses, when planted, are a long way from the glass, and do not start as freely as under the older system. Whether this late start is made up for by the use of grafted stock and ease of working wide houses remains to be seen, but more than one large grower, once partly converted to the large house theory, will, in the proposed additions this year, return to the more moderate size. Leaving the question of height, extreme length has its disadvantages independently of the difficulty of handling stock. In a rose house known to the writer, 800 feet long, there is one part where, directly air is put on, a kind of independent circuit is set up, and it is easy to see by the behavior of the plants there that they do not relish the conditions. Greenfly and mildew always attack at this point, and it is thus a kind of safety valve for the section men. In a house of moderate length these independent currents are broken up by partitions or otherwise, and, though this idea may seem far-fetched, there is more in it than at first appears.

COMMERCIAL CARNATIONS.

[A paper by Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, February 25, 1908.]

I do not have any intention, in writing this paper, of giving history. That branch may be useful, but it has been covered so many times that to go back to Lizzie McGowan and Mrs. Fisher is useless. We wish to consider just what working materials we have before us at the present time, and to learn how to make the most of what we have.

The carnation after the advent of Mrs. Lawson and the carnation before that time are as different in all essential characteristics as the light of a gray day in winter is to the brilliancy of the houses in full sunlight, with the glare from the February snow. Daybreak, before Mrs. Lawson, was the sun breaking through the fog.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Seed Sowing.

The time has arrived when a good many flower seeds should be sown. It will probably seem like repeating old advice to give any cultural notes on this subject, but there are so many readers of the Review who have probably taken up floriculture as their vocation and who may not have had as much practical training as they would like, and there are, furthermore, so many of the rising generation, who are to fill our shoes some day, and who, unless they are of the "know it all" class, are ever ready to improve their minds, even by reading cultural hints, that we make no apology for touching briefly on this important branch of propagation.

It may seem somewhat stereotyped, but we would say again, do not buy cheap seed. The best is the least expensive in the long run. Seeds of all kinds, which are to be sown under glass, seem to prefer a lighter compost for germination than that which they are to grow in when well established. For this reason leaf-mold should always form the major portion of the compost. For the finest seeds, if a little sand is added to the mold, germination will be better than if loam is also used. For the general run of greenhouse annuals, three-fourths leaf-mold and one-fourth loam, with some sand added, make a suitable mixture. For choice seeds, such as begonias, gloxinias, primulas, etc., it is well to add a little powdered charcoal to keep the compost sweet. If you use steam and can sterilize the soil to kill all weed seeds and insect larvæ, it will be a great advantage.

Flats three inches in depth, or pans, are to be preferred to pots for seed sowing. They should in every case be perfectly clean. Earthenware should be well soaked if new. For choice annuals or those slow of germination, more drainage is necessary than for the quick growing varieties. Many growers use no other drainage for such seeds as asters, zinnias and stocks than some rough pieces of turf, but it is always better to be on the safe side in this respect. When you water you want it to pass away quickly, or sour conditions will soon arise. In covering seeds, a safe rule is to scatter compost over them to their own depth. With minute seeds, such as gloxinias and begonias, after the surface has been made smooth and watered, the seeds should be scattered evenly on the surface and a little fine sand spread over it. You must use fine sifters for your soil, especially if you are sowing small seeds; use the sifter to drop it evenly over the seeds. After sowing, a good plan is to gently firm the surface with a smooth piece of board.

In the germination of seeds, much depends on their treatment after being sown. As a general rule, a temperature of 60 degrees at night will suffice for all seeds; many will grow freely in 10 degrees less heat, but the higher figure insures earlier growth and a removal to somewhat cooler quarters is easy in a few days. Flats containing seeds should never get direct sunlight. Covering with newspapers is often resorted to. These should be removed at night and during sunless weather, and must be gradually discarded as germination starts. If your shelf room is scarce, you can stack several flats one over the other until the seedlings start to grow, but you must watch them sharply or spindling plants will result.

CARNATIONS

COMMERCIAL CARNATIONS.

[A paper by Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, February 25, 1908.]

Daybreak, before Mrs. Lawson, was the sun breaking through the fog.

Test Your Seedlings Thoroughly.

We have, to-day, a grand collection of varieties, and there are so many new stars appearing and asking recognition that we are tempted to ask, "Where will it stop?"

"Because of the success of some new varieties, and because I have a good seedling, am I not justified in putting it on the market?'' is the question we are so frequently asked.

Let the owner of the seedling think of the number of horses bred from fast stock which are never entered. They are tried out, and if they haven't the ability to deliver the goods, they are never entered in the race. So with the carnation seedling. Raise them, if fancy leads you to do so. Try your hand at it, but know before they are presented to the public what their powers really are.

I believe that the qualities which go to produce a good seedling are, to a large extent, due to the inherent good qualities of the parents, but with the seedling there is apt to be an increase in vigor. The best articles and papers on the subject of seedlings can only be from those men who handle and study them most, and although a haphazard seedling may make good commercially, the best variety is more apt to be produced by one who understands the varieties he works on, and who makes his crosses with certain definite points in view.

The dissemination of a seedling being decided upon, the future success of it, as a variety, depends as much on the manner of producing and sending out the stock as on any inherent good qualities it may have, granted, of course, that it would never have passed the seedling stage had it not some of the inherent qualities which go to make up a commercial carnation.

Definition of Commercial Sorts.

What, then, is a commercial carnation? To be brief, it is one which the grower can handle so that it is a paying proposition for him, and this necessitates it being one which the public will buy with profit to the retailer. This definition is broad, and yet it covers, I believe, the entire situation. It does not exclude the fancy sorts, providing they can meet the terms, providing the public will buy, and providing there is a profit to the grower.

A very large bloom is not, as a rule, obtained in the same quantity, from the same space, as a smaller one. Here, then, seems to be the size limit. Can we secure enough more money for the individual bloom to warrant the growing of only such varieties as produce flowers larger than the ordinary? Perhaps, with some growers there would be such a demand, but not as a rule would this be true. The commercial carnation in its broadest sense is the medium sized bloom, the average length stem, the non-bursting calyx, the even-colored bloom, with the keeping and shipping qualities which are usually a part of the make-up of such bloom as I have tried to describe. Light pink, intermediate pink, dark or cerise pink, scarlet, dark red, and white we must consider standards.

Variegated we must class as fancy, for both white and yellow variegated are profitable only when grown where there is a market which calls for them.

The Measure of Value.

The number of blooms per square foot of bench, and the number of dollars per year is the only question the commercial grower should consider. The average number of blooms per plant is a deceiving method of calculating the profitableness of a variety, for one plant of some varieties will occupy the same space as three of a different type which run to bloom and not to plant.

Then, too, one year's experience with a novelty is not always a proper guide, if the results be shown merely on paper. A different handling may produce different results. Very few varieties become disseminated without having some good features, and while one variety may do well in a locality, another may not. This is the nature of the beast, and having in mind several that have failed with me, and done well elsewhere, I will drop the subject.

Given, then, a stock of standard varieties, what is the best method of handling them all the way through? To this I reply, with consideration for the individuality of each and every variety in your list. I will try to explain myself on this subject.

Three Classes of Carnations.

Three distinct classes of varieties appear to me. One is inclined to soft, heavy foliage and curly leaves. This type is inclined to come short-jointed and to require an unusually heavy body of roots to produce early blooms with stems long enough to be worth the handling. For these there is nothing but indoor culture to secure the best results.

The second class is the doubtful one: The thin-foliaged, loose-jointed specimen, which makes only bloom if grown inside, and very little plant. It needs less soil, and, with less top, makes correspondingly less root. Field culture, with early benching, seems the best, as the production of plant is easier to accomplish in the field.

As a type of the third or variable class, I wish to mention Enchantress, a variety which will be found superb for indoor culture, and an easy variety to lift from the field, even as late as September, to fill the last ends and prevent loss of space.

Methods of Handling.

Classing these varieties, then, as we do, we plan our planting as soon as we can determine how much room we can count on after Easter. The condition of the breaks from ten to twelve inches above the soil in February will determine this. Get the heavy-foliaged varieties ready for an early start. Then comes the wait for after Memorial day, and the summer's shifting is in full blast, aiming always to leave a part of a house of white and some Enchantress for the last of June.

We like to handle young stock in pots for the April benching, and 3-inch is a convenient size to handle, this stock having been shifted from 2-inch, or 2¼-inch, as the case may be. Where this stock has been in 2-inch, however, a shift to 2½-inch and then to 3-inch is to be preferred to a single repotting.

For later use, benching out in shallow soil about four inches apart gives a better chance for the plants, and means less work, and danger of loss or stunting, due to being potbound, is avoided.

Field planting from 2-inch pots is the next in order, and then the care in the field. Summer watering I do not approve of, and for the following reasons: It is seldom that the soil takes up this moisture to any depth. If done at night, the sun of the next day takes more, even, than was given. A continual wetting of the foliage at night is a great incentive to leaf spot, and growth under these conditions will be soft and is therefore an easy subject to such fungus.

The best plants come from the field that gets the most hoeing, and I do not think a well cultivated field can be improved upon, except by more hoeing.

Our system, then, is a combination of the two, or rather three methods. Pot culture, bedding them out in the houses intended for chrysanthemums, and field culture.

Don't Handle All Alike.

''Would you plant them all inside if you could?'' is a question I am often asked, and I can only answer it by saying that it is an impossibility to handle all our stock with any one method. Our supply of bloom is broken for only two months, as we cut by September, first from the first planted houses, and our last houses we aim to plant in early July, and do not care to cut from them until November.

Last season we planted one bench in March, and they are still looking well and producing good blooms.

''Do you prefer the bench to the solid bed?'' is another question often asked. I will answer it by saying that for early planted stock the bed is superior; for field plants I prefer the bench. The heavy-foliaged varieties seem to be in their element on the beds, while the others seem to even up matters.

Watchfulness Price of Success.

Temperatures can almost be figured by classes, the heavy-foliaged varieties, as a rule, standing for a little more heat. The evenness of the night temperature is perhaps the most essential. Seldom have we had any trouble with bloom which could not be traced to this source. Softness in such varieties as Enchantress usually means an overabundance of water at the root, or a too high temperature at night. A hard bud is usually a check from contact with glass, or cold draughts of air at some time, due, perhaps, to a sudden drop in temperature, or a broken pane of glass. If we would grow carnations well, we must watch them nights.

The producing of the best is one long struggle. Insects, fungi and temperature all make it a never-ending fight. Watchfulness, combined with common sense and the willingness to do hard work, will succeed in meeting these troubles, and coming out with success and credit.

To the retailer I would say, help your grower. What sells best with you? What colors are you wanting most? Advise him how they keep, and he will know how to run the houses.

And, growers, let me say to you that it is poor economy to grow second-class stock because business is dull this season. On good stock depends your future, for it is one of the essential elements of success.

BEST CARNATIONS.

I wish you would give a beginner a list of the best carnations, a few only, from the standpoint of fragrance, productiveness, non-bursting calyx and good stem. Of course they must be strong growers.

N. N. C.

There are now so many splendid varieties of carnations on the market that it would be impossible for me to select a few sorts and say that they will do best for you. You would better get several varieties in each color for trial, and then select the ones which strike your fancy.

I will name in each color first the ones which we consider best, etc., as follows: White—White Perfection, White Enchantress, Vesper, Lady Bountiful. Light Pink—Enchantress, Fair Maid. Rose-pink—Rose-pink Enchantress, Winsor. Dark Pink—Pink Imperial, Aristocrat, Lawson. Red—Victory, Red Chief, Beacon. Crimson—Crimson Glow, Harlowarden, H. Fenn.

Any of the above varieties will pay you well for the space they will take up on your benches, and any one of them might strike your fancy better than all the others in its color. You will notice that I have mentioned none of this year's novelties. You would do well to try some of them, in a limited way.

WORMS ON CARNATIONS.

I have been troubled with certain worms that work mostly at night and resemble the common garden cutworm. When grown they are from an inch to an inch and a half long. I have tried nicotine extracts at a good strength without killing them, and find no way of getting rid of them except by picking, but when so small it is hard work finding them, especially on carnations. I shall be very grateful if any one can tell me of some sure way of getting rid of them without hurting the plants.

E. C.

The worms you complain of are common and most carnation growers have had more or less experience with them. They belong to the cutworm family, only they work in the top of the plants instead of at the base. Hand picking is a sure remedy if you can catch them all, but as they feed mostly at night, that is a tiresome job. A better way is to bait and poison them. Take ordinary wheat bran, mix with it enough sugar-cane molasses to moisten it and then add to this enough Paris green to make it deadly. Drop a little of this around where you know they are, and you will soon be rid of them. Repeat this a few times, until you see no more signs of them. This will also get rid of wood lice, or sow bugs, if you are troubled with them. A. F. J. B.

SPLIT ENCHANTRESS.

We send you, under separate cover, buds from our Enchantress carnations. Over sixty per cent are splitting. The night temperature in this house is between 48 and 52 degrees; the day temperature is from 65 to 70 degrees on clear days and 58 or 60 degrees on cloudy days. We have in the same house White Perfection, Cardinal, Queen Louise and Fenn, which have had the same treatment. Queen Louise is splitting at the rate of about twenty per cent. White Perfection and Aristocrat do not split at all. Of Fenn and Cardinal not over five per cent are split. This temperature has been maintained since January 1. The plants have been fed but once, which was three weeks ago, on ground bone. In November and December we kept them pretty dry and the temperature at night often ran to 56 degrees, but we had few splits. Our soil is light and dries out quickly, and I thought they had been checked by keeping them dry, so I have been giving them much more water since the first of the year. J. C. N.

The specimens came to hand in a badly frozen condition and therefore did not disclose as much as they would likely have if fresh. I could see that every bud had a burst calyx, and they all had the appearance of inferior Enchantress. The size of the buds and of the stems was not that of average quality Enchantress. In fact, the whole bunch looked as we sometimes see occasional plants of Enchantress; plants which seem to have lost their vitality and are unable to produce good blooms. Sometimes these plants will be full of yellow spots, but at other times they simply lack that gray "bloom" we like to see on our carnation plants and have a light, yellowish green color instead. It may be that your stock has lost its vigor from improper cutting selection or some other cause and this inferior bloom is the result.

Your temperature is all right, and if your other varieties all are doing well the trouble cannot be laid to your general treatment. In fact, all these circumstances would indicate weakness in your stock. Unless you can select cuttings from plants which produce good blooms, I would advise you to buy new stock from someone who has vigorous plants, in good health. A. F. J. B.

THE SIX O'CLOCK ROOSTER.

The crest of J. K. Allen, the New York wholesaler, is no lion sejant, but a rooster rampant, on a rose leaf, for Mr. Allen takes pride in the fact that he has been at his store, ready for business, "every morning at 6 o'clock" for twenty years. During these two decades he has not only won a reputation for promptness and regularity, but has given proof of energy and integrity, necessary qualities for the wise management of the finances of the New York Florists' Club, which were placed in his hands at the last election.

While attending strictly to business, Mr. Allen has found time to take an active part in the conduct of public affairs in Kearney, N. J., where he makes his home. He is one of the commissioners of the Carnegie library and has also served on the board of education. For seven years, also, he was a member of the Kearney fire department and was honored at different times with official positions in that organization.

Mr. Allen was born in Whippany, Morris county, N. J., about fifty years ago, and was educated in the public schools of Morristown. NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

As was reported in the REVIEW two weeks ago, Chairman W. F. Kasting, of the committee of fifty for the national flower show, has called a meeting of that body at Chicago March 26, and Secretary J. H. Burdett has now sent out the formal notice. The meeting is to be held during the exhibition of the American Rose Society.

The premium list is not yet complete, but will be issued before the meeting of the committee. The arrangement of the list has been the greatest undertaking of this character ever put upon the shoulders of any committee, for with the innumerable special premiums it certainly will be the greatest premium list ever issued for a flower show anywhere in the world.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

J. A. PETERSON, Cincinnati, takes the chill off the water he uses through the hose by passing the water pipe for a few feet through a 4-inch pipe in which live steam from the boiler is circulated.

IT is worth while noting that while interest in new carnations seems to have abated as their number has increased, the interest in new roses is greater than ever, even if buyers are not disposed to plunge.

A GENTLEMAN named Stern, of whom such levity would not be expected, observes that "trying to do business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark; you know what you are doing, but nobody else does."

THE Classified Department of the REVIEW is the great medium of exchange between florists. Thousands buy from the offerings there, but do not avail themselves of the opportunity it presents to dispose of their own little lots of surplus stock.

THE correspondent at Kokomo who signs himself "Potter" and wants to know what is considered a day's work at potting cuttings in the several large establishments he names, should write to the proprietors of those places and sign his name.

THE centennial exposition of the Societe Royale d'Agriculture et de Botanique, of Ghent, Belgium, will be held in the gardens of the Casino from April 23 to May 3, 1908. This exposition is international and devoted exclusively to plants, flowers, seeds, and in general to everything pertaining to the horticultural trade. This exposition is held regularly every four years.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondents of the REVIEW are instructed to use the wires of the Postal Telegraph Co., whenever possible, and advertisers and others are requested to do so when telegraphing to the REVIEW.

SHADING.

Please give us the formula for shading houses of cucumbers in March and later. W. D. H.

One gallon of kerosene to ten pounds of white lead, well mixed and put on with a brush, will make a shade sufficiently heavy for the purpose in hand, and withstand the rains. This shading does not injure the paint and is easily removed by rubbing with a dry brush.
WILLIAM SCOTT.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Plan of Affiliation.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America, realizing the necessity of closer relations with the various horticultural societies throughout the country, and agreeable to a vote taken at the annual meeting in New York City November 6, 1907, the executive committee cheerfully invites the hearty co-operation of every horticultural society in the United States, and offers the following for their careful consideration:

Any horticultural society, or gardeners' or florists' club may become affiliated with the Chrysanthemum Society of America on payment of an annual fee of $25, such fee entitling it to the following privileges:

1. The C. S. A. will offer a substantial silver trophy as a prize for chrysanthemums; the character of the class, and conditions of the competition to be left to the discretion of the society so affiliated.

2. To receive twelve copies of the C. S. A. publication, free of charge.

3. To have two free passes to the annual exhibition of the C. S. A.

4. To elect one of its members as a delegate to the annual meeting of the parent society, with voice and vote on any subject, except matters of finance, such delegate to be annually elected by the society affiliated.

Conditions of Affiliation.

Subject to the foregoing, the affiliated society shall pay the above mentioned fee on or before April 1 of each year to the secretary of the C. S. A. and furnish the following information:

(a) The full title of the society, the name and address of the secretary, and the name of the delegate elected.

(b) The date on which the next fall show will be held, and the conditions under which the C. S. A. trophy will be given.

(c) A copy of the prize schedule of the affiliated society to be sent to the secretary of the National Society as soon as possible after publication.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

My Easter lilies, which are from twelve to sixteen inches high, are now showing buds deep down in the leaves. Can I retard them for Easter? I have never had them so short before and yet they look fine and sturdy. I have been hustling them along, not expecting them to bud under thirty inches in height.
C. P. N.

Your plants will be all right and of just the proper height. Probably hard forcing has caused them to be so tall in past seasons. If you keep them in a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, they should come in nicely for Easter, which comes this year on April 19. If you can count the buds the first week in March, they will flower on time. So much depends on climatic conditions that some allowances must always be made on this account. It is better, however, to get your plants along now, as it is comparatively easy to retard them when once you can see the buds expanding.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It may have been Washington's birthday, with its dinners, or it may have been some other factor, but at any rate the market enjoyed a fine day's business February 21, and Saturday also was satisfactory. This was not because of increased prices, but because it was possible to move an immense quantity of stock at low rates for all except the choicest.

The present week opened with one of the dullest Mondays this market ever has known, and Tuesday, as it almost always is, was worse than the day before. There is no price for anything except roses, and roses are so much more abundant than they have been that values in this department are on the down grade in spite of splendid quality.

There is naturally much discussion among growers and wholesalers as to the cause of the present condition in the market. Business in nearly every line in Chicago is quiet just now, and some florists assert that the state of the market shows we are feeling the effect of slow business in general lines; but others say that it is only another case where a general increase in supplies throughout the territory which Chicago looks to for its business, has resulted in giving Chicago's customers a local supply, so that they need not draw upon this market, by which reasoning they account for the falling off in the shipping trade. Those who look at the matter in this light point out that this condition has confronted this market regularly several times a year and that it may be expected to do so as frequently in the future. At the same time, it usually is only a matter of a couple of weeks before the heavy cuts pass off and the demand springs up again in full force almost in a day.

At present the supplies of carnations are greatly beyond the possibilities of any legitimate market. The only chance for a clean-up is by cheap sales to the department stores and others who can use large quantities of stock when they can get what they want at their own figure. The quality of carnations is superb.

The price of New York violets ranges from 50 cents per hundred to the point where it vanishes in the waste barrel. Not all the receipts can be sold at any price. Singles are less abundant than they were and sell better than the doubles.

Bulbous stock never sold so low in February as it now is selling in the Chicago market. Sam Pearce, who probably is in as good a position as anyone to know, says that bulbous flowers on the average are bringing only half as much as they did a year ago. Callas are abundant, and Easter lilies also. Sweet peas are coming in heavily and are fine. The best sell well, but the low grades do not move.

The one item on which the market is stiff is the American Beauty rose. Crops are generally at a low ebb and quality nothing to brag about. There are plenty of shorts and some medium lengths, but really good long-stemmed Beauties are hard to find and do not go around.

The weather-man predicts more cloudy and cold weather. It would put new life in the market, by checking production, both here and throughout the country. Mardi Gras, March 2 and 3, is expected to make a good call from New Orleans.

Good Times Coming.

In looking about for a new meeting place for the Florists' Club, President Leonard Kill received so good a proposition from the Union restaurant, 111 Randolph street, that the members of the club whom he consulted told him to close with it for the next meeting. It will be necessary to change the meeting night from the second Thursday to the first Thursday of each month, and so the notices which will be mailed to members next Monday will call the March meeting for the private clubroom at the Union at 8 p. m., Thursday, March 5. Don't fail to be there.

President Kill has appointed as a committee on Rose Society banquet, William Kidwell, C. W. McKellar and Harry Lubliner.

Various Notes.

C. H. Fisk has closed the H. F. Halle store, so long established on West Madison street, and concentrated his business at his place around the corner. The Halle fixtures have been sold and the building rented for a cigar factory.

Speaking of carnations, the A. L. Randall Co. was interested to note in last week's REVIEW that some of the New York wholesalers "receive over 10,000 a day on the average." The lightest receipts of the Randall Co. any day last week were just a few less than 11,000, and on Friday, which is the big shipping day, they had 16,875, but had to buy to fill some of the orders.

W. E. Lynch, of Hunt's, says he did a good business in To-bak-ine, hose and fertilizers at the state convention at Springfield last week.

H. A. Fisher, of Kalamazoo and Battle Creek, was in town this week, principally to buy palms, ferns and flowering plants. He says business has picked up materially in the last two or three weeks, but for the time being he will postpone the matter of opening additional stores.

At J. A. Budlong's they are busy grafting Killarney and Richmond roses. Not many Brides and Maids are being grafted this year, not because they have not faith in grafted stock, but because most of the Brides and Maids are young plants and will be carried over for next year.

William Fluegge, at Morton Grove, is cutting some fine White Enchantress. He is one of the few growers for this market who make The Queen their leading white carnation. Joseph Brooks, also of Morton Grove, is another who finds The Queen a most profitable sort. Mr. Fluegge is now cutting heavily of this variety and the quality is all that could be desired in so productive a variety.

Peter Reinberg and John Schillo, with their wives, leave Friday evening, February 28, for New Orleans. Mr. Reinberg will spend Tuesday, March 2, celebrating the Mardi Gras, instead of hustling for votes at the Democratic primaries, leaving that to Leonard Kill.

John Sinner calls attention to the fact that there has been no real glut in this market since early last summer, a longer period than any within his recollection when we have had no oversupply. He says he thinks the market ought to be willing to stand for one now.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will largely increase the planting of grafted roses next season. John Poehlmann says the crops of Killarney and Richmond in the next few weeks will make some people open their eyes.

H. W. Rodgers, of Weiland & Risch, was called to Spring Lake, Mich., by the illness of a sister.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports that the counter trade in seeds has shown a large increase in the last few days.

H. Bayersdorfer and wife, of Philadelphia, passed through Chicago February 24 on their way home from the Pacific coast. They did not stop in Chicago longer than was necessary to change roads, because of word of the serious illness of Mrs. Bayersdorfer's father.

J. J. Kruchten says a telephone is being put in the greenhouses of his father, N. J. Kruchten, by means of which he will hereafter be in communication with practically all his growers in the Bowmanville district.

George Reinberg cut 150 cattleyas February 24 and found them the most readily salable article that day.

Bassett & Washburn are preparing to bench about 85,000 carnations next season. Nearly one-third will be the red, Orland P. Bassett.

N. J. Wietor says that with the present state of supply and demand he is just as well pleased that Wietor Bros. put their money into flat buildings last year instead of into greenhouses.

Schramm Bros., at Arlington Heights, say they are cutting no more carnations than at this date last year, but that the stock is in specially fine shape. Fred Schramm is using Nicoticide over evaporating lamps and helping Kennicott Bros. Co. to push the sale of this fumigant.

C. W. McKellar has placed an order for a new Orr & Lockett ice-box, and will completely rearrange his store.

At E. C. Amling's it is said the shortage of Beauties will be at an end within a fortnight.

The Alpha Floral Co., Adams street and Wabash avenue, is making a trial of advertising in the Tribune. February 22 their advertisement read: "Extra! Extra! They are going fast! 30,000 carnations, 25 cents per dozen. 10,000 sweet violets, 15 cents per bunch. 50,000 New York violets, 25 cents and 50 cents per bunch. Flowers ordered by phone guaranteed to meet your approval."

Vaughan & Sperry have put in a line of jardinieres, fern dishes, hanging baskets, and similar plant receptacles in several styles of ware.

Among last week's visitors were J. A. Peterson and Mrs. Peterson, of Cincinnati. They had a line of samples of begonias, adiantums, etc., at the Palmer House. J. A. Peterson, Jr., is with the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove.

Miss Nell W. Sisler, secretary of the E. H. Hunt corporation, has been ill for several days.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The wholesalers unite in saying there is no change in the market. Prices remain at the low standard of last week and, with the clear weather and increasing shipments, there is little on which to build much encouragement, but Easter is only six short weeks away. The growers who come to town are not cheerful, but they see for themselves and are accepting the inevitable with resignation. It has been a hard winter, especially for those with the smaller greenhouse establishments, most of which make carnations a specialty.

At the low prices now prevailing, and with the warmer weather, fortunately everything arriving can be disposed of at some figure, and so retailers and

The vincas are all sold; the classified adv. was a good investment.—E. A. Muchow, Clarence, N. Y., February 20, 1908.

Why don't you send the Review a classified adv. offering something, no matter what, that you would like to turn into cash?

the merchants of the pavement, who have been enabled to buy of late at prices never before reached in February, have no legitimate complaint. Carnations still lead the procession in numbers and depressed values. A year ago they sold at twice and three times present rates. No one ever saw better stock, nor greater variety, than daily floods the New York market. There seems to be no stemming of the tide. Those not sold the day of arrival, go to the street at any price.

Roses have held up fairly well, considering the cheapness of other stock. The best Beauties have brought 50 cents, and Maids and Brides have commanded 8 cents and 10 cents. The supply has not been up to the demand and the street-men have to be contented with carnations, narcissi, valley and violets. Of these there is no end. The southern daffodils are on the way. What shall we do with them?

Valley is most abundant. Violets seldom go above 40 cents on arrival. Imagine the price when they are scentless. The street corners are blue with them.

Washington's birthday gave the market a slight thrill and brought some sunshine to the wholesale section. Prices did not advance, but the boxes were emptier, and the present week began with a fairly hopeful foundation for improvement.

Great quantities of flowers were used at the funeral of the daughter of Oliver Belmont, and at the Emeral and French balls, the two great opera houses, the numerous theaters, etc., the constant travel to Europe, but all combined failed to create a shortage in last week's enormous receipts.

Various Notes.

Handsome decorations are assured, and an interesting program, at the Florists' Club's annual banquet February 29. This is the last call to dinner. Telephone Chairman Sheridan that you will be there, if you have not already done so. It is the only chance you may ever have to dine February 29 at a New York Florists' Club celebration.

aging outlook. This seems to be concurred in by all the men who build for florists, every firm on this line of work having many orders booked.

The Cleary Horticultural Co. will open its auction season about the middle of March, with Ambrose Cleary in command. The firm has just completed the furnishing of its offices on Vesey street, and their importations of nursery stock, bulbs, etc., will be on a larger scale than ever before.

Maltus & Ware, at 14 Stone street, are headquarters for the European bulb men now on their western travels.

Henry & Lee have caught the decorative inspiration and have a fine office in a modern building. Mr. Henry has just returned from a western trip and Mr. Fulton, from Japan.

Weiss & Son, One Hundred and Sixty-second street, have opened a branch store at 1 East Forty-first street, corner of Fifth avenue, one block from Wadley & Smythe's.

The sympathy of the trade is tendered James McManus in the death of his father.

MacIntosh, the retailer, will vacate the store he now occupies May 1, and will move to the corner of Broadway and Forty-seventh street, close to the Hotel Astor, and a splendid location.

W. A. Burnham, of Lord & Burnham Co., sailed for Europe February 19.

C. W. Ward has returned home after a trip of three weeks in the south.

A fire at Oceanic, N. J., February 19, destroyed the barns and injured the Bliss greenhouses, where the popular gardener, Nicholas Butterback, is in charge. Great loss was prevented by his work, in which his face and hands were badly burned.

The Rapp Horticultural Building Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Roy I. Rapp and William J. McCormick, both of this city, and William C. Lange, College Point, N. Y.

Arthur T. Boddington's representatives bring back the most inspiring reports as to the general prosperity of the country and the continued call for all horticultural supplies. To talk with these gentlemen of the road is a sure cure for pessimism. H. Frank Darrow, the importer, talks in a similar strain after his trip among his customers.

F. W. O. Schmitz, of Prince Bay, expects the biggest season in his career.

The Rickards Bros. have had a strenuous winter. Some wonderful totals of daily sales, which I have seen, would open your eyes. It is a cold banquet that is not followed by a filled order book. Music hath charms. Their lieutenant, Frank Duggan, is celebrating this month his twentieth anniversary with the house.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. was never in such perfect readiness to serve the interests of its customers as this season. The big store at 50 Barclay street has been remodeled since last year's rush time.

H. H. Berger & Co. are thoroughly established in their new store at 70 Warren street and the rush already has begun with them.

H. Kenney, in Brooklyn, reports a big call for sphagnum moss.

O. V. Zangen, in Hoboken, reports that so far the season is far ahead of any year at the same date since he established his business.

Joseph S. Fenrich is himself again. The attempt to change the course of a trolley car with one's head is a mistake.

Reed & Keller have something new in their windows in the line of Pompeian statuary vases. Their only complaint is of slow collections.

Frank S. Hicks & Co. are kicking for more room. Mr. Van Riper is an able lieutenant and as well known through his celebrated "points" as any man in the trade.

Russin & Hanfling, the basket and supply men, are well satisfied with the winter's results. They do a large shipping trade in sheaves and fancy baskets.

The new firm, D. Smith & Co., say business is satisfactory. They expect to be in the swim for Easter.

John P. Scherer now makes his headquarters at Union Hill, N. J., where he resides.

Bonnet & Blake, of Brooklyn, were close to the big fire in the Brooklyn city hall last week, but escaped loss. This house and that of W. H. Kuebler, on Willoughby street, are both growing rapidly.

The Geller Florist Supply Co. has the largest show room of any supply house in New York and claims an ever increasing volume of business.

B. Rosens, the Angelus bell inventor, has developed a large trade in greens, as well as in florists' supplies, and says he has found his aggregate of sales increasing every month since he began.

Samuel A. Woodrow has been shipping plants daily to New England points since his successful canvass of a few weeks ago.

Ford Bros. have handled an enormous aggregate of carnations during the last month, some days as many as 20,000 reaching their headquarters.

H. Suzuki, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., is in the city, his first visit to New York, and will remain for some weeks before visiting Europe.

William Elliott & Sons will move on May 1 to new and more extensive quarters on Vesey street. For three years they have patiently endured the inconvenience entailed by the building of the McAdoo tunnel, only to have rents doubled as a reward for patient submission on its completion. The new store, however, is only a block away from their headquarters since 1905, and a long lease makes further changes improbable.

Next week Hanft Bros. move to their new store on Madison avenue and Sixty-second street.

C. Myer, at Fifty-seventh street and Madison avenue, is now practically monarch of all he surveys at his important corner.

Fred Smythe, of the firm of Wadley & Smythe, Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, left on Thursday, accompanied by his mother, for a pleasure trip in Europe. Mr. Smythe now controls four nurseries in the vicinity of New York, and does a large business in landscape planting, his greatest achievement being the laying out and planting of the McKinley memorial grounds at Canton.

David Clarke's Sons are already preparing their announcements for the great day of the retail florists' year and anticipate the usual success. Financial depression makes but little headway in reducing the aggregate of monthly sales with this old-time establishment.

George M. Stumpp, of Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, decorated a new restaurant on Fulton street last week, with wild smilax, evergreens, flowering plants and cut flowers in most artistic and elaborate style.

Philip Kessler was appointed a delegate by the wholesale element of the Cbogan building to represent it at the ball of the French students at Madison Square garden Friday evening last. No one could have made a higher record.

Hugh Nelson, of Perkins & Nelson, has been on the sick list for a week, and has lots of company.

PLYMOUTH, IND.

The Argos Floral & Plant Co., of Argos, is preparing to grow large quantities of vegetable plants, which find a market in their own and the surrounding towns. They have a nice, clean stock of carnations and other flowers and are having a good trade on them.

Jacob Jordan, at Plymouth, grows lettuce in his greenhouse in the winter months. He is now getting his cabbage, tomato and other vegetable plants started. He supplies the stores here and at Bremen with vegetable plants in flats. He is planning to grow more than usual this season. His business is market gardening and vegetable plants.

George Nagle is making his usual preparations for the coming season. He has been the leading market gardener here for years. His garden is always scrupulously clean and he knows how to put his products in attractive shape to sell from the wagon.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We are unable to report any decided improvement in the market. On one or two days better clearances have been effected, but at a sacrifice in values. More flowers are arriving than the buying public want and, with the near approach of Lent and a cessation of social activities, the chances for a stronger market for some weeks are far from bright. Roses are more abundant and dropping in price. Best American Beauties, which were bringing $8 to $9 per dozen, have dropped to $6. This rose is now abundant. Brides and Maids of the best quality bring fair prices, but other grades are cheap. Of Killarney some fine blooms are arriving; some select are making as high as $4 a dozen. Richmond is also coming of fine quality and sells quite well. Carnations show no improvement. Such a glut of these has not been seen in Boston for years. Violets are about the only redeeming feature in an otherwise disorganized market. They are holding up well and selling out clean.

Bulbous stock is hard to move at low prices, although the quality is exceptionally good. Stocks are arriving, of good strains finely grown, but are neglected. Lilies and callas are more than sufficient for requirements. Lilac is bringing unremunerative prices and the same holds good of valley. For sweet peas there is a fair call, but snapdragons, mignonette and freesias sell poorly. For adiantum and asparagus there is a moderate call.

Club Meeting.

Carnation night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 25, attracted a large attendance, about 250 members being present, also some visitors from a distance. The president announced the motto for the year to be: "Rowing, Not Drifting."

The exhibits were numerous and included Andrew Carnegie, the scarlet sport of Harlowarden, from Mrs. J. P. Snow, which showed up well. William Nicholson had a superb vase of Afterglow, which was awarded a report of superior merit. H. A. Jahn had Lloyd and other good seedlings. H. W. Field, of Northampton, showed his new white, President Seelye, the result of a cross between Lawson and The Queen, which promises well as a commercial sort.

A fine Farleyense fern from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, received a report of superior merit for culture. The same exhibitor showed White Perfection, Winsor and Queen Louise carnations. Peter Fisher showed Mrs. Tom Harvey, Winsor and Beacon carnations. M. A. Patten exhibited several fine seedling carnations. E. B. Beales showed three excellent white seedling carnations.

J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., sent a vase of Harvard. The Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., sent Climax and Wanoka. The H. A. Stevens Co. exhibited crimson seedlings. J. F. Flood showed fine Beacon. A. Roper received a report of superior merit for Bay State and also showed an excellent deep pink seedling. John Barr had a promising light pink seedling. Ellen A. Mansfield had excellent Lawson and Fair Maid.

Duncan Finlayson showed schizanthus and Platyclinis glumacea well bloomed. Elijah Wood had a good scarlet seedling carnation.

Among the rose exhibits, F. H. Kramer, of Washington, sent a vase of Queen Beatrice, and John Cook, of Baltimore, a display of My Maryland, which all the rose growers liked.

Joseph Fuller exhibited a new lobelia and William Downs had Bougainvillea glabra.

W. Harrison, of Heston, England, was present and, among other things, said American carnations in February are the equal of those seen in England in April and May.

M. A. Patten made a neat address on the Washington convention of the Carnation Society and boomed Indianapolis strongly.

Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, provided an excellent paper, which appears elsewhere in this issue. In the discussion, Peter Fisher said the time to sow carnation seeds is as soon as ripe. Mr. Pierson believes lime is the best fertilizer. His choice of best six varieties is: Winsor, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Beacon, Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress. Dipping in Bordeaux is the best cure for rust. Other speakers were Wilfrid Wheeler, D. Finlayson, President Westwood announced the appointment of the following commitees: Exhibits—George M. Anderson, chairman; J. W. Duncan, A. H. Fewkes, Peter Fisher, F. J. Rea, William Robb, Charles Sander, James Wheeler, Wilfrid Wheeler, William Westland. Refreshments—J. P. A. Guerineau, chairman; George W. Butterworth, Joseph E. Barry 2nd, W. D. Nickerson, P. McManus, Patrick J. Turley.

Nine new members were elected. It was voted that the meeting March 18 be devoted to roses, papers to be presented by William Elliott and Eben Holmes; also that the club hold a banquet in March.

Refreshments were served and the February meeting of 1908 was pronounced the best the club has yet held.

Various Notes.

The flower show at the Park Street market, February 29, is expected to attract many out-of-town visitors. It is too bad that the space is so cramped for what promises to be a fine exhibition.

At Waban Conservatories a large stock of White Killarney rose is being worked up. The quality of the Killarney grown here surpasses anything hitherto seen in Boston, some carrying 3-foot stems.

William Nicholson will take in the Chicago rose show. He reports heavy sale on Carnation Afterglow, as many cuttings being booked as can be supplied.

T. F. Galvin has been showing some fine Dendrobium nobile and D. Wardianum among other orchids at his Tremont street store.

W. B. Goodenow is having splendid success this season with double violets, which are selling better here than any other flowers this season. He will follow his violet crop with tomatoes.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report trade as fairly good. Flowers have to be moved at a low price to clear, but greens do better.

The seed houses report mail orders as well up to the average and anticipate a good volume of business.

The retrenchment policy inaugurated by Mayor Hibbard, by which Boston will save over $2,500,000 the present year, cuts $100,000 from the public grounds department, the public gardens being included in this branch. The park department, under charge of Superintendent Pettigrew, is given the same appropriation as a year ago.

Thomas Pegler is having a good call for the improved economy bracket, for which he is agent at Park Street market. This is one of the best devices I have seen for florists, being easily put up.

Inquiries among the trade would indicate that there will be rather less greenhouse building the coming season in this section.

George E. Baldwin, of Carrillo & Baldwin, and Thomas Knight, of Knight & Struck, were recent visitors. The former booked some large orders for orchids.

W. N. CRAIG.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Charles P. Brunner has assumed charge of the cut flower department at Roth & Livingston's drug store.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Quite a lot of activity was displayed in the local cut flower market last week, and the weather is just right for flower buyers. The activity showed itself in both wholesale and retail circles. The west end retailers report a good run of society work, and there was a call for many large designs. Downtown florists say transient trade was never better, all kinds of flowers selling well over the counter, especially violets. North and south florists, too, say that last week was a good one, with more funeral work than any other. This kind of business, of course, kept the wholesale commission men in good humor, for they were well supplied with cut stock of all kinds and of the best quality.

Roses are becoming more plentiful. Violets are in heavy supply and prices have suffered greatly. Carnations, too, are abundant, but hardly any whites are being left over. Enchantress is especially plentiful.

In bulb stock the market has everything in season. All greens had a good call last week. Prices on stock in general are considered reasonable.

Various Notes.

Chairman Sanders, of the executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, reports that the spring flower show will be held March 10 to 12 in the banquet hall of the Grand avenue Masonic Temple. Last year's show was a great success and a show on a much larger scale will be given this year, with good cash prizes. Premium lists can Charles Young, son of James Young, president of C. Young & Sons Co., selected Washington's birthday for his marriage to Miss Katherine Courtney, one of the well-known west end society girls. After the ceremony the happy couple left for a three weeks' trip to Florida.

James M. North, formerly in the retail business here, is now employed with Alex Johnson, managing the retail store on Easton avenue. The place is known as the Wellston Florist and Nursery, and they are doing a nice business.

Charles Schoenle reports an overflow of business last week. Mrs. Schoenle is again at her post, after a long illness.

The Michel Plant & Bulb Co. held an auction February 19, at its place on Magnolia avenue. The sale was largely attended by local florists, who bought heavily of ferns, palms and other decorative plants. This company was established in 1849 and is doing a large wholesale and retail business.

The downtown florists last week had a violet war, all handling several thousands each day. John Burke reports sales between 5,000 and 10,000 daily. The Riessen Floral Co., Alex Siegel and the Foster Floral Co. also report heavy sales on them. Ten cents per bunch of twenty-five for fresh stock was asked.

George Windler, on Delore avenue, is making preparations for an extra fine display of bulb stock for the spring flower show next month.

C. C. Sanders, Emil Schray and Henry Felter will have fine spring blooming plants for the show.

C. Young & Sons Co. are at present displaying fine bulbous plants in bloom in their retail store.

George Waldbart and Mrs. M. M. Ayers, at Olive street and Grand avenue, are showing extra fine blooming plants for the benefit of the passers-by. Their show houses along this great thoroughfare are great attractions.

The St. Louis, Belleville and Kirkwood delegation, who attended the third annual meeting of the Illinois Florists' Association, held at Springfield, Ill., last week, got back in due time and reported a great time and was glad to meet the local trade and so many friends from Chicago. William Smith, Charles Kuehn, Henry Berning and George Angermueller, our four wholesalers, attended and say they will not miss the next one.

VIOLET LEAVES DISEASED.

I am sending you a package of diseased violet leaves. The trouble seems to be spreading over the house. It is run at 38 to 42 degrees at night, and 10 to 20 degrees higher in the day. The soil was a decomposed clay sod, with about one-fourth rotted cow manure and a dressing of bone meal. This grew a crop of mums, after which the soil was worked over, a dressing of rotted manure added, and the violets planted. They have been and are now giving a large picking of blooms every day. About a month ago I thought the blooms were beginning to get smaller and gave the bed a light dressing of sheep manure and bone meal. I noticed some of the plants were affected before this application, but more since, especially during the last ten days. D. W. T.

The leaves arrived in good condition, being almost as fresh as when picked. We think your first mistake and most serious one was in planting your violets in the old chrysanthemum soil. Even the addition of some manure cannot make it equal to fresh compost. Chrysanthemums are strong rooting subjects and take much nourishment from the soil. For a crop like violets, which are to occupy the benches or beds for half the year, it would have paid you to entirely renew the soil. The proportions of clay sod and cow manure were about right, but my experience has not been favorable to the use of bone for violets. If you used a strong dose of this, herein would lie some of your trouble. Your temperatures have been all right and if other conditions had been correct, your plants should have done well.

It is quite common to see occasional plants of single violets (I presume yours are Princess of Wales) show the disease yours have, but by careful selection of stock for propagation it is largely eliminated the following season. Top-dressing with sheep or other animal manures has been found beneficial, but I have known great injury to result from surfacings of bone meal. I would strongly advise you to refrain from using bone or other chemicals in future.

The season is quite late now to do

THE DEATH ROLL.

Ewald Suder.

Despondent over ill health, Ewald Suder, son of Mrs. Henrietta Suder, a well-known florist at Toledo, O., committed suicide February 24 by sending a bullet through his brain while waiting for his supper in the dining-room of his mother's home. Mr. Suder was 37 years old and single. He was popular about town and was particularly well liked among the florists of the city. For a number of years he had been in charge of his mother's greenhouses. During the last few weeks he has been in failing health, and February 22 was forced to give up his work. He is survived by his mother, a brother and sister.

John Freeman.

John Freeman, of Aurora, Ill., died February 19, after a brief illness, and was buried February 21, the funeral being largely attended. The Norden Soner, of which he was a prominent member, attended in a body. The deceased was a prominent member of the Swedish Lutheran church and was loved and respected by all of the members. Interment was in West Aurora cemetery.

There were two Freeman brothers, each in the florists' business for himself at Aurora, Peter on Spruce street, and John on North Lake street. Each did a good business and had been established many years.

Miss Ross Colberg.

Miss Ross Colberg, daughter of N. P. Colberg, of Morris, Ill., died February 14. While seated at the breakfast table she sank back unconscious and, though a physician was immediately summoned, she was dead before he arrived. She was 35 years of age and had been an invalid all her life. She was born at Princeton, Ill.

ADIANTUM SCUTUM ROSEUM.

The cultivation of Adiantum cuneatum is, in many greenhouse establishments in England, says the Gardeners' Chronicle, giving place to A. scutum roseum. In the autumn, A. scutum comes in usefully, if the fronds have not been produced under too much shade, and so are not soft and liable to decay. The plants will then for a time, at any rate, take no harm if placed under the benches, and they will grow healthy and strong in a warmth of 60 degrees to 65 degrees. Plants will thus be provided for the Christmas season, such as no other adiantum can equal. Another good quality of the plant is its rapid growth, which is unapproached by any other species. One-year-old plants, by good culture, may reach a height of fifteen to eighteen inches, and in two years they may attain a diameter of three feet. A. scutum does not require so high a degree of warmth as A. cuneatum.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The quality of cut flowers coming to town this week has never been excelled in the month of February. It really seems that by far the larger proportion of many varieties of stock has moved into the special class. The demand is still unequal to the supply, but additional shipping orders have given a better tone to the market.

Carnations continue the weakest flower on the list, the buyer who can take a quantity securing far better than listed quotations. Pink and white are mostly in demand, but there were days on which red carnations sold well. The supply of roses, especially Beauties, has fallen off. But there are plenty for all demands, excepting occasionally in the fancy grades. Cattleya Trianæ is nearly over, Cattleya Schroederiana being now in full supply. Lælias are about done. Cœlogyne cristata has been added to the list.

The supply of bulbous flowers is now at its height. The jonquil (or should we say single daffodil?) has been reinforced by Sir Watkin. Tulips can be had in all shades, yellow, pink, white, double orange, and occasionally scarlet. Sweet peas are wonderfully fine, white, pink and lavender being obtainable in quantity with good stems and large flowers.

Asparagus and adiantum continue scarce, which fact possibly increases the demand for smilax. Harrisii and callas are both plentiful and lower in price.

A True Story.

A small buyer (he is a very small buyer indeed) went into one of our commission houses some time ago to purchase some roses. He was much delighted on receiving what Mr. Battles would call the "personal attention" of the proprietor in addition to that of a salesman. So much pleasure did this personal attention afford the small buyer that he took the few pennies left him as change from a twenty-dollar bill with a very good grace indeed, feeling that even for a small buyer it is worth while occasionally to spend nineteen dollars and some odd cents on a plunge where you receive personal attention. Fancy this small buyer's feelings some time after when the aforesaid wholesaler naively explained to an admiring audience that he waited on fakers in person, not on his good customers, because when anything required looking after he could leave them without ceremony.

Various Notes.

MRS. JARDINE

We are most favorably impressed with Mrs. Jardine, and believe that it will make one of the best selling varieties of roses in the cut flower market during the winter months. Its strong points are its pleasing color (a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon-pink), its long, heavy stems (even the shorter stems hold their flowers erect), and its keeping qualities. From a grower's standpoint this promising variety is almost ideal; vigorous, healthy, free-blooming, producing few flowers of poor grade, and retaining its beautiful color even in dark weather.

We offer strong plants of Mrs. Jardine at the following prices: 2½-in. pots, $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000. Grafted Stock add $5.00 per 100

We can supply a limited quantity of cut flowers of Mrs. Jardine, $3.00 per doz.; 3 days' notice required.

ness of last year, which was a record-breaker. He finds the demand for plant baskets and ferneries large, florists having sold more plants last Christmas than for years. They are making preparations to do a large plant business for Easter.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., will speak before the Florists' Club March 3, subject, "New Things in an Old Country." Mr. Thilow is one of the ablest orators in the profession.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer have been recalled from their western trip by the serious illness of G. Levi. Mr. Levi is Mrs. Bayersdorfer's father.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. has received an order for Robert Scott & Son's new rose, Mrs. Jardine, from Liverpool, England.

Byron Thomas, Quakertown, Pa., is sending some nice, long-stemmed sweet peas to W. E. McKissick.

A. Cavanaugh, salesman and one of the best known and most popular employees of the Robert Craig Co., has been seriously ill for some time. It is doubtful whether Mr. Cavanaugh will be at his post again before Easter. He is greatly missed by everyone on the place, as well as by many visitors.

Smith & Van Aart, of Newtown, Pa., were first in the market with Sir Watkin, seen at W. E. McKissick's.

R. C. Hayden, treasurer of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., has brightened his associates by his daily presence in their midst once more.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., reports the arrival of many cases of Easter baskets and novelties this week on the steamers Armenia and Menomonie.

J. A. Smith, manager of the Henry F. Michell Co., reports the flower seed mail orders as larger this year than last. Mr. Smith believes that there will also be an exceptionally heavy demand for vegetable seeds.

M. Rice & Co. are showing some novel ideas in egg-shaped baskets for Easter, in white, pink, violet and moss green. These are meeting with large sales. Their stock of plant baskets, hampers and ferneries is constantly being increased by additions on incoming steamers.

The Floracroft Greenhouses, at Moorestown, N. J., Walter P. Stokes, proprietor, have an enviable reputation for hydrangeas, their stock being engaged far in advance of the flowering season at Easter.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving some exceptionally choice carnations, Enchantress, Winsor, Lady Bountiful, Harlowarden, and White Perfection being leaders.

King of the Yellows is considered superior to Yellow Prince as a cut tulip. It keeps better, is less easily bruised, and does not spot or damp readily at the tip of the petals. PHIL.

Bulletins on Floriculture.

Within the limits of this paper it is impossible to mention all reports of work done by the various stations.

In New York the Cornell Station has issued four publications on the chrysanthemum, dealing chiefly with tests of varieties; one bulletin each on the China asters, dahlias, annual flowers, a peony check list and two on sweet peas; one each on winter musk melons, English cucumbers, forcing tomatoes, mushroom growing, strawberry forcing; a second report on strawberry forcing, and notes on tomato forcing; also upon miscellaneous topics, like damping off; two bulletins on greenhouse heating and one on greenhouse notes.

At Geneva, in the same state, there has been issued one bulletin on carnation rust, anthracnose and stem-rot of the snapdragon, and ringing herbaceous plants; in vegetable forcing on forcing head lettuce, use of stable manure and nitrogenous chemical fertilizers for forcing lettuce, forcing tomatoes and mushroom growing and forcing lettuce in pots.

Massachusetts has published articles in its annual reports on soil sterilization and upon germination and growth in soils of different texture, also on the effect of electricity on plant growth; also bulletins on growing asters, cucumbers under glass and tomatoes under glass; nematode worms, rotting of greenhouse lettuce. A portion of one bulletin is devoted to greenhouse thrips.

From the New Jersey Station have appeared the bulletins on the rose chafer, rose scale, insects injurious to shade trees and ornamental plants, forcing tomatoes. The annual reports contain a great deal of information on the diseases of greenhouse plants.

New Hampshire Station has published bulletins on forcing dwarf tomatoes, green corn under glass, utilizing greenhouses in summer, forcing pole beans under glass, the white fly.

Connecticut, on the results of fertilizer experiments on tomatoes, carnations and radishes, and the white fly.

Ohio, on sub-irrigation of greenhouses, diseases of greenhouse plants and tomato forcing.

Nebraska has recently issued a bulletin on the carnation bud-rot and the mite.

Maryland, on soils and fertilizers for greenhouse crops, and greenhouse pests of Maryland.

Rhode Island, on soil sterilization, greenhouse benches, forcing rhubarb, greenhouse work.

Vermont, on the use of anesthetics in forcing plants, and the etherization of rhubarb for forcing.

Only one bulletin has been published on the culture of roses, and that from an unexpected quarter of the country—Oregon.

Our neighbor, Indiana, has published bulletins on a native white bedding plant, bacteriosis, chrysanthemum rust, a bacterial disease of tomatoes, indoor lettuce culture, growing lettuce with chemical fertilizers.

Illinois has published one bulletin and that upon the subject of tomato forcing. However, I may say that the manuscript for a bulletin on school gardens is ready, and data are at hand for three or four other bulletins, on strawberry forcing, peonies, and carnation fertilizers.

Pioneer Work in Illinois.

Including both the national and state appropriations, the total sum available for the use of the Illinois Experiment Station is $126,500.

I think it a matter of congratulation that this association secured the first appropriation for the exclusive purpose of experimentation in floriculture. Illinois leads in floriculture and it was quite fitting that she should take the lead in experimentation. The legislature is to be commended for its recognition of this industry by providing funds with which to start the work.

Since Illinois is taking the lead, we bear great responsibility, as the other states are watching with interest the outcome. We should be exceedingly careful, in the expenditure of the funds, to secure the greatest possible results. We may be certain that other states sooner or later will follow our example. Should we accomplish this, we need not fear but that we shall get further appropriations. It marks a new epoch in floriculture in the experiment stations.

The advisory committee decided that investigations on thrips be taken up this year. A search of the literature was begun to learn what was already known, including everything written by florists. From this and from correspondence it was learned that little was known about the species doing the damage or about their life history in greenhouses. It became necessary to enlist the services of the entomologists, and Dr. S. A. Forbes willingly detailed one of his most capable assistants.

Since the horticultural greenhouses at the university were put to other purposes, we had to seek houses at some other city. After considerable search and correspondence, the university authorities decided that work should be begun at Bloomington, since it seemed that the houses at that place were better adapted to our needs and more convenient.

Experiments at Bloomington.

The house selected was already planted to two varieties of carnations, Queen Louise and Genevieve Lord. Varieties of these colors do not show thrips injury unless the insects are numerous and the amount of feeding is considerable. As the house was planted late, there were few blooms until December, and consequently few thrips.

In the different compartments into which the house was divided we are testing the efficiency of some of the leading insecticides now on the market.

In two compartments we are using the insecticides as a spray, in three others for fumigation, in one both for fumigation and for spray, and in the other for check.

At the present writing there appears to be little difference in the efficiency of the different materials tried. In one instance injury was done the plants by using the substance according to the manufacturer's directions accompanying the goods.

It developed that, after all, we know little about the composition of insecticides; and, not having any insecticide law in this state, there might be cases where the compound contained little or none of the essential constituent. Pure nicotine is worth not less than $3 an ounce. The nicotine is the constituent which kills the insects. The price of the preparations was not uniform, neither were the claims of the manufacturers as to the amount of nicotine. However, the price did not vary according to the percentage of nicotine claimed to be in the remedy. Why this difference? Did a thirty per cent nicotine preparation contain other valuable material to justify its selling for more than a forty per cent nicotine preparation?

Analysis of Remedies.

There was one way to find out about some of these things and that was to analyze them, which I proceeded to arrange for. This work is in progress and I will call your attention to some completed results.

The insecticides so far as analyzed, with one exception, were ammonia free. The XL All vaporizing compound contained camphor in addition to nicotine, while the liquid preparation of the same name, and intended for spraying, contained one-tenth the amount of nicotine, with soap or oil.

We learned of a substance which is used for adulterating nicotine preparations, and which, it is asserted, is injurious to plants. This alkaloid is much cheaper than nicotine.

Among the insecticides available for destroying thrips is hydrocyanic acid gas, although its dangerous character may practically exclude its use except in the hands of careful men. The only experiments on carnation thrips reported were to the effect it did not kill thrips. We know that it does kill thrips, and in order to learn of its effect on the plant a series of tests was carried out on potted

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

Strong Plants on own roots, from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per doz.; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $1125.00; 10,000 for $2125.00.

carnation plants from the field. Twenty-eight tests were made on different lots of plants, using the gas at the rate of an ounce and three-fourths to seven ounces per 1,000 cubic feet, and at intervals of from five minutes to one hour, with one set exposed for twelve hours. The important consideration is that none of the tests was made at a higher temperature than the night temperature usually carried on carnation houses. The result was that the plants were not injured.

Perhaps some persons may think that we have not reported many results, but I wish to say that the responsibility resting on all connected with this work, whether on the committee or the station staff, and further, the amount of capital involved, are too great for any of us to report results which we are not absolutely certain are correct.

LOUISIANA, MO.—The death of C. H. Foreman, and the injury of his brother, Claude Foreman, by the chimney falling on them during the fire which destroyed the greenhouses, was reported in the REVIEW of February 13. It now appears that Claude Foreman, who was already blind in one eye, has lost the sight of the other through the accident.

FERTILIZERS FOR VEGETABLES.

This is a problem which should be carefully studied by all agriculturists or horticulturists. A thorough understanding of the use of fertilizers and manures for the different crops is of the greatest value to the vegetable grower, providing he applies his knowledge to his crops with untiring determination to do everything possible for the benefit of the plants. The grower must bear in mind that with modern competition he cannot afford to neglect the slightest detail. A thorough understanding of the subject will enable him to buy and use the different forms of manures and fertilizers to the best advantage.

Manures from animals or commercial fertilizers are all practically the same; that is, merely so much refuse containing the three forms of necessary plant food, nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash, but in different proportions. Bear in mind that these three ingredients are what the plants extract from the soil. We should not think of the manure as so many loads or tons or so much mere bulk, but think of the amount of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash which the plants will get from the refuse, whether it be animal manure or packing house refuse.

Different crops use the three above-mentioned plant foods or chemicals in greatly varied proportions. Every season a goodly quantity of the existing foods in the soil is removed and sold in the form of vegetables, flowers, etc. If these were not removed from the soil, but left to rot and be turned into the soil again, the soil would remain equally fertile, but as we keep selling our products we must keep manuring. It is true that the soil derives some fertilizer from the air, but only a little, and to be successful a grower must add more fertilizer each season, or for each crop where the soil is not exchanged for new soil each time.

In commercial fertilizers one can often buy just the desired article his soil and crops need, if he knows their needs, but in manure it is different. Although we have tables of proportions of the foods in the different kinds of animal manure, we must make allowance for the condition in which the manure happens to be when used, which is more frequently weak or poor than otherwise.

How often we are asked by the amateur what kind of manure is best for his lettuce, cucumbers or tomatoes, etc.! It is next to impossible to answer such questions intelligently, not knowing what food happens to be in the soil. We can only advise what would be best providing the soil were new and had not been used long enough to be completely worn out, or overloaded with one ingredient or another from constant manuring with one kind of fertilizer. Every grower should study with the determination to get a thorough understanding of what his different crops need and then be his own judge as to what forms of fertilizer to use to get the food in the most suitable proportions.

Tables of manure values can be found in nearly all experiment station publications on fertilizers, or in the bulletins of the United States Department of Agriculture, but we give below a few pointers in which the hothouse vegetable grower is most interested.

Nitrogen promotes growth of stems and foliage. Potash finishes the filling out of the foliage, fruit, etc., and hardens the stems or stalks. Phosphoric acid, probably the most important of the three, assists in the maturing of the crop and the setting of fruit or flowers in greater quantity.

Many growers are successful in growing a fine, healthy batch of plants, but fail to get satisfactory results as to number of blooms or quantity of fruit, from lack of phosphoric acid in the soil in sufficient quantity. Usually such cases are a result of continual use of horse manure, the best and most popular of fertilizers for vegetables. This is richest in nitrogen, but some commercial fertilizer should be used in connection with it after a few applications, to furnish more phosphoric acid and potash. For vegetable growers there is no manure so good as horse manure, if good and fresh and not burned and dried out. Bone meal makes an excellent running mate, and when these two are properly used together, the finest crops can be grown on the same soil year after year.

Horse manure is considered valuable for vegetables partly on account of its heating and warming the soil and loosening it up or putting it in the best mechanical condition, but this is getting away from the subject of plant food.

There is entirely too much confusion caused, in the mind of the buyer who does not happen to be posted, by the various terms and high sounding words used by fertilizer dealers or manufacturers in labeling their goods. It often seems that the guaranteed analysis is so worded as to intentionally confuse the buyer, especially if the goods are short of any one ingredient. The grower, like the oft quoted man from Missouri, must insist that he be "shown" just what per cent of available nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash the goods contain before he gets confused by such terms as precipitated, reverted, soluble, actual equivalent, etc.

We give below a table of the proportions of ingredients used in fertilizer on different crops to best advantage in recent experiments:

Var. of Vegetable.	Nitrogen.	Phosphoric Acid.	Potash.
Beans	1%	7%	9%
Beets	5%	6%	9%
Cucumbers	6%	6%	6%
Lettuce	5%	6%	9%
Radishes	3%	7%	9%

THE REVIEW is the best and most up-to-date florists' paper in my office. No florist can afford to be without it.—JOHN M. EGAN, St. Paul, Minn.

Des Moines, Iowa, February 19, 1908.

Editor Florists' Review, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:—We take pleasure in enclosing herewith photograph taken of our mail Monday morning, February 17, which was the largest single mail that we ever received, there being 7163 letters and postals in our mail that day. This was simply the first morning mail.

Tell your advertisers not to get "cold feet" because of the financial stringency which has prevailed during the past three months; there is plenty of money and plenty of business in the country if they only go after it in the right way. The farmers have the money this year; advertising will bring it, if properly written and inserted in good, live papers.

The Review has given us excellent results from the trade, and we are glad to notice that its columns are so well filled.

Yours very truly,
Iowa Seed Company, per Page.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

Seed of Large Red Wethersfield onion is offered at $2 per pound.

Mail orders are said by most seed houses to be up to what they usually are in February.

The western catalogue seed houses report business starting off in a way which seems to assure each of them a banner season.

The government seed shop is doing the largest mail trade in the country just now. The appropriation for the 1909 distribution will soon be before congress.

E. J. Sheap, of S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., is visiting the trade in the east and southeast and reports good success in booking contracts for peas, beans, sweet corn, radish, tomato and vine seeds.

At Chicago February 25 timothy seed was slightly easier for country lots, which ranged from $3.60 to $4.60. Cash contract closed at $4.80 and March at $4.85. Clover seed was sharply higher, in sympathy with stronger outside markets. Cash contract closed at $19.50, March at $19.60, and cash lots at $12@19.

F. A. Forbes, Plymouth, Ind., says that although it often is stated that the buyers do not want the extra large onions, still growers he supplied seeds to last year obtained 5 cents to 8 cents more for large ones than the smaller onions brought. One of his exhibits at the seed store is a photograph of two bushels of onions, one of which contained fifty-six red onions, weighing fifty-six pounds, and the other fifty-six yellow onions, weighing fifty-two pounds.

There is a horticulturist named D. C. Turnipseed at Flora, Ala.

M. Lytle is preparing to open a seed store at Clear Lake, Ia.

The counter trade is beginning to wake up, in spite of wintry weather.

True White Globe onion seed of guaranteed germination is offered at $3 per pound.

The weather of the season to date has been favorable to the California seed growers.

The wholesale lists indicate an ability to supply most of the scarce items to anyone who needs them at a fair price.

The Henry Field Seed Co., at Shenandoah, Ia., reports that it is feeling the full effect anticipated from the material enlargement of its facilities made since last season.

Practically every seedsman will assume all responsibility for his seeds as long as they are in the bag, but after they go into the ground the seedsman has no control and the risk of failure becomes the planters'.

In 1907 the crop of timothy seed in Illinois was only 49,030 bushels, the smallest in thirty years, or since the State Board of Agriculture has kept records. The banner crop was in 1881, when it amounted to 426,531 bushels.

The seed advertising in the March magazines makes a good showing as compared with last year, although the majority of seedsmen are now doing their principal advertising in the farm papers and the special horticultural publications.

Crosman Bros., Rochester, have just issued their wholesale price-list of seeds. Under sweet corns, the words "Crop failed" appear in the price column opposite Country Gentleman. Eastern-grown Stowell's Evergreen is quoted at $7. On peas in ten bushel lots the following quotations are made: Alaska, $6; Advancer, $4.75; Telephone, $5.75. Lettuces run 50 cents and 60 cents per pound.

ADULTERATED SEEDS.

During the calendar year 1907 seeds of agricultural plants were obtained in the open market in accordance with the following paragraph in the act of Congress making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture.

The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to obtain in the open market samples of seeds of grass, clover, or alfalfa, test the same, and if any such seeds are found to be adulterated or misbranded, or if any seeds of Canada bluegrass (Poa compressa) are obtained under any other name than Canada bluegrass or Poa compressa, to publish the result of the test, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale.

act, seeds of red clover, alfalfa, meadow fescue, Bromus inermis, and Kentucky bluegrass were secured and analyzed and in a circular dated February 15, 1908, the Secretary of Agriculture publishes the analyses of those samples found to be adulterated or misbranded, together with the names of the seedsmen by whom they were offered for sale.

Of the 1,217 samples of red clover seed secured, 405 contained seeds of dodder, 424 contained traces of yellow trefoil, and 135 bore evidence of having originated in Chile.

Of the 399 samples of alfalfa seeds secured, 191 contained seeds of dodder, 135 contained a trace of yellow trefoil, 120 contained a trace of sweet clover, and 16 contained a trace of bur clover seed.

Of the 64 samples of meadow fescue seeds obtained, 20 contained chess in amounts varying from a trace to more than 19 per cent, 4 contained seed of rye-grass, 4 were misbranded, being Canada bluegrass, 1 was misbranded, being orchard grass, and another was misbranded, being a mixture of orchard grass and fescue.

Of the 55 samples of Bromus inermis seeds obtained, 15 contained seeds of cheat or chess, 28 contained from 2 to 3 per cent of seeds of the wheat-grasses, several contained seeds of meadow fescue, and one contained more than 24 per cent of meadow fescue and rye grass-seed together.

Of the 429 samples of Kentucky blue-seed of Canada bluegrass would be harvested with Kentucky bluegrass. In 110 samples, however, Canada bluegrass was found in quantities exceeding 5 per cent, 32 of these being Canada bluegrass seed misbranded as Kentucky bluegrass seed.

In publishing the list, which contains the names of eighty-five of those who offered adulterated seeds for sale, the Secretary of Agriculture says: "As has been previously stated in these publications, this department will examine and report promptly as to the presence of adulterants and dodder in any samples of seed submitted for that purpose."

CLOVER SEED FROM IDAHO.

What is probably the largest and most valuable load of red clover seed ever shipped out of the country west of the Missouri river was sent from Salt Lake City, Utah, on its journey to Des Moines, Ia. The load consisted of 50,000 pounds of red clover seed, with a value of $8,750. It is the property of the Vogeler Seed and Produce Co., and was all grown in the intermountain country on irrigated land.

Mr. Vogeler says that less than five years ago it was necessary to import all of the clover seed used in that section, but that at the present time states like Iowa are sending west for the seed. As an example of the productivity of the soil in the intermountain country it is shown that, whereas Ohio, up to a few years ago considered the banner state for raising red clover, produced only one and one-tenth bushels per acre with a value of $11.55, Idaho produced an average yield of sixteen bushels per acre with a value of $150.

ERFURT THE SEED CENTER.

Many German writers have made reference to the horticultural interests and Regal and some others have given particular attention to Erfurt, but it has remained for Dr. Hans Haupt to write a book on the historical development and economic significance of the seed trade in the vicinity of this city of central Germany. The author says "it was a subject which had been much neglected, a fact due to a disinclination of the trade as a body, that is the Erfurt Society of Nurserymen and Florists. Owing to this lack of complacency, the book is in some aspects less complete than otherwise it might have been." Nevertheless, many interesting historical details have been compiled with regard to the many great horticultural firms of Erfurt, and considerable with relation to their present extent and business. While the house of Ernst Benary is the older by some eighteen years, that of J. C. Schmidt is the largest similarly engaged in the Erfurt district, if not in the world. Beginning with eight persons in 1828, the firm now carries about 1,000 employees. Whole-

GLADIOLUS PRAECOX HARDY.

The perfect hardiness of Gladiolus Præcox is with most cultivators a matter of great doubtfulness. According to a letter of the introducers, the firm of F. Roemer, at Quedlinburg, appearing in the issue of Die Gartenwelt for January 11, the plant in color or markings or size is not inferior to any other race of gladiolus, and it has the great advantage over those of being easily increased by seed, the seedlings also flowering the first year. That the corms are hardy was well established in Mr. Roemer's garden last winter, a severe one in Germany. Young brood and corms were inadvertently left in the soil in which the seedlings had been grown, which was thrown into a heap and exposed to the severe frosts that occurred, without protection from snow or anything else; and the frost had penetrated the soil to the depth of one foot. Towards the middle of May Mr. Roemer was astonished to observe the heap to be covered with gladioli arising from the brood corms, many of them only just covered by the soil. The corms were left undisturbed in the heap, where they flowered beautifully. The Horticultural Trade Journal says the matter to be certain about is, if only the brood is hardy, and the full grown corms not hardy. So far no species or race of gladiolus have proved hardy. Further trials seem desirable with G. Præcox.

SOME MORE ABOUT GLADIOLUS.

Referring to the notes in the REVIEW of January 23, and February 13, speaking of ruffled gladioli, I found some of the same among my new hybrids. One was almost white, with large flowers which resemble A. E. Kunderd's description. I also have one which flowers all around the spike, behaves well and multiplies rapidly. I also found one which has flowers like rose buds, and one which has kinks in the petals that make it look like a double one.

Arthur Cowee inquires for an everblooming gladiolus. I have it, or at least a start, selected from my hybrids. The corms grow, from the largest to the smallest bulblets, all in a bunch so they show as if they would grow and bloom continuously if they were forced. This year I shall try the forcing of them and

FLORICULTURAL EDUCATION.

The Missouri Botanical Garden.

The discussion of opportunities for gardening education, which have recently appeared in the REVIEW, and the references that have been made to our course at the Missouri Botanical Garden, with several inquiries that have since been received at my office, make me think that perhaps you may like to show just what we are offering in the way of instruction, and, if so, you will find the course on pages 6 to 9 of the announcement that I am sending under separate cover. Six free scholarships only are provided. These are now all assigned, and none are expected to be free until a year from the present time; but a provision is noted on page 9 of the announcement by which pupils bearing their own expenses and paying a nominal tuition are received on otherwise the same footing as pupils holding scholarships. WILLIAM TRELEASE, Director.

That part of the announcement which relates to the course of instruction is as follows:

During the first year of their scholarship, garden pupils work at the practical duties of the garden nine or ten hours daily according to the season, the same as regular employees of the Garden, and are also expected to read the notes and articles referring to the subject of their work, in one or more good journals. After the first year, one-half of each day is given to manual work, the remainder being devoted to class work according to the following outline:

Second year—April to June, in floriculture, three exercises weekly; in economic entomology, one exercise; in surveying, two. July to September, in floriculture, three exercises weekly; in economic entomology, two; in bookkeeping, one. October to December, in floriculture, one exercise; economic entomology, two; surveying, one; elementary botany, three. January to March, in floriculture, one exercise; twigs of woody plants, one; orchard culture, one; landscape gardening, one; elementary botany, three.

Third year—April to June, in vegetable gardening, four exercises; landscape gardening, one; botany of wild flowers, two. July to September, in economic mycology, one exercise; orchard culture, two; landscape gardening, one; botany of garden flowers, two. October to December, in economic mycology, three exercises; garden accounts, one; botany of fruits, two. January to March, in economic mycology, three exercises; garden accounts, one; botany of house plants, two.

Fourth year—April to June, in orchard culture, one exercise; forestry, one; bookkeeping, one; surveying and drainage, three. July to September, in small fruit culture, four exercises; botany of weeds, one; botany of vegetables, one. October to December, in special gardening, two exercises; forestry, one; vegetable physiology, two; botany of woody plants, two. January to March, in special gardening, two exercises; forestry, one; vegetable physiology, two; botanical geography, one; botany of ferns, one.

All of the above subjects capable of being taught in the laboratory, the greenhouse, or the field, are so taught, and all of the theoretical instruction is expected to be practically tested in the performance of the manual work required of students, the object being to make practical gardeners and not botanists or other scientific specialists, of garden pupils.

The second year's work only is now given each year, while the work of the third and fourth years is given alternately to two combined classes.

By action of the board of trustees, taken at its meeting of November 16, 1894, the director is authorized "to admit, in addition to those holding garden scholarships, as many suitably prepared garden pupils as can, in his judgment, be adequately taught without material increase in the cost of tuition, each pupil so admitted to be charged $25 per year tuition, and to be entitled to the same certificate as a scholarship pupil on completion of the prescribed course and examinations."

FANCY CALADIUMS.

Fancy caladiums are useful for summer decorations and also work in well in mixed tropical beds. The tubers, which should now be started, need a brisk heat. Place in small pots singly, or, better still, in flats of leaf-mold and sand, until they start to grow and make roots. Then shift into larger pots. Be careful in watering at first, or you will be liable to rot the tubers. These caladiums are more grown by southern than northern florists, many of the latter not having sufficiently warm houses for them. In summer they succeed finely in brick frames, and where a quantity of young crotons, dracænas and other varieties of tropical plants are wanted, frame culture will produce better plants than can be had in greenhouses.

Speaking of caladiums reminds us that it is yet a little too early to start the tubers of Caladium esculentum. The middle of March is quite time enough.

THRIPS ON CALLAS.

I enclose a calla bloom on which you will see a number of black spots, which I take to be some kind of scale. I have fumigated freely with tobacco stems and with nicotine extract, but this does not appear to affect the scales. Please tell me what these are and what can be done to remove them. They are on all my calla blooms and make them unsalable.

A. A.

Your calla flowers are infested with thrips, not scale. This is a difficult pest to eradicate when it has secured a firm foothold. The thrips, both young and adult, suck the juices from the flowers and leaves of the plants they attack. On the leaves, the small spots where the sucking has been done soon turn brown, making them present a speckled appearance. On flowers, small, pale blotches soon show on the petals. There were many of these on the lower part of the flowers forwarded.

You must have failed to fumigate with regularity, or the thrips would not have got ahead of you. Get one of the tobacco extracts and give your plants a spraying, using it double the strength you would for aphis. Persist in this until your flowers come clean. Syringe your plants regularly, using a spray nozzle, and fumigate once a week. By following these rules another season, you should have no further trouble with this pest.

PACIFIC COAST.

TREE SEEDS IN CALIFORNIA.

The present time is probably the best for the planting of ornamental or forest tree seeds in California. It is a common misconception among growers that during the summer or early autumn is the proper season in which to plant seed of hardy trees. The fact that the seeds germinate and commence to grow at the time when the dark days and long nights are on us makes it quite a task to keep damping off from claiming a large share at such times, in the neighborhood of San Francisco.

Seed germinates much more quickly in warm weather, but my experience has been that this is offset by the fact that the young plants are usually too small or frail to bear transplanting in the early winter and they certainly are too small for sale at that time.

This does not refer to some varieties that must be left several months in boxes before they germinate, but to seeds that ordinarily give plants that can be transplanted in six months. Seed planted now, if under favorable conditions, will produce plants that will grow very quickly during the summer and can be transplanted in the early fall. Some varieties of gums and cypress will be large enough to sell in the following winter, and there is little trouble in handling transplanted stock as compared with that which is too soft or small to transplant, even under the most favorable conditions. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There is a decided improvement in business and February is keeping up its standard of being one of the best months in the year. Last week was one of great activity, enabling us to sell out clean. Roses are still scarce and carnations none too plentiful. Bulbous stuff is now seen in large quantities, with little of inferior grade. It is much needed and sells well at a good, profitable figure.

St. Valentine's day is not to be reckoned with lightly, as the one just passed has proven. Nothing fussy or sentimental was introduced, the extra labor being avoided in order to care for a great sale on cut flowers. Anything from 50 cents to $3 was popular. There were no less than 2,000 bunches of violets disposed of by the trade on that day. Quite a few of these were shipped in from California, and when properly packed you can see spot cash on them. Azaleas, cinerarias and other plants were likewise favored and we all suffered from that tired feeling when closing time came.

Various Notes.

Perhaps one reason why business took such a spurt on Valentine's day was the presence of Mr. and Mrs. H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, who honored the trade with a brief call. Not having seen Mr. Bayersdorfer since the writer was a delivery boy in Buffalo, N. Y., ten years ago, we were sorry for no better opportunity to discuss matters of mutual interest with that wide-awake business man. This was their first visit to the coast.

The finest violets seen this season are the Princess of Wales grown by Gus Teufel, out on the Barnes road. The extra care given the plants last summer is bringing its reward.

Clarke Bros. are preparing for a big plant trade by mailing 20,000 retail catalogues. This is an annual occurrence with them, and always results in keeping the whole force out of mischief until June 1.

Grand preparations are in progress for the June festival of roses, which will be repeated on a much broader scale than last year. A liberal sum has been subscribed by local enthusiasts. The park blocks, twelve in number, extending north and south through the city, where the silver thaw ruined so many fine trees a year ago, have been dug up and will be entirely planted with roses next month. This ought to make an effective showing and is only one of the features planned. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has been gradually getting better for the last two weeks and, as a consequence, flowers are scarce. This is very noticeable in the rose line; the retailers have had much trouble in getting stock enough to fill orders. Carnations, especially fancy stock, are also rather slow in coming into town and many more could be disposed of. This tendency has made flowers stiffer in price. There is probably a ten per cent increase throughout.

The rain of last week has given place to plenty of warm sunshine, and the present lack of stock cannot be laid to continuous dark weather, as it was in January. "Off crop" explains everything. In all the large places the cutting is light at this time, and it will be several weeks before there is any excess of stock.

Yellow narcissi have sold well and the heavy crop is over. The late blooming kinds will probably be in even greater demand. White narcissi have gone upward in price and are being used largely in funeral work. Violets are still fairly plentiful, but the signs are for a lessened output shortly.

Fruit blossoms and all kinds of wild stock sell well at good prices. Smilax is becoming scarcer and of poor quality. Wild maidenhair is now at its best and helps out the retailers splendidly, as the tame variety was getting very short and poor. Valley and a few Roman hyacinths help, but the outlook for much stock for several weeks is poor indeed.

Various Notes.

A. D. Sanborn, the Berkeley florist, is convalescing, after his recent sickness.

George B. Jones is still confined to St. Joseph's hospital. He received a paralytic stroke a short time ago and has been unable to leave his bed since then.

The Chico Nurseries will auction a lot of fruit and ornamental trees, which were sold by their agents last summer in Elmhurst and vicinity, and which they have been unable to deliver to the purchasers.

E. W. McLellan & Co. are cutting heavily of Bridesmaid from the Meyer nurseries, recently leased by them at Burlingame.

Frank Shibeley will make a specialty of florists' supplies in addition to his flower business. He is successor to the Shibeley-Mann Co.

Fred Harding will leave on a trip to Portland, Ore., and Washington, to be gone several weeks.

H. Gresens has been heard from in Hamburg. He will not return to California for several months. G.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Wm. Eccles, superintendent to Mortimer Schiff, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., has installed a handsome ice-chest, fourteen feet long by twelve feet tall, at a cost of $1,200. This will be used for storing cut flowers, which are shipped from Northwood twice a week to New York. Four additional houses for carnations and a large palm house were built here last fall by William Lutton and are very satisfactory.

John Griffin, gardener to Stanley Mortimer, intends making some changes in the splendid Italian garden at Roslyn. This is one of the sights on Long Island and undoubtedly the largest in this country.

Chas. Russell, superintendent to W. F. Sheehan, at Roslyn, expects to see a range of glass built this season. He presides over about 1,000 acres of land and feels lost without a greenhouse. M.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.

Joseph Dexter, gardener to Hon. Whitelaw Reid, is justly proud of a fine specimen of Bougainvillea speciosa. This variety is far superior to Sanderiana, the flower being larger and of brilliant color. It has a rather shy habit, being hard to propagate, but is a grand thing and would make a splendid commercial plant. Stock Queen Alexandra is undoubtedly the best thing of its kind yet introduced. It makes a fine pot plant. The flowers come almost 100 per cent double, blooming freely and of a pleasing color. Mr. Dexter has shipped several to the New York market, with very satisfactory results. He is also a large shipper of cattleyas. He grows them on blocks, but may change this method. I noted a big lot of vigorous plants at J. L. Loose's growing in bundles of peat suspended from the roof, showing roots of exceptional length and strength. This is ahead of the old block method. Adiantum Brownii is superior to cuneatum, being a much freer grower and not dampening off. It is suitable both for cutting and as a pot plant. The fronds are very durable and it is a good shipper.

I noted that palms growing in a house glazed with ribbed glass were ahead of those under plain glass.

Black Valentine is considered the most popular bean for forcing in this locality, coming into crop rather earlier than Triumph of the Frames. For a good forcing lettuce, May King is hard to beat. Earliest of the Earlies is the earliest cabbage, leading Early Jersey Wakefield by two or three weeks. W.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

REMEMBER that a rotation of crops is just as important in a nursery as on a farm.

W. F. HEIKES, of the Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, Huntsville, Ala., has been reëlected president of the Alabama State Horticultural Society.

THE Phoenix Nursery Co., Bloomington, Ill., has established a northwestern headquarters in the Christenson block at Fargo, N. D., in charge of Will H. Sabin.

C. D. OTIS, the well-known florist at Lake Charles, La., is president of the Louisiana State Horticultural Society, which held its annual meeting at Minden last week.

AT Angleton, Tex., Theo. De Vries and C. L. Cochran have bought twenty acres of land and will establish a nursery, making a specialty of citrus fruits and ornamentals.

E. S. CULTRA, proprietor of the Homewood Nurseries, near Conway, S. C., will discontinue growing a general line of nursery stock and devote his entire attention to growing roses.

JUNIPERUS CANADENSIS AUREA is a low, spreading juniper, with golden yellow foliage which darkens to bronze color in winter. This juniper is very effective when planted in groups on slopes and in rockeries.

IN rows of evergreens which were transplanted last year, every other one should be taken out for sale this spring, in order to make those left handsome specimens, which will command a much higher price next year.

NURSERYMEN having storage houses and cellars have great advantages over those who do not possess these convenient accessories. Trees and shrubs, especially the latter, can be shipped earlier and to better advantage out of such storage places in early spring than from the open ground. And then, again, storage houses and cellars can be used for the purpose of prolonging the shipping, and as a result, prolonging the planting season of many plants, which may be a great advantage when the business extends over a large area of country.

THE Cedar Hill Nursery and Orchard Co., Winchester, Tenn., the financial troubles of which were reported in last week's REVIEW, is not only one of the largest institutions of its kind in that part of the country, but was in reality the pioneer of the nursery business in that section. M. J. Shadow, father of J. W. Shadow, the present proprietor, was the first man to engage in that business there, and his sons have since continued it. The Cedar Hill nursery did an average annual business of $250,000, and gave employment to a large number of people. Hugh Morton, the trustee, will continue the business for the benefit of the creditors, and Mr. Shadow hopes to clean up all outstanding obligations inside of a year. In fact, if this should be a good peach year the peach orchards will easily pay off all obligations.

PROTECTION IN SPRING.

Rhododendrons, as well as many kinds of choice evergreens, are occasionally allowed to suffer considerably in the early spring by a too absolute and early removal of what had been used for their protection all through the winter. When such plants are covered so as to exclude the sunlight during the winter, it will be well to remove such covering by easy stages, in order that a sudden exposure to the sun and the cold, sharp winds may not injuriously affect them.

English ivy is liable to be injured by removing all at once, or too early, that which has protected it all winter. It stands to reason that plants covered, as we see English ivy, with burlap for four or five months, will not take kindly to a sudden removal of their protection, and the appearance of the foliage a few days after such removal is convincing proof that they were not in a condition to stand such treatment. M.

FUNKIAS FOR OUTDOOR WORK.

Funkias are among the hardiest and most ornamental plants for outdoor planting. Funkia grandiflora is not only richly ornamental in its luxuriance of foliage, but it is also beautiful when in bloom. The flowers are pure white and very odoriferous, perhaps a little too much so. A large clump of this funkia, bordered with F. albo-marginata, is quite effective.

These plants will grow in almost any kind of soil, wet or dry, but they develop their most striking characteristics when planted in good, rich soil of moderate depth.

Another good trait in these plants is their capability of being rapidly multiplied. They can be divided in early summer, with the result that those newly planted will grow and flower just as if they had not been disturbed. M.

best in, which is a soil containing a large proportion of peat. In most cases, however, there is but little difficulty in obtaining a supply of leaf-mold, which is a good substitute for peat for rhododendrons. A still more satisfactory soil for rhododendrons is made from leaf-mold and well rotted manure in equal proportions, which, when dug into the soil where the plants are to be, will help greatly in their well-doing.

It will also help these plants, if neither peat nor any other suitable soil had been used when they were planted, to lightly fork in a liberal quantity of leaf-mold and well rotted manure early in the spring, and if there is a superfluity of this material at hand it will benefit the plants wonderfully to put a layer over the surface and leave it there untouched, to form a mulch. DETROIT.

The Market.

Monday is usually about the best day of the week with the retailers in this city, but last Monday was an exception. There was but little funeral work and this caused the dullness.

Roses are hardly equal to the demand, but carnations are piling up. While the demand for carnations is by no means small, every one seems to have an exceptionally heavy crop coming on.

Much bulbous stock is on the market and considerable is going to waste. About the only article that sells as well as ever is ferns. The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange shipped in the neighborhood of 600,000 or 700,000 fancy ferns last January. Southern smilax meets with a good demand.

Various Notes.

Frank Danzer is on duty again. A bad fall on a slippery walk a few weeks ago resulted in a lay-up for a few weeks.

Schroeter had a big call for spring flowers for a large wedding decoration last Tuesday.

J. F. Sullivan is again confined to his bed. Since the first of the year he has not been able to attend to business, being laid up most of the time.

S. S. Skidelsky has just sent to B. Schroeter an order for another 1,000 rooted cuttings of Winsor, to go to Robert Klagge, at Mount Clemens. This beautiful carnation is a favorite with the growers in the Bath City.

With the president, secretary and some of the other regulars on the sick list and car service badly crippled by a blizzard, it is no wonder that there was nothing doing the night of the last meeting. In fact, the meeting was not called to order, owing to the small attendance.

Breitmeyer's Sons had quite a large wedding decoration this week and are preparing for another good-sized job for next week. One of their large show windows was very nicely decorated in honor of Washington's birthday. An immense flag, gracefully hung, formed the setting for a number of Jerusalem cherry trees, trimmed with small hatchets.

Mrs. Watson, wife of Robert Watson, has been confined to bed since last June, with a long, lingering sickness.

Red, white and blue flowers, tastefully arranged, were the predominating colors in Walter Taepke's window on Washington's birthday.

Harry Smith has given up his position with Newberry, at Grosse Pointe.

Fred Pantke, of Grosse Pointe, is arranging for another new house. This house, about 10x200, is to be devoted to violets. H. S.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Charlotte is to have a new industry, in the shape of a rose farm, which Charles R. Wintzer is to establish here at once. This enterprise is largely in the nature of a trial, but if it proves the success anticipated it will become a permanent thing. Mr. Wintzer is here with his father, Antoine Wintzer, who is vice-president of the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa.

Mr. Wintzer has secured several acres of land from Mr. Sholtz, the florist, and near him, and will immediately have shipped here from West Grove some 30,000 young plants. After this year they will be propagated here. He will have from 100 to 1,000 plants of each kind, and Mr. Wintzer hopes to establish himself here for life.

Mr. Wintzer will sell only own root roses; no budded or grafted stock. He will not handle cut flowers.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Current Comment.

Outside of a large number of good funeral orders, local florists report a dull week. Following Valentine's day, bad weather had a tendency to decrease the demand for flowers. One sad occurrence that helped trade was the Toledo & Western Electric and Big Four wreck, in which eight passengers of the electric car met death.

The Schoen Floral Co. will open one of the largest retail cut flower and plant stores in the city March 1, located at 409 Adams street, owing to increase of business and lack of room in their former store.

The Wisner Floral Co. reports a slump at the downtown store, but is doing good business at the greenhouse.

George Heinl reports spring flowers selling well.

The many friends of Mrs. J. B. Freeman, for many years with George Heinl, will be interested to hear of the marriage of her daughter, Flora Belle, to Edward Francis Potts, a former resident of Indianapolis. The marriage occurred at Detroit last week.

Charles E. Russell, with the Gasser Co., Cleveland, passed through the city February 22, for Flint, Mich., where he was called to the bedside of his sick uncle, J. M. Gasser.

The death of Ewald Suder, reported in the obituary column this week, was a great shock to the trade here.

The Youngstown Floral Co. received an extra large shipment of Killarney roses that have been selling fast. This flower is popular in Toledo.

Among the novelties in the florists' windows this week is a vase of single peonies in the window of George Heinl's store. H. L. S.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

The conservatories at Wheeler park were visited by a severe hail storm February 13, which did considerable damage to the plants and broke 300 lights of glass, 16x18 and 16x24. Owing to the condition of the weather and the lack of glass, it was impossible to do the reglazing at once, but roofing paper was used to make temporary repairs and was found to be quite satisfactory for the

CARNATION CUTTINGS

We are in unusually good position to supply exceptionally well-rooted, healthy stock. We have such a large quantity of flowering plants that we propagate only from heel cuttings from flowering shoots. Our cuttings are rooted in light, sunny, airy houses, and we are sure will satisfy the most critical buyer.

A prominent carnation grower writes: "You seem to be the only firm in the business that knows how to pack stock and have it reach the buyer in good condition, and I have always found your cuttings cheaper than the same varieties from others at much lower figures."

While our prices may not always be the cheapest, we certainly can give, quality considered, as good value as, if not better than, is obtainable anywhere.

WINSOR, which we introduced last year, has proved to be the finest novelty introduced in years. We think it is the most profitable variety grown today, considering its fine color, splendid keeping qualities, and productiveness. When properly grown, it leaves little to be desired, and almost everyone succeeds with it.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS, the best all-round white carnation on account of its large size, long stem, earliness, and productiveness. Our White Enchantress, exhibited at the Carnation Convention at Washington, was the only White Enchantress exhibited that received an award.

Strong rooted cuttings, now ready for delivery, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

We offer also BEACON and RED CHIEF, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Also VICTORY, MELODY, WHITE PERFECTION, from sand, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. From soil, $6.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. VARIEGATED LAWSON, WHITE LAWSON and RED LAWSON, from sand, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. From soil, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. We can also supply WINONA and AFTERGLOW, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Buyers will find transplanted stock offered from soil well worth the difference in price.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Current Comment.

There is not much improvement in the cut flower trade here. About the only thing doing is funeral work. This uses up large quantities of flowers. The supply of stock is good just now; prices remain about the same as usual. Carnations bring 50 cents per dozen retail. There is a heavy call for the Winsor carnation, in preference to other sorts. This is a fine color and takes well with the public in this city. Some good violets are coming in. They retail at 75 cents and $1 per hundred. Roses bring $1.50 per dozen retail. These are of good quality. Sweet peas of good grade are coming in and retail at $1 per hundred. There is a good call for bulbous stock just now; 50 cents per dozen is the price usually asked, but one grower is advertising them at 35 cents per dozen retail.

Most of the growers have planted their ten weeks' stock seed by now. An enormous quantity of this flower is raised by local men.

Last week gave the cut flower trade a little spurt by the opening of a new cafe. Many fine floral pieces adorned the tables.

James Cleary is handling some fine violets. He always has an attractive window display. Mr. Cleary handles the entire output of S. S. Peckham.

H. A. Jahn is laid up with an attack of the grippe.

A. B. Hathaway has some nice sweet peas, for which he finds a ready sale.

E. H. Chamberlain is strong on Winsor carnations. He reports a good demand for them.

R. H. Woodhouse will build another house in the spring and install a new boiler. W. L.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

February trade has been good. The weather has been fine and nearly all lines of stock plentiful. Violets were never before so plentiful in this market. One of the leading growers says he threw away 25,000 good blooms during the month. At $1 per hundred, the prevailing price, this means a big loss. Carnations have also been somewhat in oversupply, and of choice quality. Roses have been good and just about equal to demands.

Bulbous stock is coming in freely, with more or less going to waste. With twenty-five or thirty Hollanders urging their bulbs upon the growers and promising all kinds of unique and novel treasures, is it any wonder that the florists are overloaded with this stock at times? Even Yankee shrewdness is sometimes overcome by Dutch cleverness.

Club Meeting.

The Twin City Florists' Club met at the City park greenhouses, Minneapolis, February 18. The report of the committee appointed to fix prices on bedding plants was adopted, after making a few changes.

A committee was appointed to meet the state fair executive board to urge upon that body the necessity for providing better and larger quarters for floral products and larger premiums. This is a move in the right direction and should result in much good to the trade.

A. S. Swanson read a paper on "The Benefits to be Derived by the Members of This Club," which was thoroughly discussed.

Mr. Wirth announced the securing of Mr. Withers, of New York, to deliver a course of lectures on tree planting.

The club will visit L. L. May & Co.'s new seed warehouse February 26.

Round Peak, N. C.—G. A. Holder will pay out to the women and children of this neighborhood this season as much as $3,000 for picking and bunching galax leaves.

Vassar, Mich.—A fire at the establishment of Edwin Tibbitts, February 15, destroyed his dwelling and badly damaged the greenhouse, which had just been completed and put in running order. The loss is about $3,000, only $1,100 of which is covered by insurance.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown.....

LENOX, MASS.

The annual dinner of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held at the Curtis hotel February 15 and was a decided success. The ladies were present for the first time in the history of the society's dinners and their presence added much to the pleasure of the evening. Alexander MacConnachie was toastmaster. A. J. Loveless responded to the toast to the Lenox Horticultural Society. To A. H. Wingate was assigned "the pleasant duty of presenting the first medal ever given by the society" to William D. Curtis, an enthusiastic patron of horticulture, for his exhibit at the last flower show. It was a leather medal, and provoked a humorous response. The excellent music was a feature of the occasion.

Rose and carnation night is March 7, when special premiums will be donated by the society. As carnations are grown quite extensively at Lenox, competition for the honors will be keen.

E. Jenkins has gone to England for a two months' vacation, during which he intends visiting some of the old-fashioned gardens of Europe.

GLENCOVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at the Oriental hotel February 12, with a large attendance, one new member being elected. In the competition for points the awards were as follows: S. J. Trepess, Cattleya Trianæ, 89; H. F. Meyer, carnations, 84; V. Clerese, narcissi, 83.

Henry Matz, who will go into business for himself in Connecticut, has tendered his resignation as treasurer of the society. He was given a vote of thanks for his faithful work. E. J. Brown will be his successor. G. M. K.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Max R. Engelman, junior member of the firm of R. WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

Business still keeps up. There is plenty of stock, except Beauties. Funeral work and dinners have kept the stores on the go.

Washington's birthday was better than last year. George Cooke had a unique and well executed military dinner at the Alibi Club. It included the reproduction of a fort. The sides were of lycopodium. Twelve model guns furnished by the officer giving the dinner peeped through the sides. In the center was a 4-foot disappearing gun. The carriage and gun were made of black immortelles. There were four piles of cannon-balls, also made of immortelles. On each end of the table was a plateau of poinsettias and Farleyense fern. No green of any kind was used on the table, but the poinsettia bloom was laid all over the cloth.

The holiday windows were not confined to one or two stores, as was the case a few years ago, for with a few exceptions the stores all had their windows appropriately arranged for Washington's birthday: Portraits of Washington, flags, ardisias, with ribbon and small hatchets, etc.

Gude Bros. Co. had a full-sized cherry tree, with southern smilax leaves and artificial fruit. The tree was partly chopped down, the hatchet lying beside the trunk. In the background was a picture of Washington in a frame of magnolia leaves, draped with a flag.

The Washington Florist Co. had a pretty window, using quite a few hatchets in the decoration.

George Schaffer had an attractive window for the occasion.

J. J. Harty reports business good. His shipping was extra heavy last week.

Francis Goehel, formerly with the Department of Agriculture, is now in charge of Friendship, John R. McLean's country place.

Visitors this week were Mr. and Mrs. Lester P. Baker and a brother of Mr. Baker, from Syracuse, N. Y.; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia.

John Hauser and Miss Nellie Weiss were married last week. Mr. Hauser has been with George Fields for a number of years. Mr. Fields has been quite ill with the grippe for the last two weeks. O. O.

I WISH that you would discontinue my advertisement until further notice, as I have all the inquiries that I am able to take care of.—C. E. FRANKE, Supt. of Parks, Oklahoma City, Okla.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

OUR LITTLE PETS

From Aschmann, in Philadelphia, we bought
An Araucaria, a pet for our little girl.
Now we have two pets, the pride of our thought:
The little girl so sweet, a head full of curls,
And the Araucaria with its everlasting green—
A more joyful home you never have seen.

Araucarias, Azaleas and the cultivation of choice Easter plants our specialty. Never mind the times. Look for a big Easter trade. Secure your supply early. All our houses are full to their utmost capacity with choice plants in bud, just right for Easter, in finer condition than ever before. With a little forcing they can be brought into bloom at any time, according to your requirements.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta and Glauca, a perfect marvel and wonder of nature. We are one of the heaviest importers and cultivators of this beautiful decorative plant, and plants are about the same in width as in height. Robusta Compacta, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 6 years old, 5 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, $2.00 to $3.00 each.

Excelsa Glauca, specimens, 7-in. pots, 30 to 40 inches high, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 6 years old; the fine bluish-green color of this variety gives it the most striking appearance; sells at sight; $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 20 to 25 inches high, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 75c to $1.00 each; 5¼-in. pots, 3 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 7, 8, 10 to 14 inches high, 40c to 50c each.

Choice Nephrolepis, pot-grown. Boston Ferns, 8-in., as big as a bushel basket or wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50; 7-in., $1.00; 6-in., 50c; 5 to 5½-in., 35c to 40c. Whitmani, 8-in., $1.50; 6-in., 50c. Scottii, 7-in., $1.00 to $1.25; 6-in., 50c; 5½-in., 40c.

Azalea Indica. We make a specialty in importing every year an immense stock of this so well-favored Easter plant. Only special American, well-tested varieties are imported, grown under contract for us by an azalea specialist of Ghent, Belgium. If you need Azalea Plants, don't look in vain around the country for bargains, but come or write direct to us. We will be able to supply, with the best obtainable in the American market at moderate prices, plants covered with buds in good, healthy condition, right for Easter, planted in October and November, in 6 to 7-in. pots.

Please take notice. In justice to our customers we do not sell azaleas in the fall, disposing of the best and leaving the residue for Easter, but we carry them along, thus having for our customers the finest azaleas for Easter. Next, we take great care to select only the ones with plenty of buds. Mme. Vander Cruyssen (have 2500 of them) is the best well-known pink variety, so that nothing further need be said about it. Plants are covered with buds and are round as an apple. Simon Mardner (a pink), Vervaeneana (a variegated rose), Bernard Andre Alba (a white), Niobe (a white), Deutsche Perle (a white), Empress of India (variegated), Prof. Wolters and about six more fine varieties, 60c to 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Not being able to get notes off for last week's issue, I believe it not out of place to mention that Valentine's day was a hummer and cleaned up a whole week's accumulation. Most of the retail stores made a feature of floral valentines, and one house, which advertised them very extensively, shows almost 1,000 deliveries for the day. In the language of the firm, it was an "early Easter."

Last week, I am sorry to say, there was no Valentine's day; Washington's birthday did not count. There was an awful accumulation of stock. The commission men pushed hard to get rid of it and prices were certainly low enough, but they could not make the demand, and as a result the garbage man got more than his share. In many instances growers are complaining that they are not getting as much for their stock as last year and pretend not to understand it, but from present indications they will before spring.

The stock coming heaviest at this time is carnations, peas, violets, myosotis, mignonette and tulips.

There have been just about roses enough to go around nicely.

Various Notes.

Ernest Ludwig is amusing himself on the Pacific coast and sending his friends postal cards. Just when we have the worst kind of weather a batch of postals will arrive saying, "Weather fine here; flowers in bloom outdoors."

Otto Miner, the landscape gardener who has recently been running a flower store at New Brighton, was married February 20 to a McKees Rocks lady.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. made some large shipments of wire designs last week.

Mr. Thompson, grower for C. H. Cramer, Uniontown, Pa., is a victim of the grippe.

John Nichols, of Scottsdale, Pa., has been ill most of the winter.

T. J. Allen, Charleroi, Pa., has opened a new store.

Mr. Steele, of Uniontown, expects to open a store in the near future.

Myers Bros., Altoona, are to build a number of houses this spring.

Hoo-Hoo.

Bloomsburg, Pa.—The J. L. Dillon estate says that trade here has been extremely good, in spite of the general financial stringency. The demand has been much larger than the supply.

Marquette, Mich.—E. R. Tauch says he is more than satisfied with the business he is doing, for he has need of much more stock than he can produce under his own glass and has to draw heavily on the Chicago market.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

State of Trade.

With the few bright, warm days we had a week ago, has come the annual glut of carnations. Prices have had to drop in order to move the stock, and even then nobody seemed particularly anxious to invest, as trade is not good. Funeral work uses up most of the stock. Roses are rather scarce yet, especially the cheaper grades, which are most in demand. Violets are selling fairly well at present, more being used for St. Valentine's day than ever before in Rochester.

Various Notes.

George B. Hart is making preparations for big sales of Hart's Handy Handle for Easter. He has a large stock on hand and in process of manufacture to meet the coming demands.

Thomas Cogger reports good business in his new store on Main street.

Charles E. Fry proposes putting up some new houses in addition to his present plant.

George Bennett is building a dwelling and a large house for carnations, having bought six acres of land on the boulevard. H. B. S.

OWENSBORO, KY.—T. L. Metcalf, of Hopkinsville, has opened a branch store here.

ONEONTA, N. Y.—C. E. Niles has been on the sick list for about six months, but is now much improved in health.

H. J. Smith says that this season has thus far been an excellent one, as good as he ever had. Orders have been large and are still coming in heavily. His fall and Christmas trade was fine, and with Christmas trees, spruce boughs, festooning and ferns, he shipped over seventeen carloads in December. He reports that there is some complaint of ferns not keeping well, and one dealer says he is losing a large quantity through the storage warehouse freezing them too hard. Mr. Smith agrees that the storage of ferns is a risky business, but says all the dealers seem to be doing a first-class trade this season and most of the ferns are coming out in good shape. But there does not promise to be any too many ferns to carry the dealers to the end of the season.

TO REDUCE SMOKE.

In a bulletin on "How to Burn Illinois Coal Without Smoke," L. P. Breckenridge says:

There are many small plants that are hand-fired which smoke badly. The construction of many of these furnaces is such that it is almost impossible to operate the plant without smoke. Still, something might be done to reduce smoke if the fireman exercised more care in firing. Whatever can be done by the fireman in the way of properly introducing the fuel into the furnace is just so much gained, for the best method of hand-firing for smokelessness is also the best method for attaining economy. There are three generally recognized methods of hand-firing: (a) The Spreading, (b) the Coking and (c) the Alternate. The first is satisfactory and generally used for anthracite; the second for coking coals, and the last for non-coking coals. It is the alternate method that is best suited to Illinois coals. This method is described as follows: The fuel bed area is divided into equal parts, two, four, or six, depending on the size of the entire surface. The fresh coal is fired alternately on one-half of these areas at a time, at such intervals as may be necessary to hold the steam pressure. For small areas, first one-half the surface of the fuel bed is covered and then, perhaps three minutes later, the other half. This method allows much of the air supply to come through the bright fuel bed, and thus become heated and suitable for mixing with the highly volatile content which is being rapidly driven from the freshly fired coal on the other side. Just because fresh fuel has been spread over one part of the fuel bed, the air most needed at that moment cannot as easily flow through it, and another part of the fuel bed should be left free for its passage at that time. When the fuel bed area is very large, some checkerboard system of firing may be adopted which, when alternately fired and left free for air passage, will result in a large reduction in the amount of smoke produced by the too common method of spreading the coal over the entire surface at each firing.

It must not be forgotten that a large supply of warm air is needed immediately after fresh fuel is spread over a part or all of the fuel bed; this is best supplied as just explained, but it may be advantageous to provide for still more air by leaving the fire doors open slightly just after each firing. There are several devices on the market which provide for an air supply over the fire, which are turned on with the opening or closing of the fire door, and which can be arranged to close at the end of any desired time, depending upon the rate of driving and frequency of firing found desirable. The firing of small amounts of coal at frequent intervals produces less smoke than firing large amounts at longer intervals. The latter method, however, usually proves less tiresome to the fireman and is for that reason more frequently adopted.

This is what one of our customers thinks of our valves:

Lincoln, Ill., January 8, 1906.

The John Davis Company, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.

COAL AT CHICAGO.

The Black Diamond, authority in its trade, says that "Chicago saw a congestion of coal for practically all of the winter up until two weeks ago, and then there was just enough cold weather to clean up the stocks on hand. Immediately the trade plunged into another period where the supply of coal is likely again to glut the market.

"Smokeless coal for the time being is comparatively firm, because the amount on hand has been reasonably well cleaned up. The recent cold snap caused some jobbers to telegraph to their producing companies to increase shipments into Chicago territory, and these are now on the way. In the meantime the weather has softened, limiting the demand. Lump and egg are scarce, but mine-run is comparatively plentiful. We quote f. o. b. Chicago: Standard New River and Pocahontas mine-run, $3.20 to $3.50; egg or lump, $3.80 to $4.05.

"Carterville coal, as far as shipments from the mines are concerned, is reasonably steady as to price. But some coal on track in Chicago has been sold at ridiculously low figures. One lot of 6-inch Carterville lump has been offered as low as $2.15 in Chicago, some of the cars offered being in transit. We quote f. o. b. the mines for Chicago delivery: Mine-run, 90 cents to $1; 1¼-inch screenings, 40 cents to 50 cents; lump or egg, $1.50 to $1.75.

"Brazil block, on account of the milder weather, is easier in tone, the demand in the country not being up to that of recent weeks. The Chicago price is still $2.95, with the country price holding at $3.05.

"Third Vein coal shows no change in prices. We quote f. o. b. the mines: Mine-run, $2; chunks, $2.25; standard lump, $2.15; washed nut, $2.15; screenings, $1.60."

USE OF CEMENT BLOCKS.

Cement blocks make the very best greenhouse wall, being warm, dry and strong. They require no paint or repairs, very little grout for foundation, and will last a lifetime if well made. As compared to the ordinary board wall of two thicknesses of 1-inch lumber, with paper between, the cost of the block wall is about three times as much, but after the wood wall has been replaced by a new one and both painted several times the cost is nearly as much, and more or less repairs will always be needed. The blocks also make excellent sheds, boiler-houses and office buildings, and at less cost than lumber or brick for such purposes.

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will you please inform me as to the latest date to disbud geraniums and get them in bloom for Memorial day?

C. R. Y.

Allow them a month from the final disbudding and they will be all right. I presume you refer to disbudding of the flower trusses. If topping or pinching the shoots is what you have in mind, discontinue it after the middle of March. If grown in an ordinary greenhouse, with a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, I hardly think you need have recourse to pinching out the flower trusses at all, from ordinary bedding geraniums.

THE READERS' CORNER.

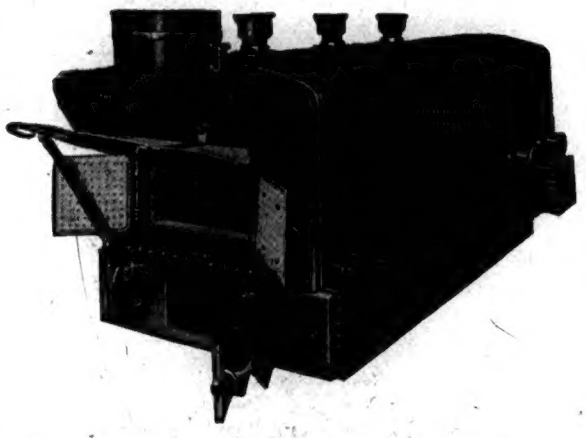
The Special Plant Rate.

I am sending a card recently received in a package of plants, which is the best idea that has been adopted by wholesale men; that is, of having the amount of express charges plainly marked on the package. In nine out of ten shipments received by me I have trouble with the express agent to get the special plant rate. It is easy to put "special rate" stickers on the packages, but no pains are taken to see that the packages are billed at the plant rate, so they are almost invariably sent at merchandise rates. The large houses are as much to blame as the smaller growers, who only have a small surplus to dispose of. One gets tired of continually having trouble with the express agent, while if the wholesale plantsmen would be a little more careful to see that the shipment was started right it would be avoided.

I should like to hear from some one that has tried the Washington red cedar for bench material as to its lasting qualities.

N. E. DeGolier.

The card referred to above was attached to a box sent out by McGregor Bros. Co., Springfield, O., and reads as follows:



"On account of the many complaints we have been receiving relative to excessive express charges and overcharges, and of the failure of many of our customers to receive the benefit of the special plant rate, we have made arrangements to have all of our shipments marked (on the tag) with the weight of the shipment and charges (special plant rate) to destination. If more than the amount marked is collected advise us, and if incorrect we will have it refunded. Billing clerks who mark shipments are well informed on plant rates, and we feel sure that very few mistakes, if any, will occur.

"Unless requested, we will not pack in baskets hereafter, but in light, ventilated, corrugated paper boxes, as plants in baskets are not subject now to the special plant rate, and in baskets are more subject to damage en route."

CYCAS REVOLUTA.

I have a Cycas revoluta which is dropping its leaves, and I should like to know what is the cause. Do the leaves drop naturally? Can the stem be started again, and if so, how and when and at what temperature? Or is the stem worthless?

A. D.

The leaves of Cycas revoluta do not drop naturally until they are several years old, and it would appear from the question that the crown of the plant has rotted. This may occur from the overwatering of a poorly rooted plant, combined with exposure to too low a temperature. An examination of the crown of the plant will soon prove whether this is the trouble or not, and if so there is no use in trying to start it again.

A proper temperature in which to start a dormant stem of cycas is about 65 degrees, but after the plant is well rooted and the leaves are fully developed, a temperature of 50 degrees will do no harm.

W. H. Taplin.

Being located in a good town only a four hours' run from two large wholesale markets, if the grower failed to sell all his stock locally could he always dispose of it profitably in the city markets?

G. M. F.

In the matter of marketing surplus stock in the large cities, you should remember that the time a grower for a local market has a surplus is the time when the wholesale growers for the big markets are in heaviest crop. It naturally follows that the time you have stock for the wholesale markets, you will find those markets most heavily supplied. Then, too, the wholesaler naturally feels that in times of glut his regular shippers, who supply him with the means of doing business in times of scarcity, should have the preference, and the occasional shipper therefore is not infrequently given the last chance at whatever demand there may be in times of oversupply.

DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS.

Please let me know how the following two problems are worked:

1. Two sides of a cabbage field are 75 rods and 60 rods long, respectively. They are parallel to each other, and are perpendicular to one end, which is 40 rods long? What is the area of the field in acres?

2. A ditch has been dug that is 6 feet wide at the bottom, 8 feet deep, and has side slopes of 1:1. What will the excavation cost per rod when the price is 8 cents a cubic yard?

J. K.

1. The area of the field is 16⅞ acres. The rule is: Multiply the length by the width (in rods) and divide the product by 160. When the opposite sides are unequal, add them, and take half the sum for the mean length or width.

2. The cost will be $5.47½ per rod. The method is as follows: As the slope of the sides is one foot to one foot, the top of the ditch will be wider than the bottom, two feet for each foot of depth. As the depth is 8 feet and the width at bottom 6 feet, the width at the top is 22 feet. The problem then becomes the computation of the areas of a parallelogram 6x8 feet and two right-angled triangles 8 feet on each side. As the two triangles are of the same size, we can reduce the computation to a space 8x14x 16½ feet and find that each rod of the ditch contains 1,848 cubic feet of soil, or 68.44 cubic yards. At 8 cents per yard, the cost is as stated above.

The Market.

There was a slight improvement in the movement of all kinds of stock last week, but prices remained about the same. Roses have increased in supply and have been well cleaned up every day. Carnations have been in heavy supply and quantities had to be sold at reduced prices. Sweet peas are in good supply and sell well at from 60 cents to $1. Violets suffered, it being impossible to move them. Tulips, daffodils and all kinds of bulb stock are coming in heavily and have cleaned up fairly well.

Various Notes.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in a fine cut of Bride, Maid and Richmond, which are picked up on sight. This firm's sweet peas are also fine.

Knoble Bros. have had a heavy run of funeral work the last few days.

C. A. Bramley, of Superior avenue, reports having had a large out-of-town funeral, which consumed quantities of violets, valley, etc.

Mike Bloy, formerly with J. M. Gasser Co., now foreman for Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, Ind., was a visitor Sunday and Monday, making short calls on his many friends here.

A. Graham & Son have been showing some beautiful windows of late, which attract a great deal of attention.

W. J. Kramer, of Rocky River, O., has been sending in a fine cut of carnations to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.
